TO ALL PERSONS WITH A LEGAL INTEREST IN THE PARCELS OF REAL PROPERTY DESCRIBED IN THE FOLLOWING DELINQUENT TAX LIST

A list of real property in Pennington County on which delinquent property taxes and penalties are due has been filed with the Court Administrator of Pennington County. This list is published to inform all persons that the listed property is subject to forfeiture [illegible].

The property owner, the taxpayer, or other interested person must either pay the tax and penalty, plus interest and costs, or file a written objection with the Court Administrator. The objection must be filed by April 10, 1997, stating the reason why the tax or penalty is not due on the property. If no objection is filed, a court judgment will be entered against the property for the unpaid tax, penalty, interest and costs.

For property under court judgment, the period of redemption begins on May 13th, 1997, and ends three to five years later, depending on the type of property and where it is located. The period of redemption means the time within which taxes must be paid to avoid losing the property through forfeiture.

To avoid forfeiture, taxes on property located within a township must be paid by May 13th, 2002. Taxes must also be paid by May 13th, 2002, if the property is one of the following types in a city: (1) residential homestead, (2) farm homestead, (3) private cabin, (4) resort occupied by the owner, and (5) resorts in operation for not more than 25 days a year. Payment of tax by May 8, 2000 is necessary to avoid forfeiture of any property in a city which is not described in the preceding sentence.

To determine how much interest and costs must be added to pay the tax in full, contact the Pennington County Auditor's Office, Pennington County Courthouse, P.O. Box 616, Thief River Falls, Minnesota 56701. The telephone number is 218-681-4011.

PROPOSED JOB TRAINING PLAN PROGRAM YEAR 1997 UPDATED VERSION

The proposed job training plan for program year 1997 describes the administration and program structure of the Job Training programs to be provided in Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau counties. These programs are created through the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) of 1982 and the Wagner Peyser Act. The JTPA programs are governed locally by the Northwest Private Industry Council as the representatives of the private sector and the local elected officials designated by their respective counties as the representatives of the public sector for the partnership.

The plan establishes the local goals and objectives in response to the Governor's Goals and Objectives. The plan emphasizes maximizing coordination of locally based employment and training programs, reducing the number of area residents dependent upon income maintenance programs, prioritizing functional literacy and transferable skills, increasing the effectiveness of public employment services for both employers and the general public, and improving the quality of placements obtained through all Job Service and JTPA employment and training programs. The Wagner - Peyser services are offered to all youth and adults and the Job Training Partnership Act programs are offered to economically disadvantaged youth and adults and dislocated workers.

The plan covers a JTPA allocation of $335,110 for adult and youth programs and an allocation of $332,682 for the Summer Youth Program and a Wagner-Peyser estimated allocation of $291,095.

The plan designates the Northwest Private Industry Council as the Administrative Entity and Grant Recipient for the JTPA funds in the seven county area. It designates the Minnesota Department of Economic Security as the Program Operator for the JTPA adult and out-of-school youth programs, and Inter-County Community Council as the Program Operator for the Summer Youth programs. The Job Services will continue to provide the Wagner-Peyser services programs through the Minnesota Department of Economic Security.

The plan will include a detailed description of the service system, administrative procedures, local services levels to population segment and budget breakdowns. The plan is written in response to requirements of the Job Training Partnership Act, The Wagner Peyser Act and the Governor's Job Training Council. Anyone wishing to comment on the plan should contact Bill Wiseherl by April 11, 1997, at the Crookston Workforce Center, Northwest Private Industry Council/Workforce Council Division, 721 South Minnesota, Crookston, MN 56716 or call 1-800-657-3791.

What's In and What's Out

by Naomi Kenner
grade 7

Is it in or out or just in between? This survey has the opinions on clothes, hair, jewelry and nail polish styles. See if you agree with the outcome.

- Boxers – 97% out of 34 people said boxers are IN. Joe Boxers are the most comfortable but any style will do. It's just underwear!
- Short Hair – Short hair is IN for the most part, depends on the style.
- Long Hair – Long hair is IN. Really long hair is OUT. Personally I think right now any "do" will do
- Baggy Jeans – Baggy jeans are IN. Medium and semi baggy also. Anything but tight and small will do.
- Baby Doll T-shirts – More people said OUT of style but they are still in. Just not too small of shirts.
- Dark nail polish – Dark nail polish is IN, but it's a nail polish craze right now so most tones are in. It depends on your personality.
- Jewelry – Jewelry is IN. Mainly funky rings and necklaces. Big and heavy jewelry is OUT.
- Tennis shoes – Tennis shoes are IN, Nike and Fila are the most popular. Far out and different colors and styles is what's in.
- Casual shoes – Casual is IN style from Vans to Boots. You can wear almost anything on your feet.
- Permed hair – Permed hair is definitely OUT of style. Big curls are okay but stay straight.

This survey was taken by Franklin Middle School staff and students. It's just the opinion of everyone, yours may be different as you can see none were unanimous.

NEW ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL AT FRANKLIN MIDDLE SCHOOL

grade 6

Mr. Bob Wayne is the new assistant to the principal at Franklin Middle School. He was recently interviewed by Cathy Erickson.

Cathy: How long have you been teaching in Thief River Falls?

Mr. W.: I graduated from Moorhead State in 1991 and have been long-term subbing at Franklin since.

Cathy: Why did you decide to be a teacher?

Mr. W.: I liked working with kids and had a good relationship with young people.

Cathy: What do you do on a regular day?

Mr. W.: I handle discipline in the school, attend various staffings, lunch duty, hall patrol, and provide extra leadership.

Cathy: What do you like about your job?

Mr. W.: I like the new challenge and leadership responsibilities that go along with the job.

Cathy: What is the best part of your job?

Mr. W: Praising kids for doing well.

Cathy: What is the hardest part of your job?

Mr. W.: Discipline of kids, especially the ones who really are trying hard to do well in school.

Cathy: Do you like being assistant principal or teaching better:

Mr. W.: Both. I deal with students all day long. The classroom can be interesting as can being assistant to the principal, my day isn't always planned like teachers.

Cathy: If you could change one thing about Franklin Middle School, what would it be?

Mr. W.: I would change the design of the building so that it is not so spread out.

Cathy: Tell me about your family.

Mr. W.: I have been married for eight years to Lynell. We have to daughters. Erica is seven and Erin is one and a half. We live on a farm south of Thief River Falls.

Patty: Where was the first town you taught in?

Lehrer: Goodridge in 1962-1964.

Patty: Have you ever had any other job, or is teaching all you've ever done?

Lehrer: Main career has always been teaching music, not the main thing, but will become the main thing is driving truck and farming.

This is an interview with Mr. Wayne, the vice-principal at Franklin Middle School. He was born in Thief River Falls in 1961 and is 35 years old. He works at this job because he loves kids. His favorite subject to teach is social studies.

Michael – Ages 13 and up. It's touching and funny at the same time.

Jack – Good for all ages. This movie is good for parents and children alike. I suggest you see it as a family.

The Nutty Professor – Ages 8 and up. Funny, yet stupid. But, you can't help but feel sorry for the guy.

Space Jam – Good for the younger audience, but you should sneak a peek at this film.

Bambi – Good for ages 1 to 100. It is a timeless classic, sure to melt your heart.

Phenomenon – Ages 10 and up. It is a sad movie, but you have to see it.

Ransom – For ages 13 and up. It always keeps you in suspense. I personally recommend this movie.

Jerry Maguire – Good for the older ages. It gives you a good idea of what the real world is like.

According to your seventh grade poll, in dead last came the movie, A Very Brady Sequel, BIG SURPRISE!!

A Very Brady Sequel – Well, like most sequels it is not as good as the first. (Two thumbs down).

The seventh graders chose Scream as the second best movie and the number one movie is Romeo and Juliet.

Scream – This movie is good for the more mature person and is a very intense film. Sure to make you jump.

Romeo and Juliet – The ages for this movie is 12 and up. This movie is a timeless, love story that will never go out of style.

SPEECH TEAM COMPETITIONS

by Maggie Stock
grade 6

Every Saturday, bright and early, the bus waits at Hardees for the speech kids.

The kids are dressed in their nice clothes and are all pumped up for the speech meet. Finally, we leave. On the bus the kids practice their speeches, some sleep, and some, well, they just talk.

Franklin's team goes with Lincoln's team. We have gone to four speech meets so far this year. They have been in Roseau, Bagley, East Grand Forks and Moorhead. We have come back with three first place trophies and one second place trophy. Many individuals have brought back many medals and ribbons, also.

Every week we sign up and practice, practice, practice. At the meet, there are three rounds of competition. We have about a half an hour break in between rounds. At the end of the three rounds we have about an hour or less until the awards are announced. Finally, we all go and sit down in the gym or auditorium and the host of the tournament names all the categories and who won a medal or ribbon. Then, finally, they announce who won overall the teams. There is always a lot of cheering and clapping. Then we get on the bus and go home. That's the end until the next Saturday and we do it all over again.

Opinion Column

by Alicia Peterson
grade 6

You know how a basketball player is known for how many baskets they make, but nobody realizes how important the guard is. They're the ones who get the ball, pass the ball and guard their opponent. Why aren't they known for how good they do those things! If it weren't for the guard, they would never get anywhere. How would the forward get the ball?

You know how the running backs are always known for how many touchdowns they make and how far the quarterback throws the ball, but nobody appreciates the offensive linemen who holds off the opponents so the quarterback can throw the ball to the running back and the running back can score a touchdown. So, without offensive linemen you'd have no touchdowns. So, it takes a team effort.

You might say, "My great, great, great grandpa was a man who shook the hand of the president." But you don't hear how your grandpa or grandma was a school teacher or a bartender, or a clerk at K-mart. Why is that? It's probably because people won't think "Wow, your grandparents are sure special." I think people should be known for anything they do, even if they aren't the top scorer in a game, or if they've never shaken the hand of the president.

Hall's Floral

by Philip Hoks
grade 6

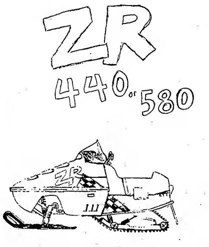
Hall's Floral is almost 50 years old. It has been at 217 East Third Street for almost 30 years. Jim Hoks has been with Hall's Floral for 25 years. He has owned Halls Floral by himself for the last 10 years. He and Bruce Hall co-owned Halls Floral for 10 years before that. Bruce Hall owned it before that. Bruce's father, Orrin, started Hall's Floral.

When Jim Hoks was interviewed, I asked him if Hall's Floral was moving. He said, "Yes, Hall's is moving in March. We will have the grand opening during holy week."

Where will Hall's Floral be from holly week and on? Mr. Hoks said it would be at 508 South Main, which used to be Caulfield Studios.

I asked him what are his future plans for Hall's Floral and he said, "I want to make the store more shopper friendly, things won't be so crowded in the new store and every thing will be on one level. It will also be easier for Hall's employees to work in the new shop."

I asked if he was pleased with his new store. He said, "Yes, it's a very nice store with good lighting and an interesting room layout. I think I will really like to work in the new store. I hope my employees and all the customers enjoy it, too."



Gym Uniforms at Franklin

grade 7

As I walked into gym class, I noticed a Prowler shirt and a pair of shorts taped to the window. I later found out that those items were uniforms for gym next year. Ms. Charlebois informed us about these uniforms. She said that the reason why they are coming into play is because there has been too much stealing of gym clothes. Since everyone will have their names printed on the front of the shirt and shorts, hopefully the stealing will stop.

As for support on this idea, Ms. Charlebois has a lot of it. Many schools around the area have tried out gym uniforms, and they have had nothing but success.

Gym uniforms are not final yet. If they later turn out to be a sure thing, they will be sold at the school store. Everyone will be required to purchase one. "Who knows," quotes Ms. Charlebois, "if gym uniforms go well, we may get a gym swimsuit!"

D.A.R.E.

by Lisa Carlson
grade 7

The seventh grade class had D.A.R.E. for two weeks in February. D.A.R.E. is Drug Abuse Resistance Education. It was taught by officers Craig Mattson and Deputy Ray Kuznia. They taught us the following ways to say "no" to drugs and alcohol: say "no thanks", give a reason or excuse, say no as many times as necessary, walk away, change the subject, avoid the situation, give the cold shoulder, and that there is strength in numbers, to stay in a group.

Opinion on Winter

grade 6

This is our opinion on this year's winter, and how it has affected both of us. Well, my opinion about this year's winter would be that it was very cold and miserable. I am glad that the winter is almost over. This winter there have been many things that have made it miserable, like the time I came home and the door was frozen shut. Also, a time I went sledding and I went down the hill and when I started coming back up I slipped and I fell all the way back down. But next year I am sure there will be a lot more Alberta clippers, blizzards, and just plain old cold days. -Ben

This is my opinion on this year's horrible winter. This winter has been a long and hectic season. To prove this, just go outside and take a look around you. You will probably see snow, snow and more snow. It doesn't help to have 50 below wind chills nipping at your nose. Also, I am getting sick and tired of always having to get my parents' car out of the ditch. Plus, living out in the country has some definite disadvantages, like huge drifts. The good part is that you get snowed in a lot. But I still hope that winter gets over with soon. -Nathan

Live and Learn and Pass it On

by Brittany Larson
grade 7

I don't know how many people have seen the book, Live and Learn and Pass it On, but it is a very special book to me. There is advice and bits of wisdom from people ages five to 95. Here are some favorites of mine:

- I've learned that people are about as happy as they decide to be. age 79
- I've learned that if love isn't taught in the home, it's difficult to learn it anywhere else. age 51
- I've learned that you shouldn't confuse a black crayon with a Tootsie Roll. age 10
- I've learned that the important thing is not what others think of me, but what I think of me. age 38
- I've learned that I am happy when I'm kind to others and unhappy when I'm not. age 88
- I've learned that although parents and elders may lecture and discipline you, you will later realize that it was because they cared.

The Internet

grade 7

People all over the world are going online to the Internet. It has connected people all over the world and is becoming more popular than ever. You can find anything on the Internet-sports, weather, news, technology, you name it. The Internet is also used for business, airplane tickets, or just plain surfin' the web. And there are thousands of web-sites just waiting for you to log into. For the game player fanatic you can even copy off games off the Internet. There are even different Internet groups like Excite of America Online. Here are just a few Internet web-sites: USA Today-www.usatoday.com; www.channelone.com; www.cnn.com; www.nintendo.com; www.dwango.com; www.ten.com; the last two are gaming groups that let you play people all over the country for a small fee per month.

Dear Ala

by Amber Ortiz

grade 8

Dear Ala: In school I try my hardest and still get C's and D's. What can I do?
- Hard worker

Dear Hard worker: A lot of people have the same problem. Yes, there is something you can do. You can talk to the school counselor and they might be able to get a tutor for you. Another possibility is to join peer tutoring. Talk to the teachers to see if they can give you help. And keep working hard.

Dear Ala: I always have trouble getting to class on time because they are far apart, do you have any ideas?
- Trying no to be late

Dear Trying: There are a couple things you could try to do so you won't be late to class. You could bring your materials that you need to the class before the class your always late to. Maybe try working a deal out with your teachers. Just walk fast.

Sports poll

grade 6

Sports are a very important thing to sixth graders because they provide things such as: exercising for a healthy body, building your self confidence, learning to work with others, and challenging yourself to improve. Out of 63 kids polled at Franklin Middle School, 62 said they liked sports and thought they were important, and only one said they didn't really like sports.

Gym class opinion

grade 8

I don't think we should have gym class. I think we should have gym class as an elective. We shouldn't have to have gym if we don't want to. Especially swimming. What is the point in having swim class when you already know how to swim. If I wanted to know more swimming techniques, I would join the swim team or something. That is my opinion on gym class.

Dear Bubba: I have a dog that is roughly a year old. Although he is a puppy I know there is a way to make him stop being a bad dog. He chews on everything and goes crazy inside the house. What can I do?
-Bonkers in TRF

Dear Bonkers: Get an electric dog collar with a remote.

Dear Bubba: What video game system should I buy, a Nintendo 64 or a Sony Playstation?
-Stumped in TRF

Dear Stumped: Perhaps you should go with an N64 because it's the cutting edge of modern systems. Also, its graphics are superior to the rest.

Places to Visit

by Ashley Hamre
and
grade 7

Valley Fair – A great place, with thrilling rides. If you go there be sure to watch the lazer shows.

Mall of America – A very large place. If you plan on going there, don't expect to just go in and out. While you're there be sure to sneak a peek at Knot's Camp Snoopy.

Como Zoo – A very fun place to take the whole family. The animals are just adorable.

Omni Theater – A great place. Be sure to visit when you're in the metro area

Buena Vista – A great ski resort with a variety of hills.

According to the seventh grade at Franklin Middle School, Valley Fair was our favorite place to visit in Minnesota and Buena Vista was our least favorite.

Brian Sturgeon

grade 6

We were at Eagle River, WI for snowmobile races. Brian Sturgeon was the champion last year and he might have a good chance this year. Brian Sturgeon is the best snowmobile racer in Minnesota. Before he came to Eagle River he had to work out so he wouldn't get tired of racing. He might race four times a day.

Racers have 25 laps on the large ice track. They go about 90 miles per hour on turns, on a full straight away they go about 100 miles per hour Now that's fast!!

The Monster

by Jessie Nelson
and
grade 7

It came when I was sleeping
without warning or a sign,
the body the monster had taken
would never again be mine.

It took me to it's lair
I almost went insane
for the place the monster had taken me
was a world of never-ending pain.

I started getting weaker
as the days went by
and I finally figured
by this monster I would die.

Right before I died
the monster grabbed tighter to me
and then he whispered in my ear,
"They call me HIV".

Chicago Bulls review

by Luke Goethe
grade 8

The Chicago Bulls are back after their fourth championship. They also have Jordan, Pippen, and Rodman for another year too. Dennis Rodman got suspended again by kicking a Minnesota cameraman in the groin. Michael Jordan has averaged 30.8 points per game and Pippen is doing good too

The Bulls have more than 50 wins and seven losses so I'd say they'll have their second season with 70 wins. If the Bulls want to win, first they have to tell Rodman to shape up. Second, the Bulls have to work the ball around until they get an open shot and take it.

This may be Jordan and Pippen's last year, so they have to get 70 wins and another championship. The bad part is there stuck with Rodman for another four years.

Lying there

by Angie McMahon
grade 8

He lay in the bed,
Dying in an awful way.
I went into see him,
He spoke to me and I didn't know what to say
He had IV's in his arms,
And a bed pan to go to the bathroom in
He looked like a balloon,
That was about to be popped with a pin
His face was as white as snow,
He looked like he arose from the dead
Purified water couldn't describe it,
My heart said as I watched him
Dying in the hospital bed,
His monitor stopped,
And we all started to grieve
With our heads hanging,
We got our coats to leave

The Monster

by Jessie Nelson
and Naomi Lawrence
grade 7

It came when I was sleeping
without warning or a sign,
the body the monster had taken
would never again be mine.

It took me to it's lair
I almost went insane
for the place the monster had taken me
was a world of never-ending pain.

I started getting weaker
as the days went by
and I finally figured
by this monster I would die.

Right before I died
the monster grabbed tighter to me
and then he whispered in my ear,
"They call me HIV".

Barbara: Val, do you like your job?

Val: Yes

Chicago Bulls review

by Luke Goethe
grade 8

The Chicago Bulls are back after their fourth championship. They also have Jordan, Pippen, and Rodman for another year too. Dennis Rodman got suspended again by kicking a Minnesota cameraman in the groin. Michael Jordan has averaged 30.8 points per game and Pippen is doing good too.

The Bulls have more than 50 wins and seven losses so I'd say they'll have their second season with 70 wins. If the Bulls want to win, first they have to tell Rodman to shape up. Second, the Bulls have to work the ball around until they get an open shot and take it.

This may be Jordan and Pippen's last year, so they have to get 70 wins and another championship. The bad part is there stuck with Rodman for another four years.

Lying there

by Angie McMahon
grade 8

He lay in the bed,
Dying in an awful way
I went into see him,
He spoke to me and I didn't know what to say.
He had IV's in his arms,
And a bed pan to go to the bathroom in
He looked like a balloon,
That was about to be popped with a pin.
His face was as white as snow,
He looked like he arose from the dead.
Purified water couldn't describe it.
My heart said as I watched him
Dying in the hospital bed.
His monitor stopped,
And we all started to grieve
With our heads hanging.
We got our coats to leave.

The Great Fire book review

by Anthony Wold
grade 6

I think the book The Great Fire is a great book because it tells about how the fire started in Mrs. O'Leary's barn. It tells how miles of wooden sidewalk it destroyed, and how many buildings and lives it claimed. Picures show how far the fire progressed during the nights. Fire proof buildings were left in ruins, steel and brick melting from the intense heat. People were trampled by horses and buggies. People in dead end allies were trapped, or forced to go into the cold, head high river; ships and fishing boats burst into flames from the blazing fire.

I would highly recommend this fascinating true story to anyone who wants to enjoy a good book.

Pee-Wee Hockey wrap-up

grade 7

This years Thief River Falls PeeWee A Hockey team is the most talented team since the 1990-91 hockey season. They didn't go to state, but they did okay in districts. The PeeWee A team surprisingly won the Ron Novak Memorial Hockey Tournament. They had good captains that would carry the team on their back in tough times. Brian Newton and Justin Barron were those great leaders and hauled this team through happy and difficult times. The PeeWee A teams hopes for regions were way up when they were ahead of Warroad 2-0 in the third period, but they lost 3-2 early into overtime.

Winter came too soon this year

by Katrina Johnson
grade 7

Winter came too soon this year,
Before we knew it the snow was here.
The first snow made the ground all white,
It sparkled and shined in the full moonlight,
But the snow kept coming day after day,
And soon we had lots of snow for play.
All this snow was really cool,
Cause we got lots of days off from school.
Now the days are getting longer,
And my thoughts about snow are getting stronger.
All this snow is kind of a bummer,
I am definitely ready for summer.

Behind the Bedroom Wall

grade 7

Behind the Bedroom Wall by Laura E. Williams is about a girl who lives in Germany during World War II. Korinna is a member of the Jungmadel, a Nazi youth group. Her job is to keep a little black notebook, and write down the names of people who are acting "un-German". When she finds out that her parents are sheltering Jews behind her bedroom wall, she is shocked. Korinna has to decide which is more important, to be loyal to Hitler and the Fatherland, or to stick up for her mother and father, and the frightened Jews she meets behind her bedroom wall.

Snow make-up days

grade 7

So far this year, the students in Thief River Falls have to make up for several school days that were missed because of blizzards. I don't think this would have happened if the schools were allowed more snow days. With our harsh winters, blizzards severe enough to cause school cancellations should be expected. Another way these make-up days could be avoided is by scheduling shorter holiday breaks. If they were changed from a week to three days long, that would give us two extra days in case we did go over our limit of snow days.

A letter of thanks

Dear readers,

This section of the paper is truly special. All of the writing and artwork was done by students at Challenger Elementacy School, St. Bernard's School, Our Saviour's Christian Academy and Franklin Middle School in conjunction with Newspapers in Education Week, March 3-7.

Newspapers in Education Week encourages teachers to use newspapers as a teaching tool. The Minnesota Newspaper Association lists several reasons why teachers should use newspapers. Newspapers make learning fun. Newspapers are a common community link. Newspapers help students understand freedom of the press and other rights guaranteed in the constitution. Newspapers can be clipped, pasted and filed.

Students at Challenger, St. Bernard's and Our Saviour's drew the pictures and wrote the copy for the advertisements. Students at Franklin wrote all the other copy in this section. They also pravided the artwork.

We are grateful to the advertisers who sponsored the paper. Without your backing, the paper would not be possible. We are also grateful for the teachers who encouraged their students to write or draw something for this special issue and helped us organize the praject.

Most of all, we want to thank the students who wrote stories and poetry and letters, took surveys, drew pictures, made puzzles and designed the advertisements. All of you did such excellent work. It was difficult to decide what would go in the paper. We wish we could have printed everything, but there just was not enough room. The ads which do not appear in the paper are posted at the place of business which they advertise. Be sure to stop by and take a look.

We hope that all of you will participate next year!

Sincerely,
Your friends

Following an investigation into a theft from Arctic Cat, Brian Scott Mills, 30, Thief River Falls, was taken into custody. Officials had confiscated clothing and other items from his house in Pennington County last Friday. As of Tuesday morning, law enforcement officials had estimated the theft loss from Arctic Cat at over $38,000.

Theft of merchandise from Arctic Cat exceeds $38,000

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Thirty-year-old Brian Scott Mills of Thief River Falls was taken into custody by law enforcement officials in Pennington county on Friday, March 28, following a joint investigation into thefts from Arctic Cat. Officials are alleging that Mills was in possession of stolen clothing and parts from the snowmobile manufacturer in Thief River Falls.

The case being developed against Mills originally stems from information from the Crookston police department. According to local authorities, the investigation began after a Crookston police officer became suspicious. Mills had allegedly offered to sell him leather snowmobile clothing for a very low price.

Following an investigation by the Thief River Falls Police and Pennington County Sheriff's departments, a search warrant was executed on Friday, March 28, at Mill's home located in North township in Pennington county. Officers discovered thousands of dollars of Arctic Cat merchandise. Items obtained in the search warrant included helmets, pencils, pens, shirts, shorts, jackets, boots, face masks, underwear, gloves, mittens, life jackets, kidney belts, gear bags, towels, thumb supports, and parts for a four-wheeler.

Mills was taken into custody on Friday, but was not expected to make his first appearance in Ninth District Court until Tuesday. Currently, Mills faces a charge of receiving stolen property, but that could change.

Officials from Arctic Cat spent the better part of the day on Monday and Tuesday looking at the merchandise and trying to establish a value. As of Tuesday morning, the total loss had been estimated at over $38,000 and was expected to climb even higher.

Officials with the sheriff's department and police department are still investigating the matter and are anticipating further charges to be placed against Mills in this incident and possibly other incidents.

Local officials are also asking that anyone who may have information about this case or who may have purchased items from Mills to contact them. According to Sheriff's Deputy Ray Kuznia, charges will not be filed against anyone who purchased Arctic merchandise from Mills if they allow law enforcement to check the validity of the sale.

"The Blenders" in concert at Lincoln

Under sponsorship of the Lincoln high school choirs, "The Blenders" quartet will present a concert Monday, April 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium.

Tickets are $10 each and are available in advance from Lincoln choir students and Kezar Music Company. They will also be available at the door.

"We've been influenced by just about every musical style around, from jazz and classical music to pop, rock, doo wop, hip hop and, of course, a cappella music," says bass Darren Rust, who makes up the group with his brother Alan, Ryan Lance and Tim Kasper, all from Fargo, ND.

Since they were in high school the group members have been using their voices to blend this varying musical influence into a style that has become uniquely their own. They have toured extensively and made guest appearances with Jay Leno, Howie Mandel and others.

"As long as it packs an effect, we'll sing it and blend it to make music everyone can relate to," Rust said. "That's what The Blenders are all about."

In 1994 and 1995 the group was winner of the Contemporary Artist of the Year Award from the National Association of Campus Activities. They have released two records on their independent hometown label, CowTown Records, as well as a self-titled third release on Orchard Lane, with which they signed in 1995.

"Don't miss this concert," urges Lincoln high school choir director Darcy Reese. "This group is hot!"

TRF speech team enters sub-section competition

Students to give speeches for public on April 10

Following a successful season of invitational contests, the Thief River Falls speech team will enter Sub-Section 8AA competition Thursday, April 3, in Moorhead. The team consists of 30 students from Lincoln senior high school, coached by Connie Stock, and 15 from Franklin middle school, coached by Diane Marshall.

Although practices began in December, the team officially began its tournament run on February 8 in Roseau with a first place team win. It placed second in the Bagley invitational on February 15 and first in the East Grand Forks invitational on February 22, then added an impressive first place team finish in the Moorhead invitational on March 1.

On March 8 in Park Rapids the team failed to place and in the March 15 meet at Fosston the individual team members collected two first places, a second and three thirds although no team trophies were awarded.

"Even though the numbers are down slightly from last year, the team has done exceptionally well," coach Connie Stock said. "Sub-Section competition will include two members—from the Franklin team who competed at the varsity level all season—Heidi Young in Extemporaneous Reading and Gabrielle Lee in Great Speeches—in addition to the Lincoln team."

Sub-Section competition Thursday includes teams from Moorhead, Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls, Thief River Falls, Bemidji and Alexandria. The top six winners in each individual category will advance to Section 8AA competition on Friday, April 11, at St. Cloud Apollo, competing with teams from both the north and south part of the region. The top two speakers from each category at the Section 8AA meet will qualify for state competition April 18 in Shakopee.

Students on the speech team compete in one of 13 categories including interpretation events in humor, prose, poetry, drama and drama duo, extemporaneous events in storytelling, speaking, reading and discussion, and original speeches to inform, original oratory, creative expression and great speeches.

Anyone who is interested in hearing these speakers is invited to a parent/community night on Thursday, April 10, at 7 p.m. A schedule of time and place for individual speakers will be posted in the drama room.

"You will hear speakers who are not only excellent in their individual events, but who have gained poise and confidence through their speaking experiences," Mrs. Stock said.

Lincoln bands in concert Tuesday

Lincoln high school concert band and wind ensemble will present their third concert of the year on Tuesday, April 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln auditorium. The bands are under the direction of Instrumental music instructor Brice Felt and the concert is free and open to the public.

Retiring Franklin middle school band director Mike Lehrer will be guest conductor of the concert band in its final number—a medley of Civil War songs entitled "The Blue and the Gray."

"I wanted to do something special to thank Mike for the years of service to this community and for the past eight years of help and friendship to me," Felt said. "I can think of no better way to say thanks than to let him make some music with many of his former students."

"This is the part of the year where the payoff from all the hard work is really noticeable," Felt said about his bands. "The improvement of both bands will be very obvious at this concert. The difficulty of the repertoire has increased as has the maturity with which each band performs."

The concert band will open the concert with a rousing piece entitled "Rondo," followed by "Deo Gratias," a theme and variations that requires a bit of everything from the band, including singing.

Next will be a medley familiar to all the Star Trek fans in the audience, "Star Trek: Through the Generations." Director Felt will then turn his baton over to Lehrer to direct "The Blue and the Gray."

The wind ensemble will open its portion of the program with a march recognized as one of the greatest of all time, entitled "Americans We." The second song, "An Irish Tune From County Derry," is considered one of the most beautiful settings of "Danny Boy" ever written. Closing number is a band "tour de force" called "Sinfonia Nobilissima."

"This concert shows all of the strengths of our young musicians," director Felt said. "It has the precision of a march, the emotion of "Danny Boy" and the sheer power and technique of a classic band overture.

"And this will not be the last concert of the school year," Felt added. "Both bands plus the jazz band will return on May 13 for the grand finale to another great year of band."

Wind Ensemble Members

Laugherobics show serious side of humor

"A chuckle a day keeps the doctor away." That corruption of a saying attributing good health to apple consumption is used as a basis for a session on "laughaerobics" Wednesday, April 9, at 2 p.m. in the Northwest Grain meeting room in St. Hilaire.

Minnesota Extension Service is sponsoring the session "Jest for the Health of It...Laughaerobics" with Karyn Santl, extension educator and humorist from Roseau county, as the presenter.

"By experiencing Laughaerobics you'll learn how to develop the ability to see the absurdity in difficult situations and develop the ability to take yourself lightly while taking your work seriously," Santl says.

General consensus is that people who have joy in their lives are more likely to feel good about themselves and that having a sense of humor helps people cope with stress. But there is also a growing body of scientific evidence that humor and laughter benefit health in measurable ways.

According to Santl, laughter is important in all aspects of life, but especially at work. "It can boost morale at work and help to communicate serious messages with a light touch," she said.

Santl will also show in her presentation that laughter at home is an effective and fun way to "reach out and touch someone."

While the April 9 meeting is part of the Pennington County Home Study group's monthly lesson topics, the general public is encouraged to attend the session, which is free of charge.

For more information contact the Minnesota Extension Service in Pennington county at 681-2116 on the Thief River Falls exchange or call toll-free at 1-800 681-2116.

50 donate blood at St. Hilaire Lions drive

Bruce Skalsky, president of the St. Hilaire Lions club, reports that 59 people volunteered to donate blood and 50 were able to give at the blood drive sponsored by the club in St. Hilaire March 24. Thirteen of the donors gave blood for the first time.

Bev Willits, community relations representative of United Blood Services, said "This is a clear example of concerned people in this area responding unselfishly to a great need—the need for blood. You can all feel proud that these volunteer donors are your friends and neighbors."

Others who assisted with the drive were Robert Wald, Ron Anderson, Tom Scholin, Bill Sylvester and Lloyd Noreen. Bernard Huot of the St. Hilaire Community Club provided refreshments and space to hold the drive.

Willits said the donations will help meet the blood needs of many patients in more than 46 hospitals served by United Blood Services.

Senior Linkage Line provides information to assist seniors

What can a person do who lives far away from this area, has parents here who need help and doesn't know what services are available? Start with the Senior Linkage Line—1-800-333-2433.

"Whether you are near or far, the Senior Linkage Line is here to help you find the services that are needed to keep your parents independent and living in their own homes," states Rose Carriere, program assistant with the Northwest Area Agency on Aging headquartered at the Northwest Regional Development Commission office in Warren.

"Betty was home visiting her parents during Easter," Carriere said. "She lives in Mankato while her parents live in northwestern Minnesota. During her visit she became concerned about changes in them. Her mom was becoming forgetful and her dad's hearing wasn't good. They seemed to have a hard time maintaining their home."

The Senior Linkage Line was able to answer some of Betty's questions by providing telephone numbers and assistance with contacting service providers. Her parents are now receiving services that help them remain independent and active.

The Senior Linkage Line is a service of the Minnesota Board on Aging and the Northwest Area Agency on Aging. For more information contact the Northwest Area Agency on Aging, 115 South Main, Suite I, Warren, MN 56762 or call 218-745-6733 or the Senior Linkage Line at 1-800-333-2433.

Laugherobics show serious side of humor

"A chuckle a day keeps the doctor away." That corruption of a saying attributing good health to apple consumption is used as a basis for a session on "Laugherobics" Wednesday, April 9, at 2 p.m. in the Northwest Grain meeting room in St. Hilaire.

Minnesota Extension Service is sponsoring the session "Just for the Health of It...Laugherobics" with Karyn Sandl, extension educator and humorist from Roseau county, as the presenter.

"By experiencing Laugherobics you'll learn how to develop the ability to see the absurdity in difficult situations and develop the ability to take yourself lightly while taking your work seriously," Sandl says.

General consensus is that people who have joy in their lives are more likely to feel good about themselves and that having a sense of humor helps people cope with stress. But there is also a growing body of scientific evidence that humor and laughter benefit health in measurable ways.

According to Sandl, laughter is important in all aspects of life, but especially at work. "It can boost morale at work and help to communicate serious messages with a light touch," she said.

Sandl will also show in her presentation that laughter at home is an effective and fun way to "reach out and touch someone."

While the April 9 meeting is part of the Pennington County Home Study group's monthly lesson topics, the general public is encouraged to attend the session, which is free of charge.

Good jobs available in aviation industry again

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Northwest Airlines representatives interviewed 72 past and present Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) aviation students for jobs last weekend in Thief River Falls. Job opportunities in the airline industry are almost unlimited right now, especially for mechanics.

Chad Lueken, Northwest Airlines representative, said the job market in the airline industry is very cyclical because it is influenced by many factors, including fuel prices, fare sales, and contract negotiations. Right now, there is a big demand for just about any position in the airline industry.

Lucken said he had a very good impression of NCTC students. A high percentage made it through the technical screening process. That has a lot to do with the school, he said. He noted that the school has excellent facilities and a Northwest Airlines 727 in a hangar to work on.

Lucken said he had been to other campuses as well. In Minnesota he had visited the Minneapolis Community Technical College, and Winona Technical College. Lucken noted that Northwest Airlines is not alone in its search for individuals to fill needed positions with the company.

Lucken didn't say how many individuals were being sought by Northwest Airlines, but noted that it was widely understood that other airlines were also hiring. Leuken said Northwest Airlines is offering very competitive wages and benefits.

The students being interviewed last weekend received an introduction to Northwest Airlines, its mission and goals, and then were required to take a proficiency test and go through a personal interview.

Knowledge and proficiency are a must, but one of the most important things they were looking for, was whether the applicants have a good work ethic and would fit into the mission and goals of Northwest Airlines.

Some of the individuals being interviewed included past students. NCTC keeps in touch with its students and provides some job placement services. Currently, there are 62 students enrolled in the aviation program at NCTC. The facility, located at the Regional Airport in Thief River Falls, features 86,000 square feet of training area and state-of-the-art equipment. Aircraft used by the Aviation Training Center includes a Boeing 727-100 commercial aircraft, 11 fixed-wing reciprocating engine aircraft, two turbo prop aircraft, two jet aircraft, six helicopters and five engine test cells.

Northwest Airlines is the fourth largest airline in the world. It began operation in October 1926 by flying mail between Minneapolis and Chicago. It now has hub city locations in Minneapolis, Detroit, Memphis and Tokyo. Worldwide, it has more than 45,000 employees, serves 390 cities in 80 countries on six continents including North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia.

The Heritage Center takes time to honor its volunteers

The Heritage Center of Thief River Falls will be honoring its volunteers on April 16 at a volunteer appreciation banquet as part of its 10th anniversary celebration.

April 14-18 is National Volunteer Appreciation Week. With over 150 volunteers, the Heritage Center definitely has something to be celebrating. Without the participation of all the volunteers, the Center would not be able to survive.

Volunteers are all headed by the Heritage Board, which is a group of volunteers who oversee the operations at the Center. President is Ray Johnson, Vice-president is Edna Rondorf, secretary is Agnes Jenson and treasurer is Jean Hellie.

Jean has been treasurer for approximately 10 years. She was treasurer before the center opened and then stepped back for a few years before taking on the role again. The treasurer is the only role that is indefinite, as long as the person wants the position they can have. The others must be voted on every year.

There are only four paid employees at the Heritage Center. Shannon Olson, director of the center, is paid in half by the center and the other half by Lutheran Social Services.

Lutheran Social Services (LSS) is in charge of the nutrition council and oversees them. LSS employs two cooks and a substitute cook. The other paid employee is Arlene Silk, who is a Green Thumb worker.

Green Thumb employees persons 55 and older part-time in non-profit organizations.

> "Without people giving, doing, sharing, singing, helping, laughing and driving what a dissmal place it would be." – Shannon Olson, director of the Heritage Center.

Everyone else that is involved in the Heritage Center is a volunteer. 55-Alive courses that are offered at the center are done by Ken Murphy, who volunteers his time to the seniors. Bingo, dances, choir, senior circle, jam sessions, and whist are all run by volunteers. Pine to Prairie donates time to the seniors every week for blood pressure checks.

Every volunteer is important to the center no matter how many or how little hours they put in. One person that only donates three hours to the center is just as important as the person who donates 300.

The majority of the volunteers are seniors themselves, but there are a large share of younger volunteers. The Lincoln honor students volunteer time to help serve meals. There are also individuals on work release that put time into helping out at the center. There are several stay-at-home moms who help deliver meals during the day once or twice a week. It gives them something to do and help others at the same time.

The Heritage Center totally depends on volunteers. Every single volunteer at the center is greatly appreciated. "These are all of the people who have been very instrumental in getting the Heritage Center started and in keeping a quality program going for the last 10 years," commented Shannon Olson.

"April 14 through 18 is Volunteer Appreciation Week so we praise, honor and thank our volunteers for all their hard work and dedication in making our world a better place for all of us. Please remember to say thank-you to a volunteer that has been an important part of your life and maybe the the time is right to look at becoming a volunteer yourself," added Shannon.

The Heritage Center surely would not be where it is today without all of the wonderful volunteers who have helped to make it what it is and who help keep it going.

Poet's night at the Roseau Public Library April 10

From 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, April 10, a special event is planned at the Roseau Public Library. "Poets' Night at the Library Coffee House" will feature readings by John Minczeski, a Minnesota poet who will be writer in residence at Roseau School that week. For 21 years Minczeski, a professor at Hamline University, has been associated with Compass, a program that sends writers into Minnesota schools. "Gravity" is his most recently published collection of poems.

The public is welcome to attend from 7 to 8 p.m. when Minczeski will read some of his work, tell about his work with students and possibly call on a few RHS students to read poems they have written during his stay.

Listeners will be admitted free as usual, but those who wish to visit the refreshment table for coffee or cider and a slice of cheesecake with a choice of toppings must have tickets. Tickets are $1 for students, $2 for adults are available at the library until noon, April 9.

Following the public readings, Minczeski will stay on with participants of Roseau Area Writers' Workshop who wish to linger at the "coffee house" until 9 p.m. He will share his ideas about "making language sing and say more. . . through figurative language - metaphor, simile, imagery, irony - techniques that were used long before the invention of writing." During his five-day residency, the visiting poet likes to show students how to create surprise, imagery and rhythm in their poems. He is convinced that anyone can start making poems and that use of the basic tools of poetry will lead to poems of "some complexity and delight." Minczeski's residency is funded in part by the Minnesota legislature through Compass.

Guidelines for the second issue of Regional Ramblings, slated for early October printing, will be available. Deadlines will be earlier this year. Prose, poetry and drawings are now being accepted for consideration by the selection committee. Any resident of Roseau county or reader of the Times Region, 16 years or age or older may enter original work.

At the May 8 session of RAWW, participants may request critiquing of their own manuscripts. No matter what the purpose for writing prose or poetry, writers can benefit from group reactions to any work they wish to share. Friendly, constructive criticism (by individuals or by the group) will be available for those who bring along a short manuscript, either poetry or prose, preferably typed and double spaced. Anyone who enjoys working with words or improving his or her writing style is welcome to attend.

Vern Sutton to sing in Red Lake Falls April 3

On Thursday, April 3, 7:30 p.m., Vern Sutton returns to Red Lake Falls to present his second song recital. Promising another eclectic program of songs from "Opera to Opry", Sutton has chosen songs that he enjoys, with the intent that there will be something for everybody. This year's recital will be held at the Red Lake Falls Community Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Sutton has arranged this year's program around five themes: Music, Women, Men, Cities, and Animals. Performing five songs on each topic, each song, though often drastically different in style from another, weaves a tapestry as it explores the particular theme topic.

Vern Sutton is a very entertaining performer. He is currently the director of the School of Music at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, where for 28 years he has been a faculty member and overseen the opera program. He holds both a Ph.D. in musicology and an honorary D.M.A.

A free reception will be held after the performance with bars, fruit, punch and coffee. Tickets are $4 for individuals and $10 for families.

ON MY MIND

Kim Chadwick-Quade

A Toy Story

The whine can probably be heard all the way to Fargo. "Mom, I don't have anything to play with. I don't have any toys!"

Nothing to play with. Where have I heard that before? Certainly not at my house where walking into my 6-year-old son's bedroom is like seeing a Toys R Us store after an earthquake. Just getting to the dresser is a task that requires expert balance so as not to impale a stocking foot on a Lego, toy airplane or action figure.

It seems as if my 6-year old has a one-track mind and it's tuned to toys.

I try to avoid taking my son on any kind of shopping trip because he always finds the toys, even in a place that really doesn't sell toys like convenience and grocery stores.

When we go to a discount store we have to look at the toys in each and every aisle – not less than twice. I shift from leg to leg impatiently as he takes stock of the Matchbox cars, action figures and anything that beeps, honks or flashes. He shows me what's extremely "cool" and what's not.

What's cool for him is any toy that looks or acts like a Batman; he's a Batman maniac. He's yearned for the Batmobile, Batplane, Batboat, Skybat, the Batcave (which he'll never own) and an assortment of Batman action figures.

Whenever my son collects $6 he immediately begs to buy a Batman – or a "guy" as they're referred to in the special world of 6-year-olds. The action figures are all impressive looking and come with a variety of accouterments like weapons, capes and masks (items so small they usually find a home in the vacuum cleaner bag).

For the last two years, my son has definitely been in the Batman phase. He recently asked me: "Mom, will I still like Batman when I'm 7?"

I think so, but I do see him branching out. He wants what his cousins and friends have and what's advertised on the television commercials. For the last week he's been carrying around an ad from the Sunday newspaper showing a slick photo of a mega-something-or-other which costs only $35 – a pittance to a 6-year old. He's requested this for his next birthday – which is only six months away.

In case he doesn't receive it as a gift he devised Plan B. He told me he'll save all of his money; he'll help grandma with the laundry and pick up her twigs (for quarters, of course) but he won't scoop dog poop (that's grandpa's job, he says). I know he'll change his mind at least 100 times before his birthday actually arrives, but toys will be at the top of the wish list.

His current toy collection, however, is not limited to Batman, but contains a variety of moving vehicles, building materials, items from the latest popular movies, prizes from kids' meals at fast-food restaurants, trinkets from carnivals and games, and stuff from the dollar store.

About every other month my husband takes a garbage bag into my son's bedroom and cleans out the toys which have lost parts, those that were junk to begin with and anything which doesn't serve a useful purpose. My son never notices when these items have gone to garbage heaven. His closet and shelves are still full of toys; they seem to reproduce themselves when we're not looking.

And even though his bedroom is a major obstacle course, strewn with his six-year collection of toys, it's a shame that he doesn't have anything to play with.

Johnsons share experiences from visit to Panama

The following Thursday, Gretchen Mehmel and Jeff Birchem will present "The Rain Forest of Ecuador". On April 17, Bob Bergland will show a video of The Lewis and Clark Trail and tell of their experiences traveling that historic route in August of 1996. The concluding program will feature "Backpacking in the Grand Canyon" with Joe and Teresa Mc Donnell.

Librarian Chuck Erickson will arrange book displays. He joins Roseau Area Friends of the Library in reminding patrons that "there is always more to explore at your library."

Seating and serving of beverages and goodies begin at 11:45 a.m. Viewers may bring bag lunches to eat during the presentation. Admission is free. Roseau Area Friends of the Library will welcome donations to benefit the library.

The public is encouraged to come early enough to see the April Art Exhibit in the library - drawings and clay work by Karen Engevick and her daughter Amy Adkins. Friends suggest that you allow yourself time to check out a book or two from the library, buy a book or bagful from the huge selection of used books on sale in the lobby. Copies of "Up Home - Land and the People" will also be for sale ($18 tax included).

While in the building, why not step in and see what is new in the Roseau County Museum.

> "Without people giving, doing, sharing, singing, helping, laughing and driving what a dismal place it would be." – Shannon Olson, director of the Heritage Center

Everyone else that is involved in the Heritage Center is a volunteer. 55 Alive courses that are offered at the center are done by Ken Murphy, who volunteers his time to the seniors. Bingo, dances, choir, senior circle, jam sessions, and whist are all run by volunteers. Pine to Prairie donates time to the seniors every week for blood pressure checks.

Every volunteer is important to the center no matter how many or how little hours they put in. One person that only donates three hours to the center is just as important as the person who donates 300.

The majority of the volunteers are seniors themselves but there are a large share of younger volunteers. The Lincoln honor students volunteer time to help serve meals. There are also individuals on work release that put time into helping out at the center. There are several stay-at-home moms who help deliver meals during the day once or twice a week. It gives them something to do and help others at the same time.

The Heritage Center totally depends on volunteers. Every single volunteer at the center is greatly appreciated. "These are all of the people who have been very instrumental in getting the Heritage Center started and in keeping a quality program going for the last 10 years," commented Shannon Olson.

"April 14 through 18 is Volunteer Appreciation Week so we praise, honor and thank our volunteers for all their hard work and dedication in making our world a better place for all of us. Please remember to say thank-you to a volunteer that has been an important part of your life and maybe the the time is right to look at becoming a volunteer yourself," added Shannon.

The Heritage Center surely would not be where it is today without all of the wonderful volunteers who have helped to make it what it is and who help keep it going.

Vern Sutton to sing in Red Lake Falls April 3

On Thursday, April 3, 7:30 p.m., Vern Sutton returns to Red Lake Falls to present his second song recital. Promising another eclectic program of songs from "Opera to Opry", Sutton has chosen songs that he enjoys, with the intent that there will be something for everybody. This year's recital will be held at the Red Lake Falls Community Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Sutton has arranged this year's program around five themes: Music, Women, Men, Cities, and Animals. Performing five songs on each topic, each song, though often drastically different in style from another, weaves a tapestry as it explores the particular theme topic.

Vern Sutton is a very entertaining performer. He is currently the director of the School of Music at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, where for 28 years he has been a faculty member and overseen the opera program. He holds both a Ph.D. in musicology and an honorary D.M.A.

A free reception will be held after the performance with bars, fruit punch and coffee. Tickets are $4 for individuals and $10 for families.

Poet's night at the Roseau Public Library April 10

From 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, April 10, a special event is planned at the Roseau Public Library. "Poets' Night at the Library Coffee House" will feature readings by John Minczeski, a Minnesota poet who will be writer in residence at Roseau School that week. For 21 years Minczeski, a professor at Hamline University, has been associated with Compass, a program that sends writers into Minnesota schools. "Gravity" is his most recently published collection of poems.

The public is welcome to attend from 7 to 8 p.m. when Minczeski will read some of his work, tell about his work with students and possibly call on a few RHS students to read poems they have written during his stay.

Listeners will be admitted free as usual, but those who wish to visit the refreshment table for coffee or cider and a slice of cheesecake with a choice of toppings must have tickets. Tickets are $1 for students, $2 for adults are available at the library until noon, April 9.

Following the public readings, Minczeski will stay on with participants of Roseau Area Writers' Workshop who wish to linger at the "coffee house" until 9 p.m. He will share his ideas about "making language sing and say more . . . through figurative language - metaphor, simile, imagery, irony - techniques that were used long before the invention of writing." During his five-day residency, the visiting poet likes to show students how to create surprise, imagery and rhythm in their poems. He is convinced that anyone can start making poems and that use of the basic tools of poetry will lead to poems of "some complexity and delight." Minczeski's residency is funded in part by the Minnesota legislature through Compass.

Guidelines for the second issue of Regional Ramblings, slated for early October printing, will be available. Deadlines will be earlier this year. Prose, poetry and drawings are now being accepted for consideration by the selection committee. Any resident of Roseau county or reader of the Times Region, 16 years of age or older may enter original work.

At the May 8 session of RAWW, participants may request critiquing of their own manuscripts. No matter what the purpose for writing prose or poetry, writers can benefit from group reactions to any work they wish to share. Friendly, constructive criticism (by individuals or by the group) will be available for those who bring along a short manuscript, either poetry or prose, preferably typed and double spaced. Anyone who enjoys working with words or improving his or her writing style is welcome to attend.

ON MY MIND

Kim Chadwick-Quade

A Toy Story

The whine can probably be heard all the way to Fargo. "Mom, I don't have anything to play with. I don't have any toys!"

Nothing to play with. Where have I heard that before? Certainly not at my house [illegible] my 6-year-old son's bedroom is like seeing a Toys R Us store after an earthquake. Just getting to the bed is a task that requires expert balance so as not to trip [illegible] foot on a [illegible] action figure.

It seems as if my 6-year-old has a one-track mind and it's tuned to toys.

I try to avoid taking my son on any kind of shopping trip because he always finds the toys, even in a place that really doesn't sell toys like convenience and grocery stores.

When we go to discount stores we have to look at the toys in each and every aisle – not less than twice. I shift from leg to leg impatiently as he takes stock of the Matchbox cars, action figures and anything that beeps, honks or flashes. He shows me what's extremely "cool" and what's not.

What's cool for him is any toy that looks or acts like a Batman – he's a Batman maniac. He's saved for the Batmobile, Batplane, Batboat, Skybat, the Batcave (which he'll never own) and an assortment of Batman action figures.

Whenever my son collects $1 he immediately begs to buy a Batman – or a "guy" as they're referred to in the special world of 6-year-olds. The action figures are all impressive looking and come with a variety of accouterments like weapons, capes and masks (items so small they usually find a home in the vacuum cleaner bag).

For the last two years, my son has definitely been in the Batman [illegible] asked me [illegible] Batman [illegible]

[illegible] the television commercials [illegible] the last week he's [illegible] something or other [illegible] He's requested this for [illegible] which is only six [illegible]

[illegible] doesn't receive it as a [illegible] He told me [illegible] all of his money he'll [illegible] with the laundry and [illegible] quarters of [illegible] but he won't scoop dog [illegible] he says. [illegible] changed his mind at [illegible] times before his birthday [illegible] but toys will be at the top of the wish list.

His current toy collection [illegible] not limited to Batman but [illegible] variety of [illegible] building materials, items from the latest popular movies, prizes from kids meals at fast food restaurants, trinkets from carnivals and [illegible] and stuff from the dollar store.

About every other month my husband takes a garbage bag into my son's bedroom and cleans out the toys which have lost parts, those that were junk to begin with and anything which doesn't serve a useful purpose. My son never notices when these items have gone to [illegible] heaven. His closet and shelves are still full of toys. They seem to reproduce themselves when [illegible] looking.

And even though his bedroom is a [illegible] obstacle course, strewn with his six-year collection of toys, it's a shame that he doesn't have anything to play with.

The concluding program will feature "Backpacking in the Grand Canyon with Joe and Teresa McDonnell.

The public is encouraged to come early enough to see the April Art Exhibit in the library – drawings and clay work by Karen Engevick and her daughter Amy Adkins. Friends suggest that you allow yourself time to check out a book or two from the library, buy a book or [illegible] from the huge selection of used books on sale in the lobby. Copies of "Up Home - Land and the People" will also be for sale ($18 tax included).

While in the building, why not step in and see what is new in the Roseau County Museum.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Jenna Tsukichi
Lincoln High School

As this year's speech season charges towards the finish line, I find that many decisions have to be made in order for me to compete in Sub-sections. Many hard decisions go into speech. For instance, one of the most important early decisions is deciding what category to enter.

In speech competition, there are about a dozen categories. Between humorous, serious prose, drama, storytelling, extemporaneous speaking, extemporaneous reading, discussion, dramatic duo, poetry, creative expressions, original oratory, informative speaking, and great speeches, it's not an easy decision to make.

To some people, speech might seem like an easy thing to do, but it's not. Take, for instance, my category, creative expressions. My speech is about a girl, Shyna, who has multiple personality disorder. She thinks she has a sister, Kat. Her parents tell her she doesn't have a sister. Shyna thinks they are trying to hide Kat in an asylum. Then Shyna blames her mother for keeping her away from her sister.

Throughout my speech, Kat appears. As the audience finds out in the end of my speech, Kat and Shyna are the same person. It's not easy giving a speech like that. Many hours of practice go into preparing for the meets throughout the year.

Speech isn't just a fun thing to do after school, however. It's a good experience as well. I know it will leave a big impression on my life. It's helped me to understand that I can express myself without feeling like a zit that must be terminated by prom. It has helped build my self-esteem, and I've met so many wonderful people at each meet. I've also had the chance to get to know my teammates a little more.

Each time I go into the drama room for speech practice I hear my teammates giving an assortment of speeches ranging from a psychotic guy who thinks his room at a mental institution is really an apartment building, to speeches about chicken, goose, hen, and fox suing each other in court. For me, speech is the candy on the counter, waiting for some little kid to grab it. I'm the kid who seizes the opportunity to snatch the candy and enjoy. It's the one way I can express myself without feeling foolish (however, I usually express myself regardless of where I am).

Now that I think about it, that's probably why I am in speech. I'm in it to express myself to others. In one of the categories I wrote my own script, and I found that I could express myself. As I described earlier, my speech is kind of crazy, and even though some people feel they have to check to make sure my sanity is still intact after hearing it, I still feel comfortable giving my speech the way I do.

I never realized what I could do until I joined speech in eighth grade. I knew I talked a lot and that I like to use my hands when I spoke, but I never really gave speech a thought until one of my friends encouraged me to in. Now, no one can tease me about the amount of times I flail my hands or arms.

Speech has been an incredible experience for the last four years. I have one year left before I graduate, and I'm already making plans about my next creative expressions speech. I don't know what I am going to do yet, but I know that I'll have fun and enjoy it.

PARENTING TIPS

"Difficult" Times With Children

Research has shown that children are more frequently frustrated in the late morning and late afternoon periods. This has been associated with hunger, tiredness and illness. If your child becomes "difficult" at the same time each day, you may wish to rearrange the family's schedule to eliminate or reduce the fussy period. Schedules can be rearranged in many ways.

- Changing mealtimes.
- Providing snacks.
- Changing sleeping or napping times.
- Instituting a quiet time.
- Omitting, rescheduling or reducing housecleaning, cooking simpler meals and freezing them, etc. (and spending more time with your child).

When you are looking for ways to restructure time, determine what the underlying needs for you and your family are and then generate as many ways as possible to meet these needs.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk to your child about what will happen next, for instance, "After playing we will have snacks." Sometimes a child's fussy time can be reduced if he or she knows what will happen next.

SPEAKING OF

Sherry LaCoursiere

...A Rumor Around Town

Rumor has it that there is something a foot in downtown TRF, or rather, underfoot in downtown TRF, or better yet, not underfoot in TRF. What is going on is a campaign to have business people clean up in front of their businesses so there won't be so much nasty stuff underfoot in the gutters or on the sidewalks and curbs of the downtown area.

This is a wonderful idea. Maybe Thief River Falls will become known as one of the cleanest little towns around - wouldn't that be great? No more rubbish blowing around town - no more empty drink containers or hamburger packages in the gutters - no more candy wrappers or pop cans on sidewalks - no more broken glass bottles left over from the weekend lying in the streets - no more old newspapers caught in the shrubbery - no more cigarette butts stuck in the cracks in the sidewalk. This could really make our city look good.

Not only would picking up the trash make the city look good, but it might have a good effect on the people around town. Picking up the trash and making the downtown look nice might make those who like to drop the trash around stop and think before they toss away that paper, pop can or plastic junk. They might actually feel somewhat guilty if they toss their rubbish in the middle of the street and might just hold on to it until they reach one of the numerous trash cans around town.

Rumor also has it that this clean up campaign is not only unique in that it is going to be undertaken by all the businesses in downtown TRF, but that it is going to involve the business owners as well as the employees. Yes, as a show of unity and solidarity, as well as regard for the appearance of our fair city, the downtown businessmen and women will be taking turns with their employees to pick up junk in front of their businesses every day.

NO DELEGATING is the word - everyone pitch in, even the big bosses along with the average Joe and Jane. What a great way to make everyone fell like part of the clean up effort and show their pride in our fair city.

Business owners, if you haven't been contacted about this endeavor yet, just consider this your notification and begin your clean up campaign. Go out and buy some work gloves, a broom and dustpan, and maybe one of those sharp spiked, poking things to stab the trash, make a schedule for you and the people who work with you, and start your clean up schedule tomorrow. No time like the present to get things into shape.

Maybe it would be a good idea to make everyone in town a part of this clean up campaign. Why don't we take it one step further and see if every homeowner can't clean up the street, gutter, boulevard and sidewalk in front their little part of the block? This would be a real united effort. Shall we give it a try? And if you don't have a house to clean up in front of, there are plenty of public places that need picking up, like parks, parking lots, school playgrounds and such. Pick one and start picking up. Let's make our city beautiful this spring.

Besides, digging around in all that junk, you might be lucky and find a treasure in amongst the trash - maybe a hundred dollar bill or a diamond ring! You never know...good deeds do have their rewards, they say.

MPCA urges preparation to minimize health risks

Minnesota Pollution Control Agency reminds farmers, storage-tank owners and residents to minimize pollution and health risks as they brace for severe spring flooding across the state.

State climatologist predict moderately high to high flooding potential for all major river basins and rivers in Minnesota. Rivers with moderately high flood potential are expected to crest several feet over flood stage, but remain below record levels. Rivers with high flood potential could crest above record levels.

Potential pollution problems related to flooding include overflowing manure storage structures, releases from underground and above-ground storage tanks and household solvents and chemicals washed away by floodwaters.

Farmers must contact the Minnesota Duty Officer immediately at 1-800-422-0789 if their manure storage facilities overflow, if manure enters surface waters, or if their manure storage structure is inundated by flood waters. Farmers can contact the MPCA at 1-800-657-3864 or 612-296-6300 if their manure storage facilities are in danger of overflowing.

To reduce the likelihood of an overflow, feedlot operators are encouraged to divert water from manure storage facilities if possible. Manure stockpiles located in areas that could flood should be removed immediately.

Farmers should contact their local Soil and Water Conservation District office or Minnesota Extension Service for more information on allowable application rates and suggestions for the best fields to apply manure to reduce the risk of pollution from floods this spring.

Owners of underground and above-ground storage tanks should also be aware of potential pollution risks presented by spring flooding. Although the floods of 1993 caused extensive damage, diligent preparations by tank owners minimized pollution problems from underground and above-ground storage tanks.

To minimize the risk of underground tanks "popping" out of the ground, MPCA says, tank owners should make sure their tanks are properly installed and anchored. Keeping the tanks full of product adds weight, making it less likely that the tank will become dislodged and float away.

MPCA officials also recommend that tank owners secure all openings in the tank. Shear valves on underground tanks should be closed or "tripped" and power should be shut off to the system in the event of flooding. Shutting off the power prevents product from leaving the system if floating debris knocks over a dispenser.

Tank owners are also reminded to call the Minnesota Duty Officer 1-800-422-0789 if their tanks become damaged or product is released. Tank owners should call the MPCA at 612-297-8679 or 1-800-657-3864 for additional information on flood preparedness.

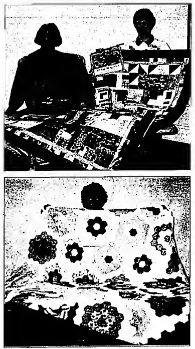
Businesses that generate hazardous wastes (such as waste degreasers, paints and pesticides) should prepare for possible flooding by storing those wastes and products where floodwaters are unlikely to reach them. For information on safely moving the chemicals and their wastes while still following waste-management regulations, call the MPCA at 612-297-8510.

To protect themselves and their families during and after flooding, municipal residents should move hazardous household chemicals to a safe area that is likely to remain dry throughout the flooding, the MPCA suggests.

Household hazards include chemicals such as drain cleaner, furniture stripper, motor vehicle oil, toilet bowl cleaner, antifreeze, pesticides and fertilizers. Items such as vehicle batteries and propane tanks should also be moved to higher ground because they pose a danger if their contents are released to the environment. For more information on hazardous household products and waste, call the county environmental offices of the MPCA at 612-297-8675.

Officials from the Minnesota Department of Health also urge awareness of potential public health risks associated with a flood situation. The major public health concern during a flood is contamination of private drinking water wells. Wells that may have been contaminated should be disinfected and tested before being placed back in service. A well should be considered contaminated—and should be disinfected and tested—any time the flood water comes in contact with the well casing.

Detailed instructions for disinfecting and testing wells are available from local health departments or the nearest district office of the Minnesota Department of Health. There are MDH offices in Bemidji, Duluth, Fergus Falls, Mankato, Marshall, Rochester and St. Cloud.



These two quilts are examples of the handiwork that will be on display at the Northwest Regional Library in Thief River Falls April 2-29 during the Thief River Falls Quilters Guild's "Up North Quilt Show." The top photo shows the quilt made by Marlene Sommers (right) of Warren and a sweatshirt scene quilted by Sue Duprao of Thief River Falls. In the bottom photo is Elaine Myrfield of Warren whose reversible quilt includes 2,728 pieces.

Credit toward unpaid fines climbs to $10 per hour

by David Hill
Associate Editor

It's a two for one sale — of a kind — for people owing money on fines. Ninth District Court in Pennington County issued an order on March 25 for Pennington, Marshall and Kittson counties which allows every person owing a fine to receive $10 per hour in credit towards their unpaid fines if they report for flood control work. The typical hourly rate for STS work is $5 per hour.

According to court records, about 750 people in Pennington County owe $175,298.56 in unpaid fines.

Pennington County Sheriff Gerald Moe was surprised by the original order Monday, March 31, he said it had been working well with juveniles, but only 10 adults had voluntarily reported for flood control work on Friday. Of the 10 adults, three did not show up on Saturday.

According to the court order, the following rules will be applicable for flood control work:

- Every person owing a fine shall be entitled to $10 an hour for flood control work.
- Persons with warrants outstanding for unpaid fines will not be placed in jail if they voluntarily report for flood control work.
- persons in jail or having commitments that have not been executed will be entitled to two (2) days' jail credit for every eight (8) hours worked.
- Persons with a commitment or the alternative of a fine shall work off $10 an hour towards their fine.
- Persons in jail working off fines on STS shall also be entitled to $10 per hour for flood control work.

Individuals interested in participating in this plan have been encouraged by the court to contact the Marshall County Court Administrator at 218-745-4816, the Kittson County Court Administrator at 218-843-3632, or the Pennington County Sheriff's department at 218-681-6090.

Flood Preparations

Pennington County Sheriff Moe said that over the weekend they received an additional 30,000 sand bags. He also mentioned that the river at Highlanding and River Valley was open. He is concerned however, with the discovery that river ice in Thief River Falls is 12 to 20 inches in depth, which raises concerns about ice jams. Over the weekend, the sheriff's department received reports of people and people riding snowmobiles out on the ice. Because of liability issues, the sheriff's department will not state that the ice is safe, but said it is particularly unsafe at this time.

NCTC prepares for softball season...

Pioneers head to Iowa

Members of the Northland Community and Technical College softball team will leave for Iowa this week in an attempt to get in a few outdoor practice sessions before the Pioneers jump into the 1997 season, which is scheduled to begin Monday with a doubleheader against North Hennepin in Brooklyn Center.

The Pioneers went 12-14 last year and have just one returning sophomore – third baseman/outfielder Stacy Stanwick (Nevis).

"We're going to be really young," acknowledged Northland coach Rick Nikunen, "but I think we'll be solid at every position. I think we could finish with a better record than last year."

Part of the reason for optimism is a 1-2 pitching combination of Angie Vagle (Roseau) and Carisa Meyer (Crookston). "I think we got the two best pitchers in the area," said Nikunen about his recruiting efforts. "We'll be real solid with the two of them throwing for us."

Both are also listed as outfielders. Infielders on the roster include Rayna Benson, Pelican Rapids; Jackie Mogner, Marshall County Central; Katie Johnson, Warroad; Marisa Mullan, Bagley; Sarah Falk and Paula Hovda, Roseau; and Rhonda Beyer, Mounds View.

Carole Cameron and Devin Grugal, both from Warroad, will play outfield and catcher, respectively.

Thief River Falls products Cami Sorenson, Traci Rendulich and Kelly Newton are all listed as both infielders and outfielders.

Mark Augustine is named Nordics' MVP

Mark Augustine was named the most valuable player as the Marshall County Central boys high school basketball team handed out its 1996-97 team awards this week.

Kevin Engelsrud was selected the Nordics' most improved played, Phil Flickinger was tabbed the team's outstanding defensive player, and Corey Hanson was presented with the Coaches Award.

All four special award winners are seniors.

Augustine was introduced as an all-conference selection in both Star Seven and North Border play, while Flickinger was given honorable mention status in the North Border Conference.

It was announced that juniors Caleb Holthusen and Garrett Magner will succeed Augustine and Flickinger as captains for the 1997-98 season.

Special recognition T-shirts went to team leaders in various statistical categories.

Marshall County Central head coach Ron Ueland also cited the efforts of letter-winner student manager Micah Distel.

Below-par shooting, both from the field and at the free throw line, along with a season-long problem with turnovers, hurt the Nordics this winter as they struggled through a 5-18 season.

The Nordics shot just 39.5 percent from the field, hit only 50.8 percent of their free throws and averaged 18.6 turnovers per game.

"It was disappointing (record-wise)," admitted Ueland, "because we had hoped to be a .500 team. That was kind of our goal at the beginning, and we thought that it was a legitimate goal for us."

Poor shooting and turnovers kept the Nordics' offense in check most of the year. "The two things that really hurt us," noted Ueland, "was our ball handling and our shooting percentage. Our turnover ratio was way too high, and we just did not shoot the ball very well, either from the field or at the line. I thought we would do a better job in both areas."

Marshall County Central started the year 3-2, but then lost nine straight. The season ended with a 55-46 first round Sub-Section 31A tournament loss to East Grand Forks Sacred Heart.

"The biggest thing, was the quality of the competition," said Ueland in explaining the Nordics' won-loss woes. "We played some awfully good basketball teams. Every single time out we had a tough game. There were a couple of games we lost that we thought we should have

Boys high school basketball...

Brekke steps down as TRF head coach

Scott Brekke has stepped down as Thief River Falls boys head high school basketball coach.

Jim Sims, Director of Student Activities for School District 564, received Brekke's letter of resignation.

Brekke has been the Prowlers' head coach the past six years. His 50-88 overall won-loss record began with a 2-21 finish in 1991-92 and a 4-19 showing the following year. His teams climbed above .500 at 12-11, 13-10 and 12-11 in 1993-94, 1994-95 and 1995-96 before slipping to 7-16 this past season.

"I've enjoyed it," said Brekke. "I've enjoyed working with the kids and all of the people who have helped support the program. But this has been in the works for a while. There is no one reason why I'm leaving. I just felt like I needed a change, and that this was the right time for that change. I felt it was in my best interest to step down at this time."

The won-loss record this winter did not prompt the change, according to Brekke. "There was no pressure to resign," he said. "It was all my own doing. The record wasn't a factor. In fact, it was a fairly enjoyable year. The kids worked hard."

Brekke said he wasn't "burned out," at this point, but wanted to leave the job before that occurred. He will remain on the teaching staff at Challenger Elementary School, will continue to serve as a varsity high school football assistant coach, and indicated he would like to remain involved in the Thief River Falls basketball program at the freshman or middle school level.

The resignation by Brekke follows the recent announcement that Mark Dannhoff was stepping down as the men's head basketball coach at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls.

However, while the record was less- than hoped-for, Ueland said the season still held a lot of positives for the Nordics. "It was a very successful season from the standpoint of a group of kids who worked hard and worked well together," he offered. "It was a good bunch of kids to be with. They took their lumps at times, but they would came right back the next day ready to work."

Six of the top eight players Ueland used this winter were seniors, but there are some prospects ready to move up from a 16-6 junior varsity team. "We'll lose some kids, but we got some good ones coming up," noted Ueland. "We'll be a different kind of team next year. We'll be better shooters, but we won't be as big."

The Second Section

Virgil Phelps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gorden Phelps of Goodridge, recently visited the South Pole. Phelps is an electronic technician who travels all over the world.

Virgil Phelps visits the South Pole

It only took 30 seconds — tops — to walk through every time zone in the world. Anyone can do this, provided they first travel to the ends of the earth. Virgil Phelps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gorden Phelps of Goodridge, was able to accomplish this task while working at the South Pole recently.

Phelps is an electronic technician who repairs air navigation systems on Navy Ships, Coast Guard ships and Shore Navy Stations. Recently, he spent 10 days at the South Pole and McMurdal, Antarctica. Mr. and Mrs. Phelps explained that his work involves helping aircraft find ships on the ocean or on the shore. The navigational equipment also helps the space shuttles. They added that he was sent to Rhoda, Spain, recently because it's the first place a shuttle could land after entering the earth's atmosphere.

While visiting Antarctica, Phelps received an Antarctica achievement medal, a military medal and an award ribbon. Phelps isn't a member of the military, but he trains military personnel on how to repair vital navigational equipment.

While in Antarctica, the temperatures reached 59 degrees below 0-degrees Fahrenheit and the wind-chill reached 119 below and it was summer time. The Phelps also said that it was daylight 24-hours a day.

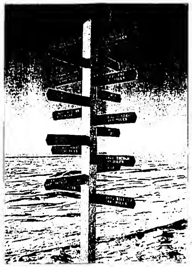
While it may seem like the lowest place on earth, the altitude was 10,000 feet. The actual ground level, however, is 300 feet above sea level. The Phelps added that Antarctica is one big glacier. Because it moves 30 feet every year, they have to move the South Pole every year. They said they guide its location by the stars.

The population at the South Pole station is about 1,000 — all scientists. They have three television stations and telephone that comes in by satellite. The only travel outside of the area is by airplane.

Phelps is a 1969 graduate of Goodridge High school. After graduation he worked at odd jobs and eventually joined the Navy. He was with the Navy for many years. Since then he has been an electronic technician. He resides in San Diego with his wife and son, who is a college student.

Currently he is in Japan. After he finishes his work in Japan he'll be traveling to the California desert. He is planning to be in Italy this summer.

Mrs. Gordon Phelps said of her son that if he's at home for any period longer than two weeks he gets antsy and wants to be going somewhere.



One of the bleakest and most barren spots on earth, a sign marking the spot of the South Pole provides directions to possibly more hospitable destinations.

Crop Walk raises funds to feed the hungry

Come rain or shine, people from Holt, Viking, Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire and elsewhere will walk for the hungry everywhere. Funds raised by people obtaining sponsors for a three mile walk called Crop Walk, can be designated to one of 17 hunger fighting agencies or to the Church World Services. Twenty-five per cent of all of the funds raised by this even will be donated to the Area Foodshelf in Thief River Falls.

Crop Walk will be held Sunday, April 20, at 3 p.m. It will begin and end at United Methodist Church on Horace Avenue in Thief River Falls. Organizers of the event hope to have over 100 walkers and raised over $2,500.

Every step counts. In the past 10 years Crop Walks have raised more than $124,000,000 to help stop hunger in neighborhoods and communities throughout the world.

Local churches and organizations have been contacted to help recruit walkers. Anyone interested in participating in Crop Walk is asked to contact an area church or call Rev. Skildum of the St. Hilaire Parish at 964-5750.

MDA urges farmers to prepare for possibility of flood

Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) is urging farmers and agribusinesses to immediately develop contingency plans for a worst case flood scenario, MDA Commissioner Gene Hugoson said. "Flood forecasts from the National Weather Service point to the potential for record or near-record flooding on many of the major river systems in Minnesota depending on spring snowmelt conditions. We think it's prudent to prepare for the worst, while hoping for the best."

The MDA has prepared a series of fact sheets for farmers and businesses outlining flood preparation tips. The fact sheets offer practical advice on how to reduce damage to stored grain, feed, seed and ag chemicals. They outline steps to try to avoid unwanted discharges of manure or agricultural chemicals. They also recommend dairy farmers develop contingency plans, including generators for power outages and back-up milk storage options.

"One initial step anyone in a floodplain might want to take is to ask their county zoning administrator or insurance agent whether their property is above or below projected flood stage levels," Commissioner Hugoson noted. "Those at risk should consider flood insurance. Remember, a flood insurance policy must be purchased 30 days before damage occurs."

The MDA's Flood Info Fact Sheets are being mailed to more than 2,000 businesses that store or sell pesticides, fertilizers, animal feeds, or crop seeds, as well as selected dairy processing plants, grocery stores and food wholesalers. Business owners are encouraged to share the information with farmers and other customers. The fact sheets will also be available on the MDA's homepage on the World Wide Web at http://www.mda.state.mn.us

A separate MDA mailing to 50 agrichemical manufacturers and distributors noted that flood crests are expected to occur between mid April and early May, which is about the time ag chemical facilities are receiving shipments of pesticides and fertilizers for the spring planting season. The MDA encouraged agrichemical manufacturers and distributors to do whatever is possible to ensure that pesticides and fertilizers received by ag chemical dealers and retailers are protected from flood waters, including, perhaps, delaying certain spring shipments to high flood-risk areas.

In addition, Commissioner Hugoson has organized an ad hoc task force with representatives from farm organizations and commodity councils to provide advice on what additional emergency preparedness steps should be taken. The MDA is also working closely with the Department of Public Safety's Division of Emergency Management to coordinate flood preparation activities and exchange information.

Arctic, Polaris fighting proposed legislation regarding watercraft

Arctic Cat Inc. and Polaris Industries, with the help of the PWIA, are battling personal watercraft legislation pending in the state of Minnesota.

The most restrictive bill (SF 371) calls for the total ban of personal watercraft on all state waterways except during limited hours of operation, requires liability insurance for personal watercraft (but not other boats) and established a 200-foot no-wake zone for personal watercraft only. Personal watercraft owners in the state of Minnesota are asked by Arctic and Polaris to write their state senator and representative as soon as possible.

Happy Birthday American Legion

A birthday party was held in Plummer Saturday evening at the American Legion Post 623. The American Legion is celebrating its 77th year. Commander Merle Josme and President Loretta Hosse were in charge of the festivities. Speakers for the evening were Mayor John Holla of Plummer and ninth district officer Charles Vind from Fertile at the head table with wife Norma and Lorna Josmo and the evening wouldn't be complete without a funny reading from Fern Hosse. There was a ham pot luck dinner.

Plummer Said Goodby

On March 20, 1997, at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Plummer the funeral for Buford was held. Officiating was Pastor Clarence Johnson and organist/vocalist Linda Olson sang Amazing Grace. Buford was a member of the American Legion Post in Plummer and was given Military Honors. Buford Stanton Lawson was born August 3, 1934 and died March 16, 1997. Casketbearers were American Legion members and the funeral arrangements were with Petterson Funeral Home Inc. of Red Lake Falls. Buford was born in Myra, WV to the late Solomar and Flossie Lawson. Buford's mother is still living in West Virginia. Buford has lived in the Plummer area for 30 years where he farmed. Buford was a gentle man and wanted nothing more than for people to be his friend. Plummer did lose a friend and may he rest in peace.

First printing of "Down on the Farm" sells out, second printing has just arrived.

New book costs "a penny per laugh"

Hailed as "the best little book of the year" by the Northern Watch of Thief River Falls, the first printing of Down on the Farm, a collection of essays about small-town life by Eric Bergeson of Fertile, MN quickly sold out during the Christmas rush.

Down on the Farm is a ninety-page paperback which contains over seventy-five short essays by Eric Bergeson. Sometimes comic, sometimes infuriating, always opinionated, Bergeson's perspective is that of a young person who not only grew up in a Minnesota small town, but continues to live and work there.

Down on the Farm includes nostalgic reminiscences of the author's grandparents, as well as accounts of adventures at Bible Camp, in the sugar beet field and at Sam's Club.

In his crankier essays, Bergeson takes off the gloves to condemn telemarketers, sniffers, plywood butts in flower gardens and the green Lutheran hymnal. Other essays discuss such time-worn local institutions as annual meetings, funerals, wedding dances and lutefisk.

According to the Grand Forks Herald, "If you take yourself too seriously, Bergeson will get you." The Northern Watch observed that, "like fine wine or daily devotions," Down on the Farm is best if read a little at a time.

Down on the Farm is available by mail or at the following stores: Ben Franklin and Falls Book Company in Thief River Falls, Pioneer Drug in Fertile, Good Things of Fosston, Thompson Hardware of Red Lake Falls, Eagle Drug of Crookston, Anderson Pharmacy of Hallock, Ben Franklin in Grafton and Wayne's Variety in Cavalier.

"I enjoyed Down on the Farm. The author has captured the mood and pace of life here on the plains. Thanks for the memories." —Boyd Christenson, KFGO radio

"Quite possible the best book to come out of Norman County this year" —Mark Aakhus, Rutgers University

"Down on the Farm musings are as barbed and well-formed as cockleburs." —Jay Meek, author and poet

"Quite good...a better than average collection." —The Grand Forks Herald

"...blunt and witty commentary" —The Fargo Forum

Some of the Lund Quilters worked Tuesday and Wednesday at the church getting some more quilts made. We had read "It is better to wear out than rust out" so we decided we needed to get busy. We finished one large quilt and ten lap robes or crib quilts. We discussed the possibility of getting quilts sent to the families that lost everything by flood in the Ohio Valley. We think it must be impossible for them to clean and dry out quilts soaked in mud and sand.

Visitors at the Effie Handy home on Saturday were Marion Handy, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Emerson, and Deloras Spencer of Thief River Falls. Lyn Turonne visited her mother Effie on Sunday evening.

There on Sunday besides Arnold and Sanna were Orville and Gertrude Christianson, Harry and Nora Hanson, Gene and Evon Arveson, Brian and Craig. Luella served a nice supper for all of us.

Dan Bartlette

Some of you may remember a Native American, Dan Bartlette, who spoke at different places in the area speaking about his life, especially his childhood. He explained about being born with a cleft pallet and not being able to speak until a school teacher paid for surgery and people found he was a brilliant man instead of retarded. He overcame his difficulties and became a U.N.D. graduate and an inspiration to many. According to the March 17, 1997, issue of the Grand Forks Herald, Gov. Ed Schafer proclaimed March 8, 1997 as Dan Bartlette Day.

Mary and Donne Renstrom and Shirley Lofrooth visited Elsie Lofrooth on Wednesday.

Spring came in on the calendar last week but the weather in northwest Minnesota is hanging on to Winter. Today the snow kept falling until we had about 2 to 3 inches of the white stuff mixed with thawed water making a messy situation for those who were out in it.

In spite of the weather our high wire performer, Yolanda Squirrel, is out and about again. Roy called me to come and see as he came marching along the cable wire from the pole to the house. All at once he decided to jump onto the branch of the big fir tree which was covered with icy frost and bent way down. He was trying to climb to the tree but just kept spinning. Perhaps he took our cheering him on to mean that we were after what is left of his damaged tail, because with a final effort, he made it up to the tree where he turned around and gave us a most disgusted face a squirrel can make. If looks had been killing, we would have fallen over dead.

We are not the only ones who are keeping our eyes open for signs of Spring. When I called Elphia Adils for news she said she had seen purple finches around her place and of course lots of crows that have made their appearances the past couple of weeks. She wasn't very excited about the new snow as she has plenty left around her abode, but she is an optimist, and expects Spring to come sooner or later.

The Bethesda Lutheran Church in Strandquist is celebrating Holy Week beginning on Thursday until Sunday. The Salem Lutheran Church is also doing the same, only they begin on Wednesday. A decorated cake was made by Grandma Irene. A fun time was had by all.

Visitors at Judy Kleinvachter's home this past week were June Kasprowicz, Lowell Lofrooth, Betty Pietruszewski, Kristin Lyons, Larina and Claudin Berggren and Jessie and Kali. It is always a very friendly time that is spent at Judy's.

Kathy Dimmnnsen from Bemidji is spending a couple of weeks with Grandpa Morris and Grandma Marcelyn Lindstrom while her parents Dr. Paul and Diane Dimmnnsen are in Taiwan celebrating the dedication of the orthopedic wing of the hospital there in honor of Dr. Marcy Dimmansen and his wife Joyce, a former missionary to China and Taiwan. All of their six sons are doctors and all are there now for the celebrations.

Hazel Andersen and her daughter Cindy Wellerlund of East Grand Forks had a lovely birthday party together on Sunday afternoon. Their guests were Jim Wellerlund, Morris Andersen, Kevin, Jared and Alissa Britten, Paul, Shirley, Chris and Ken Anderson, Peter and Pearl Thompson, Elsie Lofrooth, Ernie and Betsy Thompson, Danny and Gloria Renstrom, Geneva Nordin, and Roy and Myrtle Vagle. Hazel had made buns to the recipe that mom used to make and Cindy and Jim had brought along pictures that they had enlarged of the family and we all had a wonderful afternoon. Plans were also made for the 8th of June, when Morris has his 80th birthday and he and Hazel have their 50th wedding anniversary celebration.

Landowners Can Use Endangered Species Act To Fight Protections

On Wednesday, March 19, the U.S. Supreme Court gave ranchers, farmers and developers a new means of fighting environmental regulation by ruling that landowners can use the Endangered Species Act to try to quash federal protections they think go too far.

A copyrighted article by Joan Biskupic and Joby Warrick, Washington Post staff writers, appeared in that newspaper March 20 as follows:

The unanimous decision overturns an appeals court ruling that said only people with an interest in preserving endangered species could use the act to challenge federal regulation of scarce land and water resources. The new ruling strengthens the hand of property rights advocates, an increasingly visible political force in the United States, but one that has long felt disenfranchised from Washington and overburdened by its regulations.

"It's big," said Gregory K. Wilkinson, who represented Oregon ranchers and irrigation districts before the high court. "The opinion levels the playing field. It does not put people who have economic interests at a disadvantage in terms of getting into the courthouse."

The ruling gives landowners new legal standing to challenge environmental law, but whether they will ultimately prove successful in loosening government's grip on land-use policy will be know only as individual cases are brought and resolved in courts across the country.

Already, property rights advocates are predicting that the high court decision will embolden landowners whose development plans have been thwarted because of perceived threats to endangered animals and plants. "What you have here is a situation where people have been treading water while waiting to see how this case goes forward," said Randy Lee, a New York lawyer and home builder who has followed the case.

By expanding protections for property owners, the court succeeded in accomplishing something that congressional Republicans had hoped to achieve through legislation. A bill introduced this year by House Republicans would specifically recognize the rights of property owners to file citizen suits over alleged violations of the Endangered Species Act.

The historic act is believed to be responsible for the comeback of the bald eagle, the American alligator and numerous other species that have recovered since its enactment in 1973.

Among its provisions is one that allows "any person" to sue to stop the government or anyone else from threatening the nation's species or from otherwise violating the provisions of the act. The "citizen suit" provision has been used for years by environmentalists to challenge what they believed was lax government enforcement of the law.

Yesterday's case of Bennett v. Spear began when ranchers and irrigation districts sued the government for reducing water flows from two reservoirs on the Oregon-California border to protect the Lost River sucker and shortnose sucker, which the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service had listed as an endangered species in 1988.

The ranchers alleged that a report prepared by the Service, urging the reduced water allocation, was scientifically flawed and violated the Endangered Species Act. Without the usual water supply, Wilkinson said, the ranchers could not feed their cattle."

The ranchers group sued, but lower courts said it lacked legal "standing." The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals emphasized that the Act was intended to protect the habitat of delicate animals and plants and that only plaintiffs who allege an interest in the preservation of species fall within the interests protected by the law.

But the Act also requires the Fish and Wildlife Service to consider any economic impact of designating an endangered species, and the challengers contended that the law must cover anyone affected by action under the act, including those economically harmed.

Yesterday, in a rare loss for the government on environmental regulation, the court agreed. Justice Antonin Scalia, writing for the court, said the provision permitting "any person" to sue should be broadly interpreted, adding that "the overall subject matter of this legislation is the environment....a matter in which it is common to think all persons have an interest."

The court also said landowners could object to biological opinions made by the Fish and Wildlife Service, which lead to an endangered species listing. The government had contended that property owners had no such right because such opinions, however crucial, are not a "final" agency action. Environmental groups generally were restrained in their criticism of the court's opinion. Having fought tenaciously for the right to sue the government over its enforcement of species-protection laws, some groups were loath to publicly oppose granting the same right to others.

At the interior Department, officials said they expected few changes in the administration of the Endangered Species law.

The above story by Biskupic and Warrick points out how perseverance in litigation is so important and why property rights groups must have funding to pursue their causes all the way through the system. In the case in question, the plaintiffs were unsuccessful at every step until reaching the highest court in the land where their position was not only affirmed by the court but was done so unanimously.

It is unknown whether the supreme court decision in this case will have wide-ranging impact, but it affirms that rights under the law apply equally to all. That alone is a worthwhile decision.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

Too many times in this world we recognize the bad and, come to think of it, I have been recognized my fair share. It think it's time we recognize something positive.

Tim Bergland is celebrating 10 years in professional hockey this year. He is in the final year of a three-year contract with the Chicago Wolves of the International Hockey League. This could be the last year of competitive hockey for a man who has been going strong every since he "laced 'em up" on the river behind his house or the Northrop rink.

Tim is having a very strong year with 30-plus points and has seen a lot of ice time. The team is fighting for a play-off spot as the season winds down. I feel Tim will get a chance to sign another contract somewhere, but you never know in the world of professional sports.

One of the Wolves' final regular season games will be held on Friday, April 11, at 7 p.m. at the Winnipeg Arena in Winnipeg, Manitoba. A fantasy of mine, one of many, would be to get a bus load of people to go up to "the peg" and cheer Tim and his team on.

So what I've done is reserved the Carpenter bus to take a busload of 45 people up north to lose our voices. What I need now is about 35 more people to go. We are leaving from the parking lot across from Subway at 4 p.m. on April 11. The cost will be no less than $20 but no more than $25, depending on how many sign up. The cost will include transportation and the ticket for the game. People will be allowed to bring small coolers for their choice of beverage. We will return about 1 a.m.

I will be in and out of town the next two weeks so I've arranged for sign-up with Kurt Muzzy at 681-6345. He is hauling grain, so if he doesn't answer the first call, try again later. The first 45 people signed up will go. Don't wait, let's skate and motivate.

Thank you,
Jeff Storhaug

LETTERS

To The Editor:

I am a former resident of Thief River Falls, having lived in your city from 1973 until 1982 when my father, an Assemblies of God minister, moved our family to Junction City, KS, to pastor a new church. I have lived here ever since. The reason I am writing this letter is, while growing up in Thief River Falls, I had the opportunity to attend school there from second through 10th grade, and there are several people I need to thank for impressing upon me the importance of getting an education and for shaping my future.

I was sitting around today thinking of why I am where I am today, thankful that I have a wonderful family, a good job, a home that's almost mine, and that I'm not a burden on society, when all sorts of faces started to appear in my mind. They were all former teachers of mine. There was Mr. Richard Tyler, my fourth and fifth grade basketball coach and fifth grade teacher. What a great man! I was perhaps a little fearful of him, at the time, but in looking back, I guess it was all part of his pushing his students to excel. He expected a great deal from his students and his ball players, and there's nothing wrong with that. The world needs more of that. Thank you, Mr. Tyler. You helped me learn and I appreciate your efforts.

Mr. Patrick Klemisch's face showed up. If you've never had him as a teacher, but have seen him in the school building, you are scared to death of this man—which I was until I entered his sixth grade math class. Now he is without a doubt the best teacher I have ever had and one of the nicest men I've ever met. Mr. Klemisch cared for his students and worked with each until they learned the material. Math was never my strong subject, but Mr. Klemisch was a math wizard, and I am extremely thankful I was placed in his math class. Thank you, Mr. Klemisch. I think of you often.

Two of the hardest teachers I ever had were Mr. Jack Boyer, my seventh grade social studies teacher and Mr. Ed Krystosek, my 10th grade social studies teacher. Both of these men knew their stuff extremely well. They either had the text book memorized or they wrote it themselves—one of the two. They also made us students do our own work. They made us search for our own answers. They didn't just stand up front and spoon feed us, and I didn't realize the importance of that until I got into college. Thank you both. I was ready for college when I got there.

Ms. Cecelia Stoltman's image crossed my mind. She was an interesting teacher, both in personality and style. She made ninth grade civics a lot of fun. She could talk the whole period, and it was great. She would talk about her own experiences and things that were going on in the world around us and tell us exactly what it was that we could learn from these things. Thank you, Ms. Stoltman. You were an excellent teacher.

Mr. Al Buhl was not a classroom teacher of mine, but he was an outstanding influence in my life. He was my basketball coach from eighth through 10th grade. I think that it was fate that it worked out that way, because one doesn't normally have the same coach three years in a row. Mr. Buhl was a fine teacher on the court, yes, even the day after we gave a game away to Detroit Lakes and didn't touch a basketball for the majority of the practice. I got over it! I never had a finer basketball coach, and I'm sure a lot of his former students could say the same about his teaching in the classroom. Thank you, Mr. Buhl.

There are a lot of other teachers I could thank, because I can't recall a bad classroom experience in your district, but I'd like to talk about two others and then close. Their names are Mr. John Hustad, my middle school vocal music teacher and Mr. David Morken, my 10th grade concert choir director. It think it was my time in these classes that had the most influence on my present career. It was in Mr. Hustad's class that I learned I had a musical gift. At least he must have thought so, or he wouldn't have given me the three solos that stressed me out immensely. I did have fun, though, and it was then that I figured music would be a part of my future.

It was in Mr. Morken's class that I learned what my future career would be. I watched him teach, prepared to go from bell to bell every day. I watched him control a class of about 80 students. I watched him sing lower than any guy and higher than any girl, and I was in awe. Because I was in choir, it was required that I also participate in the musical in some form or other. I knew I didn't want to be on a backstage crew, so I tried out for the smallest part available, and played the part of Uncle Henry in 1982's Wizard of Oz. That was one of the biggest highlights of my life. Playing that part, I knew fine arts would be my future. Thank you both, gentlemen, for your roles in making me the person I am today.

I graduated from Junction City High School in 1984 and Kansas State University in 1989. I have a beautiful wife and two children. I am now a school teacher myself, and have S.D. 564 to thank. I have been the drama teacher at Junction City High School, a school of about 1,400 students, for the past seven years, and had it not been for the pleasant experiences I had in the Thief River Falls public schools, I do not think I would have ever gone down this avenue. I think there are things I have borrowed from a lot of you in developing my own teaching style, but it also takes concern and care for people, which is a definite attribute I received from watching your lives. I only wish I could have taken Charlie Cornell's senior Government class.

When asked to name role models, along with my father the names of my favorite teachers always come to mind. I don't know how many of you are still teaching and/ or residing in Thief River Falls, but I thought it was high time I thanked all of you for your patience, your nurturing, your prodding and your concern for the future of our great country. I now know that teaching is not a job, it's a commitment and investment in America's future.

Thank you all so much, and I hope 20 years or so from now my children will write similar letters, having learned the importance of education and positive people in their lives. God Bless.

Sincerely,
Brian J. Hagemeister

The old band, for which we subscribed 25 cents a month, is not in it, perhaps that subscription killed the band, or it may be that a 'man up a tree' was too observant. Musicians are very sensitive and this 'neck o'woods' is noted for its sense-i-tiveness even to non-sense but we hope the band will prosper and the tournament be a blooming success if we don't make a cent out of it and that both flats and sharps will be so used that there will be complete harmony."

REGULAR BOARD MEETING
March 10, 1997 7:00 p.m.
S.D.S.C. Conference Room A

A Regular Board Meeting of Independent School District #564 was held on Monday, March 10, 1997, at 6:30 p.m. in Conference Room A of the School District Service Center.

The following Board members were present: Larry Belmont, Carl Clark, Dennis Kiesow, Joan Larson, Darla Twomey and Steve Young. Also present was Dr. Jerry Robicheau, Superintendent of Schools.

Chairperson Carl Clark called the meeting to order and Clerk Joan Larson established that a quorum was present.

A motion was made by S. Young and seconded by D. Twomey to approve the agenda as presented. Motion carried unanimously.

Information regarding MSBA's Phase III of Building a High Performance Board workshop was distributed. Also reviewed was a request of the Spanish Club for assistance with transportation costs for the Costa Rica trip this coming summer.

The Board recognized Chris A. Larson for recently completing his high school graduation requirements through the Area Learning Center.

Member Darla Twomey reported on behalf of the Multi-Events Cultural Center referring to the meeting that was held last week which Board members attended. Darla, as a regional representative, also reported on the Minnesota State High School League noting she will be attending a meeting next week and voting on an issue that would change MSHSL rules and allow football coaches to host workshops for their football players during the summer months. Board consensus was that the rule should not be changed.

Carl Clark reported on behalf of the Board Negotiating Team noting that it appears a tentative agreement has been reached with the bus drivers and there are a few issues yet to be ironed out with the Teamster groups.

Superintendent Jerry Robicheau noted the Meet and Confer Session with the TRF Education Association was postponed to give their committee an opportunity to review a number of calendar options with staff in each of their buildings. Jerry indicated he is proposing adding more student days and staff development opportunities to the calendar. Another change would be to hold parent-teacher conferences earlier in the school year and focus on student expectations and goal-setting for the year. Jerry reported that all students made it home when school was dismissed early last Monday. Jerry also noted the Northern Coalition meeting he attended on Saturday where discussion was centered around funding for education.

A motion was made by J. Larson and seconded by D. Twomey to approve the Minutes of the February 24, 1997, Regular Board Meeting. Motion carried unanimously.

A crystal statuette of praying hands? No, just the top of an ice formation on the window of a mobile home owned by Marlowe Johnson of Viking. Johnson took this photo when snow or frost crystals had formed on the ice ledge, creating a "base" for the natural sculpture. He said the ice was formed by water running from the roof of an adjacent building and that it had remained for several weeks before the weather turned warmer recently.

Get To Your Child Before... The Pressure Does!

Peer pressure. We've all experienced it. Remember how hard it was to say "no" when you were a kid, even if it meant doing something you knew was wrong?

Young people today admit that pressure to use drugs is intense. As a parent, it's your job to give your child the facts about the dangers of drug abuse.

Talk to your kids. Get to them before the pressure does.

Flood, Blizzard, Power Outage Paralyze Area

Triple whammy causes severe problems for people with no heat, flooding basements

Travel to and from and even within Thief River Falls was at a standstill or extremely dangerous Sunday. Residents, however, were trying to obtain provisions and supplies to wait out this latest blizzard which cut power to the entire city. This picture was taken southeast of the Third Street bridge at about noon on Sunday.

Times Editor

Just when the area was poised to battle the expected flood of the century, Mother Nature played a cruel trick and compounded the problem with a bone-chilling winter storm that caused enormous electrical power outages throughout northwestern Minnesota, central and eastern North Dakota and parts of northeastern South Dakota.

The storm included snowfall which reduced visibility to zero and covered roads with ice. Many roads were blocked from the Thief River Falls area and west. Bismarck, ND, had a 17-inch snowfall. Flood waters continued their rise in some areas despite unseasonal cold which plummeted to near zero Sunday night and Monday morning and again Monday night and Tuesday morning. Overland flooding at Ada reportedly necessitated evacuation of most of the residents of that Norman county city.

Power Supply Interrupted

Thief River Falls and immediate area were spared the extensive damage to power supply lines and equipment experienced further to the west. However, that damage to power lines, substations, switches and other electrical supply equipment occurred between this area and the power generating plants in the lignite coal areas of North Dakota. As a result, electrical power could not be transported to this area and many areas will be without power for days.

At Thief River Falls, which is served with two power feeds from North Dakota, the first power went off about midnight Saturday and the second feeder went down about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. The city power plant, which has four generators on standby, was put into emergency operation beginning about 2 a.m. Sunday to supply the hospital, water plant, fire hall, law enforcement center, sewer lift stations, Oakland Park Nursing Home and several other places on line to those essential points.

Red Lake Electric Cooperative and PKM Electric Cooperative experienced outages on much of their systems about the same time. PKM Electric, headquartered at Warren, had more damage in its system and longer outages. Red Lake Electric, headquartered at Red Lake Falls, had most of its customers back on line by early evening Monday.

Shelters welcome families escaping unheated homes

Challenger Elementary School and St. Bernard's Catholic church served as the primary public shelter areas during the electrical power outage which paralyzed Thief River Falls and surrounding area from about 1:30 a.m. Sunday until Monday afternoon and evening.

At Challenger about 130 to 150 people were housed overnight on Sunday and about 60 on Monday. St. Bernard's church had about 150 people stay overnight Sunday and about 125 Monday night.

St. Bernard's church is on an electric line that provides emergency service with power generated at the city power plant, therefore had electricity for light and heat. Challenger school has its own emergency generator which provided ample power for heat, lights and food service.

According to Floyd Erickson, head custodian at Challenger and one of several who coordinated the emergency services, the generator had been operating on about 22 gallons of fuel per hour and was supplied twice by Sorvig Oil during the power outage.

He said people began arriving at the school around 6:30 a.m. Sunday and preparations were soon begun to provide meals.

The first to arrive were Jessie and Tom Zornes and their daughters Jessica, 7; Melissa, 5; and Hope, 3. Zornes said he woke up about 4:45 a.m. Sunday to find his mobile home in Greendale Manor getting cold. Since he knew his fuel supply had been low, he suspected that the fuel had run out, but discovered the power outage when he tried to turn on a light.

Without awakening his family he came downtown, stopped at the law enforcement center and was referred to Challenger. He returned for his family and went to the school where they were still staying about 6:30 p.m. Monday. Hearing that the power would be turned on for a short time in his area about 4:30 p.m. Monday, he went back to the trailer and found that pipes had burst in the bathroom.

Also among the early arrivals were Darrel Flaten, Laurie Green and her children Reggie Cummings, 6 and Justin Rud, 3. Laurie stopped by her home Monday to find an icicle hanging from a bathroom faucet, then returned to the school.

Floyd Erickson at Challenger and Lambert Brunkhorst, who helped coordinate activities at St. Bernards, both praised the efforts of SuperValu supermarket personnel who checked on their food needs and delivered large quantities of food items during the two days. At St. Bernard's a number of individuals also brought food.

Myrna Erickson, School District 564 food services supervisor, along with cooks Sandy Johnson and Mavis Newton, provided the meals at Challenger. Ione Gonsorowski, who cooks for the St. Bernard's school lunch program, handled much of the food duties along with other volunteers at the church. Brunkhorst estimated that 300 people were served a noon meal at St. Bernard's and noted that meals were served Sunday and food was available throughout most of both days.

Both shelters were provided with cots and blankets from Company B of the National Guard in Thief River Falls. In addition, people slept on the padded pews in the main part of St. Bernard's church and in the hall-

Tuckered out youngsters were warm, safe and not too uncomfortable to catch a nap in the commons area at Challenger Elementary School in Thief River Falls Monday afternoon. Challenger was one of two major public shelter areas during the two-day power outage which hit the Thief River Falls area Sunday and Monday, April 6 and 7.

KTRF radio serves as contact point for many in emergency

KTRF radio personnel in Thief River Falls, assisted by spouses and other volunteer workers, maintained a constant information and assistance link during the emergency caused by the power outage which hit Thief River Falls from about 1:30 a.m. Sunday until Monday afternoon and evening.

Part of the KTRF listening area is still without electrical power and will likely be in that condition for several days. The station continues to provide information and public service for people remaining in an emergency situation.

According to news director Todd McDonald, the station was able to get its seldom-used emergency generator into operation with the assistance of engineer Stan Mueller and went on the air at 7:30 a.m. Sunday.

McDonald, Wayne Rahlf and Lee Richards handled much of the on-air duties Sunday and the station— which is normally not staffed from about midnight to 5 a.m.— remained on the air on a 24-hour basis. Mark Allen and Peggy Mehrkens worked the microphones much of Monday.

People in the area have expressed their appreciation to the station personnel for the extra service, noting that it helped them keep in touch with one another, find family members and others and locate needed equipment and supplies.

McDonald said that the five

Power outages range from inconvenience to disaster

"If we were to project a worst case scenario," says Mike Schmidt, manager of finance and administration for PKM Electric Cooperative in Warren, "it would be better than what we are dealing with right now."

In an area from about eight miles east of highway 75 and extending west to the edge of its service area, the cooperative suffered extensive damage in its system in the storm which swept into that area late Saturday, April 5. All 12 of the cooperative's substations were out of service and nearly all of its 3,700 subscribers were without power.

As of 11 a.m. Tuesday, only about 600 of those subscribers had been brought back on line and it was projected it would take another 24 to 36 hours to restore three more substations.

"Right now we have 140 line workers and 12 to 15 tracked diggers working to re-set poles," Schmidt told The Times late Tuesday morning. "We are doing as much as we can do as fast as we can do it. The magnitude of the storm which caused problems in an area 300 miles wide and 400 miles long, resulted in available crews being scattered throughout the area, as opposed to a more concentrated damage area."

Schmidt said a helicopter survey of the system was planned for mid-day Tuesday, but preliminary estimates are that there may be 1,000 or more poles down in the PKM system. At 17 poles per mile of line, that would be approximately 59 miles of line destroyed. Tracked vehicles were necessary to cross flooded ditches where trucks can't go to replace poles. In addition to the broken poles, damage included wire breaks, trees toppled on lines and ice damage to equipment.

By Monday night, Schmidt said, one circuit was being supplied from North Dakota in the East Grand Forks area. Next to be supplied were substations in the Lancaster, Strandquist and Euclid areas.

Poles to replace the broken ones are already on hand, Schmidt said.

Skjerven case to be heard in Hubbard Co.

Thursday, Ninth District Judge Larry G. Jorgenson granted a change of venue in the criminal sexual conduct case of Kevin Scott Skjerven. The case will now be heard in Hubbard county.

Skjerven stands accused of sexually assaulting a Marshall County woman, and has been connected to the disappearance of another Marshall County resident, Veronica Safranski, who remains missing.

Judge Jorgenson noted that this is a very unusual case. The main issue surrounding the change of venue involved whether Skjerven could receive a fair trial in Marshall County. In his memorandum supporting his decision for a change of venue, Judge Jorgenson noted that there was extensive publicity surrounding the disappearance of Veronica Safranski but relatively little publicity surrounding the charges Skjerven faces in this trial. He explained that every time Skjerven made a court appearance on the matter it was accompanied by news stories completely rehashing the Safranski matter and his possible involvement in her disappearance. "Because of the reporting here and the extensive involvement by the general public, the two must be considered together for purposes of this motion," said Judge Jorgenson.

and inability to operate pumps which they depended on to keep spring thaw seepage out of basements. A frantic scramble for portable generators or gasoline powered pumps began.

Many people forced to leave their homes or apartments due to the lack of heat took shelter with relatives or neighbors with generators or wood-burning stoves. Others drove or were transported by law enforcement and fire department personnel and other volunteers to public shelters which did have electrical power.

Shelters Serve Many

In Thief River Falls this included primarily St. Bernard's Catholic Church, which was on the energized line fed by the municipal power plant, and Challenger elementary school, which has its own emergency generator. United Methodist Church also made its facilities available and Northwest Medical Center and Dakota Clinic Ltd. housed about 60 people who were not hospital patients but many of whom had medical conditions and chose to stay near medical assistance.

The American Legion club rooms also had electrical power and served hot food from its grill and kitchen. Around noon Monday the club's parking lot and on-street parking nearby were filled.

Although electrical power was restored to much of Thief River Falls' residential area by late evening Monday, people who had been staying at the shelters mentioned above were advised by the Pennington county sheriff's department to remain there in case the power supply did not hold. There were about 150 people staying overnight at St. Bernard's church Sunday night—many sleeping on the padded pews—and 130 to 150 at Challenger school.

Guard Provides Cots

Company B of the National Guard in Thief River Falls also provided cots and blankets which were delivered by law enforcement personnel to the shelters. The National Guard also provided the use of Bradley Fighting Vehicles (tanks) to assist with rescue and evacuation efforts in some areas.

Pennington Main convenience store was on the city's emergency power feed line and was able to operate its gas pumps and sell food items on hand. Main Street Standard at Main Avenue and Second Street also had power to serve gas customers. At times on Sunday the line of traffic waiting to turn into Pennington Main was backed up for two blocks.

Some other stores, including Amoco 24 on highway 59 southeast, Erl's Market on Eighth Street, Kmart and Hugo's supermarket, Ace Hardware—and perhaps others of whom The Times is not aware—were open at times during the power outage to provide what food and other emergency items they could.

KTRF Does Yeoman Duty

KTRF radio was off the air from 1:27 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. Sunday, then began broadcasting with its emergency generator. Sports director Wayne Rahlf was among the first on duty at 7:30 a.m. and continued working around the clock on the air and on the phone. Many of the station's personnel joined in to answer the station's five phone lines, relay information to listeners.

The emergency situation brought out the resourcefulness of people and a cooperative spirit as many requests for assistance were met by others able to help, either by providing services or offering warm places to stay, generators, pumps, propane and/or tanks, kerosene, camp stove fuel, firewood and other items. Those in need and those able to help were frequently connected through the efforts of the radio station.

Like most other business places in the downtown area, The Times was without electrical power and unable to operate Sunday or Monday. That time was spent in attempts to gather information and stories to pass along to readers as soon as publication could be accomplished.

People Cooperative, Helpful

Despite being stressed from long hours and emergency pressures, the people we contacted were very understanding, cooperative and helpful. Because of the extensive area involved and complexity of the problems—much of which still exists or, in the case of flooding, is yet to come—stories will continue to unfold for some time.

The Times' news staff has compiled available information from a number of sources at this time and this is contained in separate shorter articles in today's issue. Persons who have information regarding life-threatening situations, heroic or unusual rescues, exceptional service provided, unique problems encountered or solved, or other items of general interest regarding this emergency are encouraged to call The Times at 681-4450 and share it with us and our readers.

Power outage ranges from personal inconvenience to disaster proportions

"There are more than 40 rural electric cooperatives in Minnesota, and they all become one when a disaster like this strikes," he said. "Their pole yards become our pole yards. We have helped them in the past and they are helping us now."

Schmidt said that customers of the cooperative have been "wonderful" and that their patience has exceeded all expectations. That patience will continue to be tried, however, as Schmidt says it will be days before many people have their power restored. For some customers on the end of the system along the flooding Red River it may be a couple of weeks before they have electric service again.

City Power Restored

The City of Thief River Falls is served by two feeder lines coming into the city from North Dakota. One of these went out of service about midnight Saturday and the other about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. There was little actual damage in the Thief River Falls system from the weather, but power flow was interrupted by line damage in North Dakota.

As soon as the outage occurred, power plant employees fired up the city's emergency generators. The city has four old generators which were once capable of providing the entire electrical needs of the city and generate five megawatts of current.

The emergency power supply is distributed on first priority to the hospital, water plant, fire hall, law enforcement center, sewer lifts, Oakland Park Nursing Home and Riverside Terrace apartments. Some businesses and residences along those feeder lines are also energized with the emergency service.

Gary Page, chief operator at the city power plant located by the dam in Thief River Falls, said that the diesel engines powering the generators were burning about 400 gallons of fuel per hour. He had 10,000 gallons of fuel on hand at the time of the outage and was able to get another 4,500 gallons from Polar Express truck line and 2,000 gallons from Sorvig Oil.

Page began duty as soon as the outage occurred and was assisted by plant operators Henry Hastad and Boyce Lee. Page said he was able to get a couple of hours of sleep Sunday night by going out to his car.

City line crews were out throughout the storm with the main problem being frozen switches which had to be thawed to become operational. A concern was the use of portable generators which individuals had modified to power their houses. If generators are plugged into the system without closing off the service entering the home, the current goes back out the service line into the system. The transformers which reduce the voltage coming into the home reverse the process and increase it, presenting a life-threatening hazard to linemen.

The city power and light department attempted wherever possible to alternate service from its emergency generation from one area of the city to another on an alternating basis so home heating could run for a short time. This was not possible to all areas of the city.

By 6:10 p.m. Monday a feed from Minnkota Power Cooperative from the south made it possible to activate one substation. A second substation was energized about 7 p.m.

According to Dana Klos of the city's electric department, the local system had been adjusted in so many ways to provide the temporary service that it was difficult to return it to normal. This resulted in some delay in returning full service to some areas.

South and east portions of the city which had not been served by the temporary power offerings were energized next. Most of the residential area was restored to service by about 11 p.m. and nearly all of the city, including the downtown business area, was receiving power by 2 a.m.

Klos said that some individual service calls had to be made but by 9 a.m. Tuesday virtually all power users in the city had service restored.

Red Lake Electric

Red Lake Electric Cooperative with headquarters in Red Lake Falls lost six of its seven substations about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. According to Ron Kennedy, manager of Red Lake Electric, about 4,400 of the cooperative's 4,700 members were without electricity.

Due to the severity of the wind and snow in the rural areas, nothing could be done on Sunday in this area or by Minnkota crews in North Dakota where much of the damage to power transmission lines occurred.

When Red Lake Electric crews could go out, they found very little damage and concentrated their efforts in having the system ready to receive service when power was restored by Minnkota.

The substation at Highlanding serving the Highlanding and Goodridge areas had service restored about midnight Sunday, followed about an hour later by the Mentor-Terrebonne substation. Service to the Huot, Crookston and Gentilly area was restored about 4 p.m. Monday and the final two substations at Thief River Falls were put back into service shortly after 6 p.m. Monday.

Kennedy said the cooperative greatly appreciates the understanding of its customers during the outage and appreciative comments from persons when service was restored. More than one caller noted how dependable electric service is taken for granted and one caller said a power interruption such as this "brings us back to reality."

Red Lake Electric was among those dispatching crews to assist PKM Electric in its recovery effort. Kennedy said that it will take months for Minnkota Power Cooperative to rebuild the destruction to its transmission system.

KTRF provides major service

phone lines coming into the station have been busy constantly. He said the station appreciated all those who called to offer assistance to others or just to share a story to relieve tensions. He also commended officials of electrical power suppliers for their cooperation in keeping the public informed of progress in getting service restored.

Among those working during the emergency were Chickie Walseth, Peg Mehrkens, Nora Hultgren, Bill and Theresa Meyer, Scott Gilbert, Brent and Tawnya Stroot, Mark Allen, Lee Richards, Jon and Paula Praska, Lori Stromsodt, Arlene Walseth, Wayne Rahlf, Terry Blacklance, Annette Hoss and Clark Hendrickson.

Also making its presence known in the studio and on the air was McDonald's cocker spaniel "Iggy" who earned the title of "Weather Dog" and greeted visitors to the station with a friendly bark and tail-wag.

Mac Frampton will present a piano concert Friday, April 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium as part of the Thief River Falls Concert Association series for 1996-97. The concert is being dedicated by the association to the late Jerry Joringdal, organist at Zion Lutheran Church for 42 years, who left a bequest of funds to the association to assist with its program.

Mac Frampton show here April 11 for TRF concert series

Pianist Mac Frampton will bring his one-man show to Thief River Falls Friday, April 11, for a 7:30 p.m. performance with members of the Thief River Falls Concert Association. Admission is by season membership only.

The concert association is dedicating the concert to the memory of Gerald "Jerry" Joringdal, who was one of the community's own keyboard artists prior to his death in 1993. Joringdal was born in Thief River Falls, studied music at Moorhead State University, taught piano for a number of years and was organist at Zion Lutheran Church for 42 years. He also made his gift of musicianship available to the public at many events, including being the organist at numerous Miss Thief River Falls pageants.

Joringdal left a bequest to the concert association to assist in providing continued music programming for the Thief River Falls community.

A virtuoso pianist who began performing professionally at age seven, the South Carolina native earned degrees at Erskine College and the Cincinnati Conservatory. At the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition his classical abilities were recognized with a special medal.

Throughout his 20-year professional career, he has developed an exuberant style and energy that relates to audiences of all ages and musical interests. His performances are greatly influenced by contemporary jazz, rock and pop in addition to classical piano.

Frampton has more than 15 recordings to his credit and has given thousands of concert performances, including appearances with the orchestras of St. Louis, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Atlanta and the Boston Pops. He has shared the stage with the likes of Victor Borge, Louis Nye, Bill Cosby, Roberta Flack, John Davidson and Metropolitan Opera star Roberta Peters.

The Atlanta Constitution stated in a review, "Think of Horowitz mixed with Liberace with an ounce of Victor Borge, and you've got the picture....How one man can bring the rafters down in Symphony Hall as if a full orchestra were playing is a feat in itself. It's consummate musicianship. Frampton's thing is electric."

One of the features of Frampton concerts is his ability to take requests from the audience and turn them into a spontaneous medley.

Change of venue to Hubbard county granted in Kevin Scott Skjerven case

It is also an unusual case in that a public opinion survey was requested by both the State and Skjerven's attorney. Both the State and Skjerven requested that a qualified public opinion survey be conducted to help determine whether Skjerven could receive a fair trial. A survey was conducted between February 17 and 25, by the Social Science Research Institute of the University of North Dakota. The target population and sample area was adults, 18 years of age and older, residing in telephone households in Marshall County. A total of 5,467 phone numbers were randomly generated to complete 603 interviews. (There are 6,531 registered eligible voters in Marshall County.) The margin of error for a sample of this size is plus or minus four percent with a confidence interval of 95 percent. This means that the sample mean for any question would not vary by more than four percentage points (plus or minus) in either direction from the true population mean.

Though the attorneys based their request on grounds governing prejudicial publicity, there was no evidence of extensive publicity offered during a hearing on the matter. Both attorneys argued that the survey supported their position. In fact both attorneys argued the same question in the survey supported their position. Steven Mottinger, attorney for Skjerven, argued that the change of venue should be granted because, according to his interpretation of the survey results, a larger percentage of those polled said they could not be free of prejudice. Michael Williams, Marshall County Attorney, argued that the same results indicated that a large majority of the respondents indicated that they could be free of prejudice.

Based on the rules of criminal procedure, Judge Jorgenson looked at the public survey to see if a reasonable likelihood of prejudice existed.

Judge Jorgenson said the survey supported the inference that Skjerven's name is known in the county, not only in connection with the case at hand, but the Safranski disappearance, past criminal cases, and in general, and a reputation connecting him with sexual assault. "Conceivably, this direct connection could be made at voir dire, or should the body of Ms Safranski (if in fact she is deceased) be discovered during the trial of this case, the potential jury pool could make very strong inferences between Mr. Skjerven and Ms. Safranski, not to mention the tremendous media coverage a story of this nature could generate in the Warren area."

"The totality of the circumstances surrounding this case creates a reasonable likelihood that a fair trial cannot be had in this case. In addition, a prolonged voire dire that does not come up with an unbiased twelve member jury, or an interruption of the trial for reasons beyond the control of the parties, namely the discovery of Veronica Safranski, would not be in the best interests of justice because a delay in this trial could result. Both the State and Defendant are entitled to have this matter brought to trial, and it is most likely and efficiently resolved by it being moved to another county."

was at Challenger.

The days and nights grew long for the children at the shelters, although activities were attempted and physical education equipment was made available at Challenger. Some minor damage happened to lights at Challenger as a result of the boisterous play of youngsters.

Erickson said that extra people were being called in for clean-up Tuesday to sanitize carpets and tables. There was no school in Thief River Falls Monday or Tuesday due to the power outage.

Rev. Bob LaPlante at St. Bernard's issued a thank-you to all who helped with the shelter services there, and "especially those who put in countless hours caring for the needs of their fellow human beings." He also thanked those who brought food or volunteered in other ways, but declined to try to list workers by name. "It is easy to overlook the most obvious," he said.

Accepting the risk of missing some, Erickson prepared a list of people, businesses and groups who he knew had been involved in the shelter effort. In addition to SuperValu he thanked the National Guard for cots and blankets, Pennington Main for donating [illegible], Sossip Oil for the fuel deliveries for the generator and the sheriff and police departments, STS program, fire department, Tri-Valley bus and volunteers for transporting people to and from the school.

Supt. Jerry Rubichean was on hand much of the time, along with principal Glenn Espe and assistant principal Maria Erlandson.

Others who Erickson listed by name who helped in a number of ways from handling phones and messages to food service, supervisory work or other services were Arlene Erickson, Shari Holter, Darlyn, Linda and Chris Rux, Faye Ronland, Pauline Hanson, Jane Olberg, Myrna Erickson, Sandy Johnson, Jerry Prickett, Lori and Tim Weeding, LeRoy Vigen, Inez Lenhart, Teresa Manderud, Gerald Oakland, Kathy McIntosh, Mike Hughn, Lynette Hasby, Mike Lehrer and Bruce Felt.

"Thanks also to numerous other volunteers who pitched in to help where there was a need," Erickson added.

Committe OKs vet legislation

Veteran's Affairs Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives has passed legislation that would give veterans whose disability claims were improperly evaluated by the Department of Veterans Affairs the opportunity to correct the errors.

"This bill will give veterans who believe their claims weren't evaluated correctly a chance to try and prove that," says Seventh District Congressman Collin Peterson, one of the original co-sponsors of the legislation.

The Department of Veterans' Affairs assesses a disability rating for a veteran based on the severity of the injury or illness and awards benefits based on the rating. Sometimes mistakes are made and a veteran is assigned a rating that is clearly wrong. Presently, only the Board of Veterans' Appeals has the right to initiate revision of a prior board decision.

"This legislation will give veterans the opportunity to address claims of clear and unmistakable error," Congressman Peterson said. "No veteran should be denied benefits because of a bureaucratic mistake."

April declared Sexual Assault awareness month

Violence Intervention Project (VIP) has announced that April is National Sexual Assault Awareness Month.

"If you've been sexually victimized in your lifetime, whether it was during your childhood or more recently, you can call VIP and talk to a trained advocate about your abuse. You don't even have to give your name. If you've been a victim, others in your life probably don't know or you may feel they couldn't handle it. We provide understanding in a safe, non-judgmental environment. VIP has wonderful healing tools available such as books, videos, and handouts for you to check out. If you're ready, a peer support group meets weekly," said Kelly Rugalla, program coordinator.

Last year, Violence Intervention Project received over 651 contacts from victims of sexual violence in Region I which includes Pennington, Polk, Red Lake, Marshall, Roseau, Norman, and Kittson counties. If you have been a victim of sexual assault, you can call Violence Intervention Project at 1-800-660-6667. All services are free and confidential.

Agri-Women hold political awareness meet

Penn-Mar-Red chapter of the Minnesota Agri-Women will host a session on political awareness in Thief River Falls, Saturday, April 12, at the Best Western. This session is the last of three held across the state. It will provide those attending an opportunity to learn more about the political process, and how to become more involved and influential in that process.

"As an affiliate of the American Agri-women, we get involved in public policy which affects farmers in rural communities," said Norma Hanson, MnAW President from Goodridge. Issues that are always top priority for the Agri-Women at the local, state and national level include: land use and private property rights, school lunch, rural health care and insurance; environmental quality; capital gains, estate and excise taxes; and biotechnology to name a few.

"Whether there is concern about some aspect of agriculture, health care, or schools, politics affects every one of us," said Hanson. "You know they say the world belongs to those who 'show up' I really believe that's true. We need to have more people, particularly rural women, ready and able to exert their influence in our government." One statistic from the League of Women Voters states that if a legislator receives comments from just three people on an issue, they can sway his vote.

Three separate sessions will be featured in this event. The first, "Involvement in the Political Process" includes presentations and discussion concerning caucuses, voter registration, and the structure of state government.

"Process of Electing a Candidate to Public Office" will encompass information on how to get to know your candidate's views on issues, the endorsement process and how a campaign is funded.

The day will finish with a presentation on "Becoming an Effective Lobbyist" which will highlight making effective presentations to legislators, knowing the issues and contact people and citizens versus salaried lobbyists.

Guest speakers will include Tim Finseth, House Representative from District 1A, a precinct caucus chairwoman and several experienced citizens who have helped form legislation.

The symposium which runs from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. has a $10 registration fee which includes lunch and materials. pre-registration is not necessary. The meeting is open to anyone interested in the political process. Further information can be obtained by calling Norma Hanson at 218-378-4588 or the Pennington County Extension Office at 218-681-2116 or 1-800-450-2116.

Camp Hope for children accepts '97 registrations

Camp Hope, a weekend camp for children ages 8 through 12 who have experienced the death of a loved one, will be held again this summer, June 13-15. The camp offers traditional camp activities, such as swimming, boating, hiking, and horsemanship intermingled with discussions, games, and crafts that are designed to help children understand and work through their grief. Professional staff and trained volunteers seek to provide a healthy model of the grief process to enhance children's understanding and expression of their own unique grief experience.

Camp Hope is sponsored by Hospice of the Red River Valley, and held at YMCA Camp Cormorant near Lake Park. There is no cost to campers for the weekend, however, a $25 registration fee is requested and registration fee assistance is available. Camp Hope relies heavily on a large number of adult volunteers from the community to assist staff in preparation for the camp and on the weekend. The deadline for campers and volunteers to express an interest in Camp Hope is May 1.

For camp registration and volunteer information call the Thief River Falls office of Hospice of the Red River Valley at 218-681-6189; or toll free at 1-800-237-4629.

Toy drive held during child abuse prevention month

April is child abuse prevention month. Throughout April, Violence Intervention Project (VIP) is sponsoring a toy drive for children who witness or experience violence.

Physical, sexual, and emotional abuse are a day to day problem for many children. The effects of abuse and violence are devastating and often leave scars that last a lifetime. Violence Intervention Project works with many parents and children who must flee their home due to violence and abuse and leave most or all of their belongings behind. VIP would like help giving these children toys that may lessen their distress.

Several bins have been placed around Thief River Falls to collect new or used toys from the community. Donation ideas include games, puzzles, dolls, books, cars, legos, toys, blocks, action figures, Barbies, and infant/toddler toys. The bins are located at Hugo's, SuperValu, Thief River Falls Library, VIP, and Northland Community and Technical College.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Megan Browning
Lincoln High School

On Monday night something really wonderful happened. I peeled off my many layers of socks and walked around my house barefoot. Also, when I turned on the family room light, the room actually lit up. These heart stopping occurrences might not seem important to Californians or any other warm blooded state inhabitants. For those that had to endure the power outage, however, these power pleasures are of great importance.

During my eighteen years, I have never experienced a storm like this, or the feelings that accompanied it. As I looked out our windows and into the swirling white tornadoes which blocked everything from view, my usual feelings of pleasure due to a school snow day were gone. Looking back on it now, the snow fall was pretty, but when one is struggling to stay warm, esthetically pleasing views go unnoticed.

I don't know what the storm was like in town, but in the country it seemed as if everything was intensified. The snow picked up force in the open areas and created larger drifts. Those drifts in turn prevented us from following the radio advice of, "If you want a hot meal, go to Pennington Main." All these factors combined and left those living in the country feeling more apprehensive, because, even if we wanted to, we couldn't soak in the warmth at Challenger. We were, in a way, entombed by the pulsing storm.

Although the storm was frightening, it was interesting too. During the ice cubed hours, I wondered how the pioneers endured such bone chilling winters. Despite the fact that I had thick walls with insulation surrounding me instead of sod or logs, scenes from Little House on the Prairie often entered my mind.

Since I am a member of the television generation of kids, I found it very strange to wake up on Sunday morning to the sound of my Dad searching a radio's crackling vacant stations for voices. After I learned that the power was out and the radio was our only link to the outside world, it didn't seem like such a bad idea. After a while, a voice broke through the static and announced the full extent of the damage.

For the duration of the outage, the radio stayed on and displayed some of the funny things that occur once the power goes out. Sunday morning and afternoon passed somewhat quietly. Most people hoped that their power would come back on. As night fell and people began to realize that they were going to be cold for awhile, strange calls started flowing in. The wackiest one I heard was, "Does any one know the rules for playing Pinochle." Even stranger then the call itself was that someone at KTRF actually knew how to play it.

During Sunday night and Monday morning, songs were sometimes played to lighten the mood. As each song came to the last few chords, technical difficulties would cause the sound to slow down and droop comically like Maculay Culkin's voice recorder in Home Alone 2.

If there is an award for the best song played during the storm it would have to go, without a doubt, to Cat Steven's rendition of "Morning has Broken." Hearing that as the wind howled in the 6 a.m. darkness was priceless. I couldn't stop laughing, but most likely the cold was just numbing my brain's thinking power. Even though the cause of my laughter is unknown, I will definitely remember each anecdote and think back on this storm when I go to college next year.

I will also take with me the knowledge that I come from a very close community. When a dairy farmer called in to say that he had to milk his cows by hand, I hoped that his electricity would come back on. Although that didn't happen, he later called back to say that his neighbor had ridden over on a horse to help him. Some communities don't have people like that.

My family received our own dose of community help from a far off neighbor. Around one o'clock on Monday afternoon my dad rushed into our living room and asked us if we felt a rumbling. His fears of a chimney fire were allayed when we saw the cloud of snow from our neighbor's tractor. He plowed through the monstrous drifts and in the process lifted our spirits.

Although I never wanted this storm to land on top of us, I will never forget it. It may not have been much fun to freeze through the long hours of darkness, but I have more memories from this storm than all the others put together.

Safety workshop planned for food workers

Volunteers at community festivals, church suppers or banquets such as weddings, graduation and confirmation often just rely on the cooking skills they use at home to prepare food for several hundred people. That's not such a good idea. Professional chefs know the secrets for safely cooking foods in large quantities. Now non-professionals can know them, too.

A workshop is planned for Wednesday, April 23 for "Occasional Quantity Cooks," the people who occasionally volunteer at events where food is cooked or served to a crowd. The session will start at 9 a.m. at the Northwest Grain meeting room in St. Hilaire and run until about noon.

The Occasional Quantity Cook Workshop is being conducted by Mary Jenkins, extension educator specializing in food and nutrition. The program uses materials developed by Ohio State University Extension.

It's unsettling to think about, but so many things can happen when you're feeding a large number of people. You can't just use all the same techniques used at home to cook and serve large amounts of food.

Food-borne illness strikes Americans more than 12 million times each year. More than three-quarters of the outbreaks are blamed on food eaten outside the home. While such illness can be as mild as a stomach ache, it can be much more serious and sometimes fatal. Children and the elderly are among those who are most at risk.

The cost of the three-hour workshop is $10. The fee covers reference materials and refreshments. Pre-registration by Friday, April 18, is required for the workshop. For more information contact Rhonda Amundson, Pennington County Extension Service, P.O. Box 616, Thief River Falls, MN 56701 or at 218-681-2116.

Spring Fingerplays and Songs

Five Spring Flowers

Five spring flowers, all in a row,
The first one said, "We need rain to grow!"
The second one said, "Oh, my! We need water!"
The third one said, "Yes, it is getting hotter!"
The fourth one said, "I see clouds in the sky."
The fifth one said, "I wonder why!"

Then BOOM went the thunder
And ZAP went the lightning!
That springtime storm was really frightening!
But the flowers weren't worried, no, no, no, no!
The rain helped them to grow, grow, GROW!

Up Pop the Flowers!

We plant some seeds in the dirt.
(Pretend to plant seeds)
The rain falls in a shower.
(Raise arms, then wiggle fingers downward)
The sun comes out and what do you know!
(Squat to floor)
Up pop the flowers!

The Days of Spring

(Tune: "The Farmer in the Dell")

The days of spring are here
Warm, sunny days are near.
Birds in trees, flowers and bees
The days of spring are here.

How Different Is The View From My Child's Level?

Toddlers scramble out of their strollers, climb on anything handy and insist on being picked up because they want to see better and reach farther. When a child stands on the floor, he can't look out of most windows. Beds and toilets seem very high and big, and doorknobs and light switches are too high to reach.

When a child goes to a public bathroom, the toilets, sinks, towels and dryers are all out of reach. Most water fountains are too high for a child to use, and most of the interesting features of stores and restaurants (cash registers, cafeteria counters, bakery bins, etc.) are all out of sight. When a child has to sit in a stroller, his view is even more limited.

To see what your child sees, get down to his level and look around. You won't see your own kitchen sink or the tops of your tables. In a store, you won't be able to look at what people are doing behind counters or see most of the interesting merchandise. And you will understand why nursery schools and day care centers are so appealing to young children: everything is at eye level, and all the tables, chairs and counters are easy for children to reach.

Once you see how unsatisfying your child's view can be, you will understand why he wants to climb and be carried. Pick him up often so he can see what is happening around him, let him sit on store counters (while you carefully supervise), and provide safe stools or pillows at home so he can climb a little and see more of his world.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Help your child satisfy his curiosity by talking about the things that are too high for him to see.

Thank you all [illegible] for being generous, for being helpful, for caring [illegible] neighbors, for being the old-fashioned kind of good people [illegible] thought we wouldn't see any more.

Safety workshop planned for food workers

Volunteers at community festival, church suppers or banquets such as weddings, graduation and confirmation often just rely on the cooking skills they use at home to prepare food for several hundred people. That's not such a good idea. Professional chefs know the secrets for safely cooking foods in large quantities. Now non-professionals can know them, too.

A workshop is planned for Wednesday, April 23 for "Occasional Quantity Cooks," the people who occasionally volunteer at events where food is cooked or served to a crowd. The session will start at 9 a.m. at the Northwest Grain meeting room in St. Hilaire and run until about noon.

The Occasional Quantity Cook Workshop is being conducted by Mary Jenkins, extension educator specializing in food and nutrition. The program uses materials developed by Ohio State University Extension.

It's unsettling to think about, but so many things can happen when you're feeding a large number of people. You can't just use all the same techniques used at home to cook and serve large amounts of food.

Food-borne illness strikes Americans more than 12 million times each year. More than three-quarters of the outbreaks are blamed on food eaten outside the home. While such illness can be as mild as a stomach ache, it can be much more serious and sometimes fatal. Children and the elderly are among those who are most at risk.

The cost of the three-hour workshop is $10. The fee covers reference materials and refreshments. Pre-registration by Friday, April 18, is required for the workshop. For more information contact Rhonda Amundson, Pennington County Extension Service, P.O. Box 616, Thief River Falls, MN 56701 or at 218-681-2116.

Five spring flowers, all in a row,
The first one said, "We need rain to grow!"
The second one said, "Oh, my! We need water!"
The third one said, "Yes, it is getting hotter!"
The fourth one said, "I see clouds in the sky."
The fifth one said, "I wonder why!"

Then BOOM went the thunder
And ZAP went the lightning!
That springtime storm was really frightening!
But the flowers weren't worried, no, no, no, no!
The rain helped them to grow, grow, GROW!

Up Pop the Flowers!

We plant some seeds in the dirt
(Pretend to plant seeds)
The rain falls in a shower.
(Raise arms, then wiggle fingers downward)
The sun comes out and what do you know!
(Squat to floor)
Up pop the flowers!
(Pop up!)

The days of spring are here.

How Different Is The View From My Child's Level?

Toddlers scramble out of their strollers, climb on anything handy and insist on being picked up because they want to see better and reach farther. When a child stands on the floor, he can't look out of most windows. Beds and toilets seem very high and big, and doorknobs and light switches are too high to reach.

When a child goes to a public bathroom, the toilets, sinks, towels and dryers are all out of reach. Most water fountains are too high for a child to use, and most of the interesting features of stores and restaurants: cash registers, cafeteria counters, bakery bins, etc., are all out of sight. When a child has to sit in a stroller, his view is even more limited.

To see what your child sees, get down to his level and look around. You won't see your own kitchen sink or the tops of your tables. In a store, you won't be able to look at what people are doing behind counters or see most of the interesting merchandise. And you will understand why nursery schools and day care centers are so appealing to young children: everything is at eye level, and all the tables, chairs and counters are easy for children to reach.

Once you see how unsatisfying your child's view can be, you will understand why he wants to climb and be carried. Pick him up often so he can see what is happening around him, let him sit on store counters (while you carefully supervise), and provide safe stools or pillows at home so he can climb a little and see more of his world.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Help your child satisfy his curiosity, by talking about the things that are too high for him to see.

SPEAKING OF

The April, 1997, Disaster

When the April [illegible] Disaster [illegible] Sunday, I kept telling myself how lucky I was. I was home. I had warmth and someplace to heat water for coffee and soup (from a [illegible] gas fireplace). I wasn't snowbound in the country. I had a battery operated radio so I could hear what was going on. I had candles and a couple of flashlights with batteries that worked. I had a son with friends who could help me, after the cordless phone was replaced with an old one. I could call people and get help if I needed it. My house wasn't surrounded by flood water. I could navigate the city streets with my car and get supplies, and I had water coming out of my faucets.

Other people had it even better. They had generators and battery- and gas-powered sump pumps, propane heaters and grills and many other amenities that made living through the disaster not so bad.

Many other people, maybe most of them, had it much worse. Some had no heat, no water, no flashlights, no way to heat food, were stranded in the country threatened by flood waters with no telephone or way to call for help, no radios, no one to help them.

Back at our house, Sunday wasn't too bad, other than the fact that the sump pump hole had to be drained of water every five minutes with a five gallon bucket. No matter that flashlights that could be found had dead and dying batteries, that I couldn't find candles and when I did, they didn't stay lit, that I needed batteries for my radio. Besides, we figured the disaster would be over in a few hours.

As Sunday dawned with no relief in sight and the thought of another 24 to 36 hours of power loss, I became crabby and miserable, grump-grump. My son hated the sight of the sump pump and pail as he dragged his tired body back to the basement corner every few minutes, the basement was so hot it was stifling and it was miserable to try to sleep there, the upstairs bedrooms were frigid and it was miserable to try to sleep there, flashlights were getting dimmer, candles didn't give enough light as they burned down, we couldn't eat anything but cold food except when someone sat and held a kettle over the fireplace, food in the fridge was getting warm and food in the freezer was getting soft, we couldn't shower (grump-grump-self pity).

As I became more sleepy, irritable, hungry, exhausted and dirty and the days and long, cold nights wore on, I'm ashamed to say I became more and more filled with self pity. Grump-grump, my head ached, my back ached, the basement floor and rec room carpet were wet because the pail couldn't keep up with the sump water. I hated to see the sun go down because it got colder and I felt completely isolated from the rest of the world, grump-grump.

But all it took to make me wake up and realize others had it worse than I did was to listen to the radio. All of my petty problems and silly self-pity went out the window when I compared myself to others. So many people were really suffering. Some had no water, some were stranded in the country with ice-covered roads and snow drifts and blizzard winds that prevented them from escaping, some had basements filled with water, some were surrounded by flood water, some were old and/or infirm, some had small children, some had no telephones, some had no one to help them cope with the tragedy. Shame on me for feeling sorry for myself. I should have joined the good guys.

Because something was brought out during this tragedy - something good. During the disaster there were people who didn't have time to pity themselves - they were too busy helping others - they were the good guys and gals. They were the heroes and heroines of this April, 1997, Disaster. They gave of their possessions and themselves without reserve, without personal gain, out of the goodness of their hearts.

There is no possible way I could remember all the names or even know of all the people who were good samaritans, but they know who they are and other people know who they are and I am telling them they were certainly appreciated. Those who received help from them will remember forever and so will those of us who simply hear of their good deeds.

Thank you all heroes and heroines - for being generous, for being helpful, for caring, for loving your neighbors, for being the old-fashioned kind of "good people" that we thought we wouldn't see any more.

Speaking of heroes and heroines, those who can't be ignored are the good folks at KTRF, the upbeat announcers and super efficient staff who kept us informed, solved our problems, cheered us up, listened to our woes and gripes, located and sold things needed to get us through this disaster, found the missing, and helped us feel less alone through the busy days and long, cold, dark nights. Thank you all for making us feel warm inside through these cold times. You all deserve medals!

But since I am not entirely over my fit of grumpies, boo to those who tried to make money from the disaster by charged exorbitant prices for things that people needed to keep themselves alive, boo to those who griped about their own petty problems, me included, boo to those who completely forgot their neighbors during the crisis, and boo to those who turned on all of their appliances, computers, vcrs, video games, outdoor and unnecessary lights as soon as they got electricity while part of the city was still without any power.

Hope you are all warm and well as you read this. We made it!

Safety workshop planned for food workers

Volunteers at community festival, church suppers or banquets such as weddings, graduation and confirmation often just rely on the cooking skills they use at home to prepare food for several hundred people. That's not such a good idea. Professional chefs know the secrets for safely cooking foods in large quantities. Now non-professionals can know them, too.

A workshop is planned for Wednesday, April 23 for "Occasional Quantity Cooks," the people who occasionally volunteer at events where food is cooked or served to a crowd. The session will start at 9 a.m. at the Northwest Grain meeting room in St. Hilaire and run until about noon.

The Occasional Quantity Cook Workshop is being conducted by Mary Jenkins, extension educator specializing in food and nutrition. The program uses materials developed by Ohio State University Extension.

It's unsettling to think about, but so many things can happen when you're feeding a large number of people. You can't just use all the same techniques used at home to cook and serve large amounts of food.

Food-borne illness strikes Americans more than 12 million times each year. More than three-quarters of the outbreaks are blamed on food eaten outside the home. While such illness can be as mild as a stomach ache, it can be much more serious and sometimes fatal. Children and the elderly are among those who are most at risk.

The cost of the three-hour workshop is $10. The fee covers reference materials and refreshments. Pre-registration by Friday, April 18, is required for the workshop. For more information contact Rhonda Amundson, Pennington County Extension Service, P.O. Box 616, Thief River Falls, MN 56701 or at 218-681-2116.

SPEAKING OF

Sherry LaCoursiere

...The April, 1997, Disaster

When the April, 1997, Disaster hit Saturday, I kept telling myself how lucky I was. I was home. I had warmth and someplace to heat water for coffee and soup (from a basement gas fireplace); I wasn't snowbound in the country; I had a battery-operated radio so I could hear what was going on; I had candles and a couple of flashlights with batteries that worked; I had a son with friends who could help me; after the cordless phone was replaced with an old one, I could call people and get help if I needed it; my house wasn't surrounded by flood water; I could navigate the city streets with my car and get supplies; and I had water coming out of my faucets.

Other people had it even better. They had generators and battery- and gas-powered sump pumps, propane heaters and grills and many other amenities that made living through the disaster not so bad.

Many other people, maybe most of them, had it much worse. Some had no heat, no water, no flashlights, no way to heat food, were stranded in the country threatened by spring waters with no telephone or way to call for help, no radio, no one to help them.

Back at our house, Saturday wasn't too bad, other than the fact that the sump pump hole had to be drained of water every five minutes with a five gallon bucket. No matter that flashlights that could be found had dead and dying batteries, that I couldn't find candles and when I did, they didn't stay lit, that I needed batteries for my radio. Besides, we figured the disaster would be over in a few hours.

As Sunday dawned with no relief in sight and the thought of another 24 to 36 hours of power loss, I became crabby and miserable, grump-grump. My son hated the sight of the sump pump and pail as he dragged his tired body back to the basement corner every few minutes; the basement was so hot it was suffocating and it was miserable to try to sleep there, the upstairs bedrooms were frigid and it was miserable to try to sleep there, flashlights were getting dimmer, candles didn't give enough light as they burned down, we couldn't eat anything but cold food except when someone sat and held a kettle over the fireplace, food in the fridge was getting warm and food in the freezer was getting soft, we couldn't shower, grump-grump (self-pity).

As I became more sleepy, irritable, hungry, exhausted and dirty and the days and long, cold nights wore on, I'm ashamed to say I became more and more filled with self-pity. Grump-grump, my head ached, my back ached, the basement floor and rec room carpet were wet because the pail couldn't keep up with the sump water, I hated to see the sun go down because it got colder and I felt completely isolated from the rest of the world, grump-grump.

But all it took to make me wake up and realize others had it worse than I did was to listen to the radio. All of my petty problems and silly self-pity went out the window when I compared myself to others. So many people were really suffering. Some had no water, some were stranded in the country with ice-covered roads and snow drifts and blizzard winds that prevented them from escaping, some had basements filled with water, some were surrounded by flood water, some were old and/or infirm, some had small children, some had no telephones, some had no one to help them cope with the tragedy. Shame on me for feeling sorry for myself. I should have joined the good guys.

Because something was brought out during this tragedy - something good. During the disaster there were people who didn't have time to pity themselves - they were too busy helping others - they were the good guys and gals. They were the heroes and heroines of this April, 1997, Disaster. They gave of their possessions and themselves without reserve, without personal gain, out of the goodness of their hearts.

There is no possible way I could remember all the names or even know of all the people who were good samaritans, but they know who they are and other people know who they are and I am telling them they were certainly appreciated. Those who received help from them will remember forever and so will those of us who simply hear of their good deeds.

Thank you all heroes and heroines - for being generous, for being helpful, for caring, for loving your neighbors, for being the old-fashioned kind of "good people" that we thought we wouldn't see any more.

Speaking of heroes and heroines, those who can't be ignored are the good folks at KTRF, the upbeat announcers and super efficient staff who kept us informed, solved our problems, cheered us up, listened to our woes and gripes, located and sold things needed to get us through this disaster, found the missing, and helped us feel less alone through the busy days and long, cold, dark nights. Thank you all for making us feel warm inside through these cold times. You all deserve medals!

But since I am not entirely over my fit of grumples, boo to those who tried to make money from the disaster by charged exorbitant prices for things that people needed to keep themselves alive, boo to those who griped about their own petty problems, me included; boo to those who completely forgot their neighbors during the crisis; and boo to those who turned on all of their appliances, computers, vcrs, video games, outdoor and unnecessary lights as soon as they got electricity while part of the city was still without any power.

Hope you are all warm and well as you read this. We made it!

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

Protect septic system from flood damage

If you have a septic system in an area that is subject to flooding this spring, there is potential for damage to the system. However, you can take action before the flooding to minimize the damage, says Barbara Liukkonen of the University of Minnesota's Extension Service.

"When floodwaters cover your septic system, it should not be used," says Liukkonen, a U of M water quality education coordinator. "If the drainfield or ground above your septic tank floods, your individual sewage treatment system is not working."

Liukkonen adds that if your drainfield is saturated or has standing water not caused by flooding from a nearby river or lake, you may have a serious problem. Contact your county health department or planning and zoning department for an inspection.

Before flooding occurs, you can prepare to minimize the adverse effects of floodwaters on your septic system, says Liukkonen. She lists the following steps:

• Seal all possible points of entry to the system. If possible, seal the manhole and inspection ports to keep excess water out of the septic tank.

• Turn off the pump at the circuit box before the area floods. If you have a pump in the lift station of a mound system, turn off the electricity. Don't forget to turn the pump back on before you use the system again. If possible, remove the pump from the tank to prevent sediment damage.

• Waterproof all electrical connections to avoid electrical shock or damage to wiring, pumps, and the electrical system.

• Plug the sewer line where it leaves your house. This may prevent sewage backup into the house. Be sure to remove the blockage before using the system again.

• If possible, have the tank pumped a week or more before the area floods. If floodwater enters the septic tank, sludge may be suspended and flushed into the drainfield. Proper pumping will reduce the amount of solid material and scum that is available to flush into the drainfield. Be sure there is enough time after pumping for the tank to refill with effluent so the tank doesn't float when the area is flooded.

After the flood, says Liukkonen, you can help your system recover. She lists the following steps to accomplish this.

• Pump the system again as soon as possible after the flood. Be sure to pump both the tank and the lift station. This will remove silt and debris that have washed into the system.

• Be careful not to compact the drainfield area by driving or operating equipment in the area, since saturated ground is especially susceptible. Compaction reduces the capacity of your drainfield to treat wastewater and could lead to an early failure of your entire system.

• Review electrical connections for damage or wear before turning electricity back on.

• Check that the manhole cover is secure and that inspection ports have not been blocked or damaged. Check for animal damage or intrusion in the drainfield area.

• Check the vegetation over your septic tank and drainfield. Repair erosion damage: sod or re-seed as necessary to provide a good plant cover.

• Inside, be sure to disinfect thoroughly if sewage backed up into the house or garage. Disease-causing organism (pathogens) in wastewater can cause serious illness, such as dysentery, hepatitis, and other waterborne illnesses.

"Remember, if your septic system has been flooded, your well may also have been inundated," says Liukkonen. "Use an alternate water source until you can test and disinfect your water supply."

A 24-page illustrated book, "Septic System Owner's Guide," is available through county offices of the Minnesota Extension Service. The book is a complete guide to the operation and maintenance of individual sewage treatment systems. The book can also be ordered from the Minnesota Extension Service Distribution Center. The cost is $4 per copy plus shipping and sales tax (where applicable). To order call 1-800-876-8636 or 612-624-4900. Ask for item PC-6583-GMM.

On Saturday very few people would have thought that snowmobilers would have one more chance to ride. A large crowd filled the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center Saturday for the Home, Sport and Family Show. A blizzard on Sunday put everything on hold.

The Times 5th Annual Home, Sport and Family Show attracted a large crowd of local and area residents Saturday. Exhibitors also filled the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center with 134 booth spaces rented. Success on the second day of the show was quashed by a blizzard.

Lawn mowers and personal watercraft were more on the minds of visitors to the Home, Sport and Family Show in Thief River Falls. Unfortunately, a blast of winter returned causing a power outage for a large portion of northwestern Minnesota.

Outdoor exhibitors at The Times Home, Sport and Family Show last weekend included boats, campers, a mobile home, and National Guard vehicles and equipment. A large crowd attended the event at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center in Thief River Falls on Saturday.

Fire reported last Tuesday at SWIS PennCo

Fire at SwisPennCo. brought the Thief River Falls Fire Department to the solid waste handling facility at 2:11 p.m. Tuesday.

Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman said the fire started in a dryer outside of the facility when a cyclone became plugged. The fire then spread on a conveyor belt and was brought into the building and a cubing machine and from there the wind picked it up and it spread to a stock pile of the pelletized product. Bjorkman said he wasn't sure of the dollar amount of loss or whether it caused any significant damage to machinery or the building. A sprinkler system in the building kept the fire down until the fire department arrived on the scene.

There were no injuries as a result of the fire.

Power outage brings residents together

Area residents rise to the challenge of blizzard and flood

American Legion Post 117 had electrical service at its clubrooms and made the facilities available for serving hot food during power outage in the area Monday. Pictures above show the busy kitchen and one of the many family groups taking advantage of the hospitality to get a break from cold homes and wet basements.

Power plant generators were put into service as soon as electric supplies to the City of Thief River Falls went out about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. The old generators, which once were able to provide the capacity for the entire city in its younger, less industrial days, provided electricity for vital services during the nearly two-day outage.

Eri's Market on Eighth street in Thief River Falls was one of the businesses which opened its doors despite lack of electrical power to provide food to the public Sunday and Monday.

Firewood was at a premium during the power outage Sunday and Monday in the Thief River Falls area. This couple picked the remains of crate scraps made available by the Occupational Development Center at its crate manufacturing operation on Dewey Avenue. KTRF radio provided a vital service in connecting persons who needed firewood with those who had supplies to sell or give away during the emergency.

Serving line Monday evening at Challenger Elementary School involved people of all ages. The school had about 130 to 150 people stay overnight Sunday and about 60 on Monday. Food service personnel served meals to the people forced out of their homes by the cold weather during the nearly two-day power outage.

Curled up in comfort on an available sleeping bag not far from a wood-burning stove, this cat didn't seem to have a problem with the power outage that left thousands of homes without heat Sunday and Monday. Pets were a concern for many people during the outage.

Jessie Zornes and his daughter Melissa, 5 (left) were in the first family to arrive at the shelter provided at Challenger Elementary School during the two-day power outage Sunday and Monday. Also among the early arrivals were Darrel Flaten (right), Laurie Green and her son Justin Rud, 3. Zornes wife Toni and two other daughters and Green's other son Reggie Cummings were also with those pictured.

Shelters provide assistance for many area people

Gari Nelson and her children Duane Bourmon, age five months (pictured) and Tricia DeGroat, age four, were among those making use of the shelter at Challenger Elementary School during the power outage. Geri and her sister Cindy—along with Cindy's 11-month old daughter Natashia and two-week old son Jordan—were staying with their mother, Carol Nelson, when the power went out. They came to Challenger school about 9:30 a.m. Sunday and had been there all the time until this photo was taken Monday at 6 p.m.

Wayne Rahlf, sports director at KTRF radio, was one of the first station workers on the scene early Sunday morning when the station went on the air with auxiliary power. When this photo was taken Monday, he had been on microphone and telephone duty for most of 30 hours.

Peg Mahikens was one of the KTRF radio personnel who manned the phones and the microphones during the area's power outage Sunday and Monday.

Dana Klos of the city's electric department checked a grid of the city's power lines while chief operator Gary Page handled a telephone call. The plant put its four emergency generators into service to provide electricity for strategic areas of the city when its power supply from Minnkota Power Cooperative was lost due to a severe ice and wind storm.

Spring birds scrounged for food in the frigid weather that struck the Times' area Saturday evening, bringing a power outage which began about 1:30 a.m. Sunday and continued into the evening Monday.

National Guard unit provides emergency help

Assistance in several areas during the emergency created by weather and power outage in the area Sunday and Monday, April 6 and 7, was provided by Company B of the National Guard operating out of the armory in Thief River Falls.

According to Sgt. Darin Teie, a number of members of the unit are on flood duty in other communities and other guardsmen were activated about 1 p.m. Sunday to provide assistance.

Guardsmen operated a Bradley Fighting Vehicle (tank) and an M-577 personnel carrier to assist law enforcement personnel in rescue and evacuation of about half a dozen people from the rural area.

They also provided 75 cots and blankets for use in public shelters set up at Challenger elementary school, St. Bernard's Catholic Church and Northwest Medical Center and another 20 to the fire and rescue unit from Karlstad for its shelter in that community.

The state also provided five trailer-mounted generators towed by National Guard trucks which arrived in Thief River Falls late Monday afternoon—about the time power was restored in the armory area of the city. With power back on line here, the crew overnighted in Thief River Falls and left with the generator units on Tuesday for Moorhead.

The armory is also in the service area fed by the emergency generation at the city power plant and therefore had heat and light during the general power outage. While no members of the public stayed overnight at the armory, a number stopped in during the day to warm up and spend some time.

Joining Sergeant Teie in service at the armory from 1 p.m. Sunday and on were Sgt. Al Casavant, Sgt. Ricky Vinje and PFC Warren Fast, all of Warroad; Specialist Jason King, Lake Bronson; SSG Mark Appelt, Bemidji; Sgt. Jeffrey Olson and Sgt. Mike Finseth, Thief River Falls; and maintenance supervisor Carl Magers, Plummer.

Outage generates big demand for portable power

Demand for portable generators accelerated from "what have you got?" to "give me one!" as the widespread power outage created problems for homeowners Sunday morning, according to Rick Kezar of Arctic Cat Inc. in Thief River Falls.

Kezar, George Thorson and Brian Espeseth worked around the clock beginning about 2 a.m. Sunday, just minutes after the main power supplying Thief River Falls and surrounding area went out.

According to Wayne Hanson of Arctic's power generator department, the company attempted to supply dealers as much as possible in the area including Thief River Falls, Warren, Grand Forks and Hillsboro, ND and several other communities. Locally the sales were conducted through RV Sports.

Hanson said all the generators on storage locally were made available immediately and additional units were brought over from Grand Forks, ND, to attempt to meet the demand on Sunday.

A spokesperson for RV Sports said that the dealership opened about 2 a.m. Sunday and that Randy Adamson, Loren Lendobeja and others kept the business open throughout the emergency until late Monday night. About 150 generators were sold at RV Sports Sunday and another 50 to 60 on Monday.

Arctic Cat estimated that at least 700 generators were made available to dealers for sale in the area, including two semi-trailer loads which arrived from Ohio on Monday and on Tuesday morning.

While demand has decreased with the restoration of power to much of the area on Monday, there were still a number of people making generator purchases early Tuesday. As of noon Tuesday, RV Sports had a supply of 1,400, 2,500 and 3,000-watt generators on hand that were not committed to persons on a waiting list.

Wayne Hanson said that the supply of generators ran the gamut from 750-watt, which would handle a 1/3-horsepower sump pump to 4,000-watt units which could handle the necessary demands of most households.

In addition to the Arctic Cat units handled by RV Sports, generators were also being sold by Hardware Hank which was open Sunday afternoon and from about 9 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday.

Jan Nordin of Hardware Hank said the store sold its small stock of generators immediately Sunday and Jon Anderson drove to Milbank, SD, and picked up eight more units—all that the store could be allocated—from the Hardware Hank warehouse there. Those were gone to people on a waiting list within an hour following his return about 7 p.m. Since then an additional 10 units have been received, some of which were sold as of Tuesday morning.

Nordin said there was also a demand for propane ("sunflower head") heaters, propane cylinders, pumps, flashlight batteries, extension cords and cord components and drain plugs. He said that supplies of heaters, cylinders, batteries and some other items have been replenished as of Tuesday while some other supplies will not be received until Thursday.

Tunheim sponsors bill on watercraft

Rep. Jim Tunheim has taken a stand on the personal watercraft issue.

"In the past few years, personal watercrafts (PWC), such as jet skis and wave runners, have grown in popularity by leaps and bounds. In the summer Minnesota's lakes and rivers are busy with people enjoying this new found freedom on the water. But growing concerns about this hobby have prompted lawmakers to take a closer look at the noise they make and question their safety. A task force, made up of industry representatives, Department of Natural Resources (DNR) officials, lake shore property owners, and others met from November 1995 to October 1996 to study the issues of safety and noise.

"The recommendations of the task force were drafted into a bill which I sponsored this session. Under the bill:

- PWC operators would be required to purchase an operator's permit and to have one in their possession while riding. To obtain a license, the applicant would have to complete an approved safety course and pass a test on the operation of personal watercraft.
- PWC users would have to have a safety certificate. People could not operate a PWC without one. The bill prohibits anyone under the age of 13 from getting a safety certificate. Those between 13 and 17 may not be issued one unless they are in possession of a valid watercraft operator's permit from the state, or the state they live in.
- It would be illegal to operate a PWC at greater than slow-no wake speed within 100 feet of a shoreline, swimmer, dock, or raft between sunset and 8 a.m.

"Unfortunately another bill that drastically limits the use of personal watercraft has received much attention in the last few days. This bill would ban the operation of PWC from 8 a.m. to noon on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. It would also force PWC users to throttle down to a no-wake speed from 7 p.m. until sunset on those days. The bill would also limit PWC to a no-wake speed within 200 feet of shorelines, swimmers and docks. They currently are restricted within 100 feet.

"We need common sense solutions to the concerns at hand. I don't believe telling people they cannot ride their jet skies and wave runners on weekend mornings is the solution, and I will continue to speak out against this bill.

"I appreciate all the calls and letters I received from constituents on this issue. Many people from Northwestern Minnesota contacted me to encourage me to fight for their rights to continue to use personal watercrafts. There are many responsible citizens who own and operate these machines. While I agree there is always room to make a sport or hobby safer, I don't believe we need to enforce unrealistic standards."

Power outage brings residents together

Area residents rise to the challenge of blizzard and flood

American Legion Post 117 had electrical service at its clubrooms and made the facilities available for serving hot food during power outage in the area Monday. Pictures above show the busy kitchen and one of the many family groups taking advantage of the hospitality to get a break from cold homes and wet basements.

Firewood was at a premium during the power outage Sunday and Monday in the Thief River Falls area. This couple picked the remains of crate scraps made available by the Occupational Development Center at its crate manufacturing operation on Dewey Avenue. KTRF radio provided a vital service in connecting persons who needed firewood with those who had supplies to sell or give away during the emergency.

Power plant generators were put into service as soon as electric supplies to the City of Thief River Falls went out about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. The old generators, which once were able to provide the capacity for the entire city in its younger, less industrial days, provided electricity for vital services during the nearly two-day outage.

Chervestad is Mustangs' MVP

It was no surprise that Angie Chervestad was named the most valuable player on the 1996-97 Red Lake County Central girls high school basketball team.

The six-foot junior averaged 19.6 points and 11.4 rebounds per game to lead the Mustangs in both categories.

Other team honors went to 5-9 junior Jenni Mornsville, most improved, 5-6 junior Katie O'Neill, Miss Hustle, and 5-6 senior Catherine Rosten, best defensive player.

A 12-11 finish was a bit below preseason expectations, admitted Red Lake County Central coach Rick Kivisto. "I thought we would win a few more games than that," he said.

Two of the losses came in overtime games against Thief River Falls and Tri-County during the early-season Northland Community and Technical College Invitational.

The Mustangs' penchant for turnovers and low shooting percentages kept them from reaching preseason goals, according to Kivisto. "We still had too many turnovers against pressure defense," he explained, "and our outside shooting was never as good as it should have been. Fifty percent free throw shooting won't do it, either."

Catherine Rosten, Ami Tvedt and Tara Bachand were the only seniors on this year's club. Chervestad will lead the group returning next winter – a team that could rely heavily on a this year's freshman class that sent Tracy Rosten and Sylvia Hilgeman to the varsity this winter.

THE CLUB

Seniors lead Grygla-Gatzke

Shaun Verbout headed a group of 10 Grygla-Gatzke seniors who helped the 1996-97 Eagles to a [illegible] Sub-Section 31A championship [illegible] high school basketball season.

The versatile 6-1 Verbout finished as the Eagles' all-time scoring leader with 1,0[illegible] career points, including a team-high 14.8 scoring average this winter.

He had plenty of help in a balanced attack that included 6-1 senior Aaron Holthusen (11.3 points per game), 6-3 senior Jim Engelstad (10.5), 5-9 junior Alex Anderson (8.6) and 6-0 senior Jesse Lunsetter (8.0).

"We finished right about where we expected," said Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson. "We maybe lost a couple more than we thought we would, but overall, we did all right."

The Eagles got off to a 10-0 start, struggled a bit at midseason, then finished strong.

"I think we all got tested a little bit when we started so strong," said Johnson. "I usually don't expect my teams to play all that well until later in the season. A number of things led to our slump, but the kids hung in there and played through it. The last six games or so we came back and played well."

After beating Goodridge 64-53 and Warren-Alvarado-Oslo 58-48 in Sub-Section 31A play, the Eagles lost to eventual champion Red Lake 52-41 in the Section 8A semifinals and fell to Badger/Greenbush-Middle River 73-52 in the third place game.

Verbout, Holthusen and Engelstad were all two-year starters for the Eagles. Over the past three years the 10 seniors were part of a program that won 53 games.

"We've had a pretty successful run with these guys," noted Johnson. "We'll definitely miss them."

Anderson, who broke into the starting line-up during the season, and Philip Brateng, who worked his way into the role of the sixth man, will be the top varsity players returning next winter, with Andrew Sundberg leading a group of junior varsity products who will have to fill the holes left by the departing seniors.

"I've enjoyed the view from the top," offered Johnson. "Next year we certainly won't be the favorites, but I think we'll be competitive."

TRF sports schedule changes announced

Several weather-related changes were made to the Thief River Falls spring sports schedule this week.

Monday postponements included season openers for the Northland Community and Technical College baseball and softball teams at Fergus Falls and North Hennepin, respectively.

Changes made to Tuesday's Lincoln High School schedule included a season-opening softball game at home against Bemidji and an appearance at the Warren-Alvarado-Oslo Indoor Invitational for the boys and girls track teams that was scheduled to be held at Concordia College.

An addition to the track schedule will find the Prowlers running the Bemidji Invitational Saturday beginning at 11 a.m.

DNR NEWS

Trees, Shrubs Available

Two tough Upper Midwest winters in a row have demonstrated the importance of thick cover to shelter wildlife from killing windchills and deep snows. One of the best options to provide this refuge are plantings of the right mix of trees and shrubs, according to the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

Shelterbelts, windbreaks, or pockets of trees and shrubs provide vital winter cover for deer, pheasants, owls, grouse, rabbits and many more wildlife species. Professional advice from the local DNR Forestry Office is available to help people select the right varieties and quantities for particular situations and locations. For those who qualify, cost-share assistance may be an option.

For spring planting, Minnesota State Forest Nurseries have a good supply of all types of cone-bearing and hardwood trees. Four Season Wildlife Packets, which include a carefully selected combination of trees and shrubs, are also available. Good supplies of white pine, a tree receiving special attention these days, are still on hand. These trees will be for late April or May delivery. Trees and shrubs are also available from local private nurseries.

For more information, call the DNR Information Center at 1-800-766-6000, the State Forest Nursery at (218)372-3183, or a local nursery.

Multiple matches took place on the two mats used for the fourth annual Thief River Falls Takedown Club Big Cat elementary school wrestling tournament held Saturday in the Lincoln High School gym. Competition was held in various weight classes in four age-group divisions – grades K-through-2, grades 3-4, grades 5-6, and grades 7-8. Trophies were presented to first and second place wrestlers; medals went to third and fourth place finishers.

DNR NEWS

A half million motorists whose license plates expire in March and April will soon have the opportunity to help conserve Minnesota's most important wildlife habitats. Along with their renewal notices, motorists will receive a colorful reminder that they have the option to buy Minnesota's new Conservation License Plate.

The tan-colored plate, which features two white-tailed deer along a Minnesota lakeshore at sunset, is becoming a common traveler along Minnesota roadways. Since its introduction last May, more than 5,500 have been sold. The plate was created by the 1995 Legislature to raise funds for the Reinvest In Minnesota (RIM) Critical Habitat Match program. If DNR estimates of 20,000 plates sold during the first two years prove correct, $600,000 would be available for critical habitat protection.

"Critical habitats are continually being threatened with destruction," said DNR Fish and Wildlife Director Roger Holmes. "The RIM Critical Habitat Match program, with funds from the Conservation Plate and donations from conservation groups, is a tremendous tool for preserving these areas for future generations."

Motorists who choose to purchase the plate pay an additional $30 per year, all of which goes into the RIM account. This program uses state funds matched with private donations to purchase critical habitats like wetlands, native prairies, old growth forests, deer wintering areas, or other unique areas. All lands acquired through the program are held by the DNR as Wildlife Management Areas or Scientific and Natural Areas, and are open for certain public uses.

For more information on purchasing the new plates, contact the deputy registrar where license tabs are renewed.

Flooded drinking wells pose considerable threat

Contaminated drinking water wells will be the most important health concern during this year's spring floods, according to officials at the Minnesota Department of Health (MDH).

At the same time, simply coming in contact with flood water shouldn't pose any significant risk of infectious disease, officials emphasized.

"Our primary concern is private drinking water wells," said state Health Commissioner Anne Barry. "Private well owners should assume their wells are contaminated if the flood waters have come anywhere close to the well casing. That means your well will have to be flushed out, disinfected and tested before you can start using the water again."

City water systems are unlikely to become contaminated, she added, because city wells are generally well protected from flooding.

Detailed instructions for disinfecting and testing private drinking water wells are available from local health departments and MDH district offices. MDH maintains offices in Bemidji, Duluth, Fergus Falls, Mankato, Marshall, Rochester, St. Cloud and St. Paul.

Private well owners who anticipate flooding may want to seal up their wells before the floods arrive, Commissioner Barry said. Sealing your well won't necessarily prevent contamination — or eliminate the need for disinfection. However, it can still make the post-flood clean-up go more smoothly, by keeping sediment and debris out of the well.

Officials suggest taking the following steps if you think your well may be flooded.

- Before you take your well out of services, fill up a number of containers with a supply of clean water — for use during the flood.
- Disconnect the power supply from your well. If you need help consult with a licensed well contractor or pump installer.
- If you have time, get a well contractor to install a water-tight seal on your well — replacing the regular cap or seal, which must be vented to allow proper operation of the well.
- If you don't have time to get your well professionally sealed, clean off the outside of the well casing and cover it with a heavy duty trash bag or some other form of heavy plastic sheeting. Secure the sheeting with duct tape or some other type of waterproof tape.

Simple skin contact with flood water or backed-up sewage shouldn't pose any significant infectious disease risk, Commissioner Barry emphasized — although flood water can often conceal potential injury hazards.

"Good basic hygiene can help you avoid any potential risk of infectious illness," she said. "You should wear rubber boots and rubber gloves if you need to work around flood water or sewage, and you should wash up thoroughly with soap and water when you're done. It's especially important to clean up before you eat or drink anything."

Although people may have concerns about sewage leaks or other flood-related spill incidents, those events don't really affect the underlying health risks, according to Commissioner Barry.

"You should always assume that flood water is contaminated," she noted.

MDH officials say there is also no increased risk of developing vaccine-preventable diseases like diphtheria or tetanus during a flood, and they are not recommending any special immunization efforts in connection with this year's flood. However, they are also stressing the importance of making sure all of your immunizations are up to date — as a matter of routine.

Current recommendations call for a series of immunizations during childhood using the standard combination vaccine for diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (DTP or DTaP). Adolescents should have received a "booster" dose of diphtheria and tetanus (Td) vaccine by 11 or 12 years of age, and adults should have had a Td booster within the past 10 years. Adults who sustain puncture wounds are advised to see a physician — to see if they need a tetanus shot — if they haven't had a Td booster within the last five years.

MDH also has a number of recommendations for keeping your home safe during and after a flood. If you live in a flooded area, officials suggest that you take steps to:

- Protect your children. Don't let them play in or near flood water and wash their hands frequently — especially before they eat. Disinfect any toys that may have been contaminated — using a solution of two ounces bleach in a gallon of water — and throw out any soft toys that small children can put into their mouths.
- Clean out your private sewage system. If it's been underwater, pump out the tank, pumping station and drop boxes before using it again.
- Take proper precautions before moving back into your home. Check for loose power lines, gas leaks and structural damage. Turn off the gas, electricity, and fuel oil or propane lines.
- Make sure your food is safe. You can keep commercially canned foods — even if they've been in contact with flood water — if you remove the labels and disinfect the unopened cans. Again, use a solution of two ounces of bleach in a gallon of water. Discard items that have been in contact with flood water if they're packaged in paper, boxes, glass jars or other non-waterproof containers. Throw out any items with an unusual color or odor, and any item whose safety is open to question. Always remember — "If in doubt, throw it out!"

Many of these recommendations are included in an MDH brochure "Protecting Your Health During a Flood," which is available through MDH district offices and local health departments statewide.

Cardinal Avenue in Thief River Falls was closed to traffic Thursday afternoon as water from a nearby field overwhelmed the ditch and culvert.

Minn. Bankers say job market is tight and housing strong

Minnesota's housing market is strong, according to bankers surveyed recently by the Minnesota Bankers Association. Nearly all of the 90 bankers surveyed reported a shortage of available housing in their areas. Many noted a need for additional affordable housing. Bankers from all over the state were surveyed by telephone between March 7 and 14.

Steve Hennies, president of Arlington State Bank, said "There is nothing available for houses and apartments." According to Bob Gack, president of Citizens National Bank in Park Rapids, "If you're a seller right now, you're in good shape. There is a shortage of housing and prices are high."

The unusual winter played a part in Minnesota's economy. Some bankers reported major losses from buildings being destroyed, livestock death and higher utility costs, while others are reporting increased tourism from snowmobilers, skiers and ice fishers. As for the long term effect, "The verdict is still out — it will depend on the spring melt," said Paul Erstad Jr., president of United Farmers and Merchants in Morris.

Bankers across the state reported high employment. Jim Morton, president of Fidelity Bank in Edina said, "You put an ad in the paper and don't get any response. We'll have full employment if the economy continues." Many bankers reported having difficulty filling lower-paying jobs.

"Our economy is very strong — even the tough winter didn't cause the damage many people had feared," said MBA President Dean Tollefson, Firstar Bank Minnesota, St. Paul.

In the Northwest, winter weather created a livestock feed shortage but also increased tourism. Employment is strong across the region with many communities reporting labor shortages. Bob Gack, president of Citizens National Bank in Park Rapids said, "Employers might have to start importing help — something we've never had to do before."

Dead livestock collection begins

A spring pickup service of dead livestock is now in progress. Farmers in the region needing this service can call 1-800-450-2482 or 218-253-2482.

The service area includes the counties of Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake and Polk. It also covers a portion of Clearwater county.

A cost-share incentive is available to livestock owners in Roseau, Marshall, Pennington Red Lake and Polk counties.

Environmental concerns and spread of disease are the two main factors for offering this service to farmers in the region.

The Spring thawing has been [illegible] a bit each day and during the night it has frozen enough to get rid of most of it and a lot has been seeping into the ground. Roy says the ground hasn't frozen very deep this year in northwest Minnesota because so much snow came so early last fall that it was well covered this winter. Now the fields are beginning to show through except for the deep drifts.

In the backyard the snow has gone down about 3 feet and there is at least that much left. I guess the hedge is about ruined as the tops of the boughs are able to pull themselves out of the drifts, with the help of our incessant winds, that in their struggle to stand up again they have pulled off their new [illegible]. Roy [illegible] house [illegible] up with [illegible] boughs even if he has to cut them off at the [illegible].

Most of the churches were filled to capacity for Easter Sunday services and later dinners were on the agenda. Now that April is putting in its appearance the ladies at Salem Lutheran Church are quilting on dates 1, 2 and 3 and they aren't fooling around with them neither. At Bethesda Lutheran Church they will be having business meetings and Bible studies. It's great living up here in Northwest Minnesota where there is so much camaraderie in all the churches. It's not that way in all places.

Home for the Easter weekend at the Dennis and Marcelyn Lindstrom home were son Jeff, Peggy and Jerrad Lindstrom of Akeley, daughter Lori and Ted Johnson with Jamie, Andy and Alissa of Osage, Pat, Donnie Tyler and Casey Lindstrom and Katy Olmanson of Bemidji who is staying with Grandpa and Grandma while her parents are in Taiwan.

I told Sonny when he called from Kalispell MT, that I was scheduled for a catscan and here's the story he told me. A man brought his dog to the vet. "This dog is dead" said the vet. "I don't believe that" said the man. "Should I prove that?" said the vet. OK and the vet went in another room and brought in a fierce looking cat and set him up on the table with the dog. The cat hissed in the dog's face, nothing happened, he ran and bit him on the tail, nothing happened. "See he's dead." "OK and how much do I owe you?" "That will be $2,025" said the Vet. "How's that?" said the man. "Well it is $25, for the office call and $2000 for the CatScan."

Lowell Lehoolh, Claudia, Larina and Jessie Berggren visited Judy Kleinvachter.

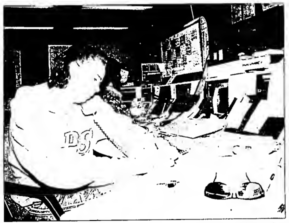
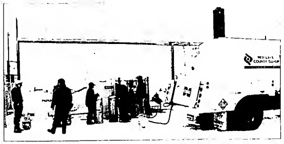
People rushed to the few stores open. Electricity at Pennington Main allowed the store to function, at least in part, and residents put a high demand on supplies and clerks.



Jo Williams, Pennington County jailer, was among the law enforcement staff in Pennington county handling phone calls and dispatching personnel..

Shaun Bradshaw, 13, holds Jonathan, an infant. They were among the hundreds of residents forced from their homes Sunday by the blizzard and lack of electricity. This picture was taken at Challenger Elementary school in Thief River Falls, which had been identified as one of the shelters in the community where they could get meals, and stay until the storm was over.

Pennington Main was almost overwhelmed by people purchasing gas and supplies to outlast the blizzard. Early Sunday morning, thousands of area residents were without power.



Long lines developed at the Cenex Station at Third and Atlantic Avenue in Thief River Falls when propane finally arrived at the station Monday afternoon.

It wasn't your imagination. National Guard members were activated Sunday and there were tracked vehicles, such as this Bradley, traveling on local roads to rural residences and stranded motorists. An M577 was also being used. Pictured above are Sgt. Allen Casavan of Warroad, Spc. Jason King of Lake Bronson, Ssg. Mark Appell, Bemidji, and Sgt. Dorin Tele of Thief River Falls. All of these men were with a display at the Times Home Show in Thief River Falls when the storm hit. According to these men, the Bradley was able to travel at about 20 miles per hour. Roads were described as pure ice, with limited visibility and high drifts.

Please understand that we are also taking preventive measures to alleviate litter problems.

We are and will do our best to continue to earn the trust you have placed in us to bring you one of the highest recycling rates in the state.

SA formulates disaster response plan

In preparation for the potential of massive spring flooding in North Dakota and Minnesota, The Salvation Army has formulated a disaster response plan designated Operation "We Care."

Based on current snowpack and moisture, the National Weather Service has projected record levels of flooding for eastern North Dakota and southwestern Minnesota. Major David Dalberg of Minneapolis, in charge of The Salvation Army's disaster relief for the Midwest explained, "It's not a matter of if there will be flooding. It's a matter of when and how much."

According to Bill Coleman, The Salvation Army's director of disaster services for North Dakota and Minnesota, the areas of potential flooding include Wahpeton, Fargo, Lisbon, Grand Forks, Devils Lake and Pembina, North Dakota, and Marshall and Redwood Falls, Minnesota. In addition, Coleman said the stretch from St. Paul to Red Wing, MN, along the Mississippi is at risk for heavy flooding. "We want to provide an early warning to residents that the flooding will be severe," Coleman said.

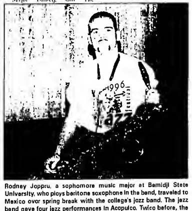
The Salvation Army has nine mobile canteens available throughout the two-state region and has a supply of more than 1,000 cleaning kits. The Salvation Army will distribute non-perishable and emergency items and will provide social services as the situation warrants. Operation "We Care" also includes active recruitment and training of volunteers for meal preparation, food service, social services and public relations.

The Salvation Army is currently looking for volunteers specializing in the the areas of food service and preparation, public information, qualified drivers for the Salvation Army's disaster response vehicles, vans and trucks, telephone operators, amateur radio operators, social workers and individuals to help fill sand bags and to serve on disaster response vehicles. For volunteers able to travel to another part of the state, The Salvation Army is looking for a minimum of a one week commitment. Local area volunteers can sign up on a daily basis with the nearest Salvation Army unit. In the Thief River Falls area contact the Pennington County Law Enforcement Center.

The Salvation Army is also looking for temporary storage space for supplies that have been donated. Donated equipment needed also include truck transportation, toiletries, diapers, food, non-perishable foods, canned goods, bottled water, bread and rolls, donuts, meats, and freezer and cooler space, fruit, juices, and baby food.

Major Dalberg said The Salvation Army will coordinate Operation "We Care" with local and state authorities and other disaster relief agencies, and that The Salvation Army will help to feed workers, shelter evacuees and provide social services to those in need. Coleman estimates that Operation "We Care" could cost approximately $200,000.

Monetary donations earmarked "Disaster Relief" may be sent to your local Salvation Army, which in the Thief River Falls area, can be sent to Thief River Falls Police Chief Ken Froschheiser at the Law Enforcement Center in Thief River Falls.



Rodney Joppru, a sophomore music major at Bemidji State University, who plays baritone saxophone in the band, traveled to Mexico over spring break with the college's jazz band. The jazz band gave four jazz performances in Acapulco. Twice before, the 17-piece BSU Jazz Band has performed in Acapulco. The group has also performed throughout Canada and Midwestern United States.

Volunteering Grows On Motivated Youth

Volunteerism comes to the forefront April 13-19 when Volunteer Recognition Week is observed in Minnesota under proclamation issued by Governor Arne Carlson. It is estimated that in the nation there are 93 million volunteers 18 years of age or older who contribute an average of 4.2 hours per week for a total of 20.3 billion hours of volunteer service annually. That service is valued at $201 billion.

Volunteer efforts by adults are important and those contributions can not be minimized, but what are the prospects for volunteerism as the younger generation ages? According to the statistics compiled by the Minnesota Office of Citizenship and Volunteer Services (you knew the state had one of those, didn't you?), the outlook is bright.

Across the Midwest the percentage of the total population volunteering is 60 percent, compared with 49 percent nationally. Among young people between the ages of 12 and 17 the Midwest percentage is 71 and the national percentage is 61—both substantially higher than the total for all ages.

In Minnesota, the estimated number of volunteers ages 12-17 is 249,000 and they average 3.2 hours of volunteer service per week per volunteer. The total includes 80,000 in the elementary grades, 52,000 in middle school or junior high school and 41,000 of senior high school age. Service-learning opportunities are provided by 82 percent of Minnesota school district and 45 percent of the districts offer credit for youth community service.

While not all volunteers have been motivated by example, many of them were led into volunteer service themselves as a result of volunteerism by others. Among volunteers surveyed:

- 67% were active in student government;
- 65% have volunteered before;
- 64% had parents who volunteered when they were young;
- 61% had belonged to a youth group;
- 59% were active in a religious group;
- 56% wanted to make a significant change in society;
- 56% saw someone they admired helping another;
- 53% were helped by others in the past;
- 53% saw someone in their family helping others.

While it seems in this area that a great deal of volunteerism is provided by senior citizens, that impression may be erroneous. On a national basis, while 49 percent of adult Americans volunteer, the percentage drops to 45 percent among people between 65 and 74 years of age. It is entirely possible, however, and perhaps likely, that the seniors who do volunteer contribute substantially more than the average number of hours. And it is also likely that senior volunteerism is higher in small communities and rural areas where seniors can move about freely at any time of day with little concern for potential threat to personal safety.

We agree with Gov. Carlson's proclamation which notes that volunteers enrich the lives of many through their concern, commitment and generosity and are helping communities to solve problems and make a difference in the lives of many.

"Volunteers are truly building stronger communities and they deserve our special recognition for their energy and enthusiasm in strengthening neighborhoods, and communities throughout Minnesota," Gov. Carlson said.

We agree, and we are pleased to see youth across the state and nation becoming involved in the volunteer movement in significant numbers. It shows us that people still care about one another.

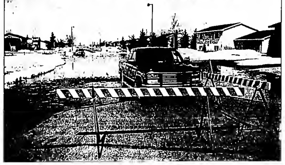
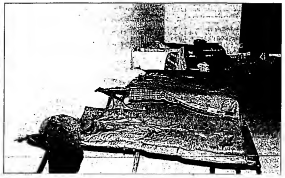
Despite its relatively tranquil appearance flood waters are moving quickly. Everyone is encouraged to keep a safe distance from the flood waters. Thursday afternoon, water went over the top of culverts and ditches along Robin Hood Drive, blocking traffic at the intersections of Oriole and Cardinal Avenues. Above is the intersection of Oriole Avenue.



Thief River Falls street crews and law enforcement officials closed off Cardinal Avenue to traffic Thursday afternoon. Standing water from a nearby field made it to a ditch along Robin Hood Drive, but quickly overwhelmed the ditch capacity and culverts.



Hundreds of people moved temporarily into Challenger Elementary school, and St. Bernard's during the blizzard Sunday and Monday in Thief River Falls.

Music will be supplied by the Statesman, 13-piece orchestra from Fargo. It was announced that the entire garage floor, 75 by 100 feet in dimensions, is being thoroughly cleaned and prepared for the dancers, Oien announced."

Alice Lind to Compete in State Declam Event

"Alice Lind, winner of top honors in the humorous division of the recent regional declamatory contest at Bagley, is leaving today for Minneapolis, where she will compete Friday evening in the statewide contest to be conducted in Murphy Hall on the University of Minnesota campus. Slot Machines Smashed After Being Taken

"The Pennington county treasury was enriched to the extent of $598.81 last weekend, this substantial sum having been found in the fifteen slot machines which had been confiscated following raids January 8 on the Elks and Eagles clubrooms. Trouble Over the Post Office

"A mass meeting was called to meet in the town hall on Saturday evening last, to 'cuss' or discuss the location of the post office. Everybody wants the post office located next to their place of business but a majority would like it on LaBree avenue and a minority on Main street. It was supposed that a vote would be taken but a comedy or farce was intended. H. Lewin was made chairman and a committee viz. M. Barzen, Carl Hansen, C. L. Dobner, F. J. Stebbins, and C. H. Bauman, selected to confer with the Main st. advocates. We hope an amicable arrangement can be made so as to avoid a visit from an inspector."

NOTICE OF HEARING BOARD OF ZONING APPEALS CITY OF THIEF RIVER FALLS

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to Chapter 11 of the Thief River Falls City Code, that Neal and Lana Sandahl, 508 Crocker Avenue South, Thief River Falls, MN 56701, have applied for a Variance to the provisions of Chapter 11 - Land Use Regulation (Zoning) which govern the Interior Side Yard Setbacks for structures in the General Residential District (R-2). The property legally described as Lots Twenty-two (22) and Twenty-three (23) in Block Twenty-two (22) of Knox Addition to the City of Thief River Falls.

Neal and Lana Sandal propose to construct a 15' x 20' addition onto the back of their residence at the above location. The existing structure has a 4'-0" Interior Side Yard Setback to the roof overhang line from the south property line.

The south wall of the proposed 15' x 20' addition will be constructed as a direct extension of the existing wall towards the rear of the property. However, the roof overhang of the proposed addition will project one foot (1') closer to the property line than the existing roof line. The expansion, as proposed, of a non conforming structure will require approval of a four feet (4') Variance to the seven feet (7') Interior Side yard Setback Requirement of Sec. 11.32, Sub. 5, for the R-2 District.

Notice is further given that the Board of Zoning Appeals will conduct a Hearing on the Variance Request at 7:00 PM on Monday, April 21, 1997, in the City Council Chambers, City Auditorium, 123 Main Avenue North, Thief River Falls, MN. All persons wishing to comment on the proposed Variance Request will have the option to be heard at this time. Persons wishing to submit written comments prior to the Hearing or who have questions should address them to the Office of the Community Development Director, City Auditorium, P.O. Box 528, Thief River Falls, MN 56701, or telephone 218-681-2500.

If you have a disability and need an accommodation in order to attend this Hearing, please contact the undersigned as soon as possible or at least two (2) days in advance of the Hearing at the above telephone number.

Council supports dredging of river reservior in TRF

Thief River Falls City Council has approved a resolution of support for a river dredging project that includes a commitment of $250,000 in local funding.

Tuesday night the council discussed the proposal to dredge the reservoir. The city has had several studies of the river conducted in the past five years. After exploring the options and weighing the advantages and disadvantages of the options, the city attempted to remove weeds and did conduct a draw down in an attempt to consolidate the sediment. Success of the project was very limited.

Ron Lindberg, public works director, explained that in the search for funding for the project, which could cost roughly $1 million, the city had sought funds from the Red Lake Watershed District, the Red River Watershed District and the State of Minnesota. He said the Red River Watershed district turned down their request, not because it wasn't a worthwhile project, but because they had some other priorities in their district regarding flooding issues. Red Lake Watershed District has committed to $250,000 of in-kind and construction funding. Another $500,000 is being sought from the State of Minnesota.

The project would provide numerous benefits especially for recreational activities.

Lindberg and area legislators are optimistic about state funds becoming available because the city has conducted so many studies and attempted resolving the problem by exploring other options.

Lindberg anticipates a 1998 start if all of the permits required from the Department of Natural Resources and Army Corps of Engineers are approved.

Fire Chief Resigns/Retires

The resignation of Thief River Falls Fire Chief, Dave Bjorkman, may result in the council reviewing options. Those options will include combining the position with that of a safety director. (Currently, the city does not have an official safety director.)

Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman submitted his retirement/resignation effective August 1. Bjorkman has been with the fire department for 31 years. He began as a volunteer in December of 1965. On April 1, 1973, he was hired as a full-time fireman. On September 1, 1983, he was hired as fire chief.

The council accepted the resignation and thanked Bjorkman for his many years of service.

Thanks

Appreciation was expressed to many public employees, local businesses, and KTRF employees for all of their hard work during the recent blizzard. Mayor Robert Reese suggested that an award to recognize all of those people be looked into.

Other

A liquor license for Handy Farms was approved pending successful completion of its parking plans.

The council reviewed the plans and specifications for the 1997 Improvement Project and called for bids. The bids will be opened 11 a.m. on May 13.

In other business, the council: approved a temporary 3.2 beer license (beer garden) for the Pennington County Fair Association for July 16 through 20, approved a progression raise for Brent Monroe, patrol officer, approved membership in the Geothermal Heat Pump Consortium, and approved the transfer of .15 mile of CASH 13th Street right-of-way to the city's municipal state aid street system, and approved a resolution in support of a school liaison officer.

School approves $80,300 in budget reductions

School Board district 564 board members accepted the recommendation for $80,300 in budget reductions.

Reductions totaled $80,300 with no new staff development or curriculum development dollars to be added for the upcoming school year. Adjustments include an increase of $11 in participation fees for extra-curricular activities, a transfer of $4,000 from federal funds to pay a greater portion of the salary and benefits for the Coordinator of Educational Services, elimination of the teacher overload in Spanish at Lincoln high School for $6,000, and a $20,000 reduction in supplies and other costs at Challenger including elimination of the half-time office educational assistant position.

A public hearing was held at 6 p.m. to discuss the proposal, but there were no individuals present who wished to address the issue.

Superintendent Jerry Robicheau expressed the concern that none budgets had been proposed initially, but the district had gone through considerable cuts in the past. Any more would seriously affect students.

Robicheau also presented an amended priority list for program additions, as funds become available. The priority list, which was adopted by the board, included: 1) .5 FTE kindergarten teacher of staff to address adult-to-student ratio, 2) Funds to support staff development and curriculum development, 3) Consider additional staff at Franklin, 4) Any other program additions K-12, 5) Remedial programs for students who do not meet graduation standards, 6) add to supply budget at Challenger.

Activities Director Jim Sims presented an option to raising extra-curricular activities fees. The proposal included reducing boy's and girl's coaches' travel budgets by $1,925 each, the cheerleaders travel budget by $550, the activities directors travel budget by $500, the girl's and boy's supply budget by $300 each, the cheerleading supply budget by $300, the activities directors miscellaneous budget by $350.

Ice jams along the river are a major concern to local officials. Pennington County officials have been surveying the flood potential courtesy the Civil Air Patrol. This picture, taken last Friday, shows an ice jam along the Kretka bridge. Some overland flooding has occurred.

Schirrick Dam closed today to hold back flooding downstream

Red Lake Watershed District planned to close the Schirrick Dam on the Black River this morning, April 16, as a measure to reduce flood flows and stages downstream on the Red Lake River and Red River of the North.

Owners of property within the reservoir have been advised that water levels will be increasing and personal property within the reservoir may be inundated.

The dam is being closed in response to predicted stages in Crookston and in Grand Forks, ND. The National Weather Service has advised the district that river stages will crest in Crookston on the morning of April 17. River stages in Grand Forks are predicted to crest between April 19 and April 22.

The Black River is a tributary of the Red Lake River. The dam is located in Section 35 of Wylie township in Red Lake county. An area of 108 square miles drains to the dam, which is a 38-feet-high earthen embankment with a reinforced concrete spillway.

The reservoir will store 4,800 acre feet of water, which is approximately equivalent to one inch of runoff from the area which drains to the dam. The dam was constructed in 1988 at a cost of $1,160,000.

Operation of the dam is planned to reduce peak flows and stages during critical floods in Crookston, Grand Forks and other areas downstream.

For more information contact Lowell Enerson or Brent Johnson at the Red Lake Watershed District office in Thief River Falls at 218-681-5800 (evening phone is 218-681-5379).

Emergency response review held Friday at TRF city auditorium

Many were unable to respond during the recent blizzard because of a lack of electricity, but for those who were able to respond or had to respond, what to do differently the "next time" this happens is of some importance.

A special meeting to review emergency responses was held Friday at the city auditorium in Thief River Falls. That special meeting included elected city and county officials and employees, law enforcement, ambulance personnel, the hospital and clinic, news media, school district personnel, several church representatives, the national guard, chamber of commerce, and some business representatives.

Pennington County Sheriff Gerald Moe, county emergency management director, commended all these individuals and volunteers able to respond to the emergency, but also asked that they talk about what was done right and wrong and what can be done differently in the future.

Thief River Falls has power plant generators which are used in emergencies to supplement power and reduce costs for the city. At one time, they were able to provide capacity for the entire city. The newest generator was installed in 1955. The oldest was installed in 1945. Because of their condition and age, they were unable to run at full capacity, and they weren't able to provide even one quarter of the capacity of what the city needs.

Arlo Rude, superintendent of utilities, said they were notified of some potential problems. About five minutes before they got the generator on line they lost power from Minnkota. He said they had an agreement with the Law Enforcement Center to get them on line, and after the center, they put the hospital, fire hall, water plant, city power plant building, sewer lifts, and Oakland Park Nursing Home on line. He said they tried to provide power on a rotation throughout the city, but because the city is not set up for this kind of maneuver, it was difficult and not all areas of the community were put on rotation before full power was returned.

Dan Olson, assistant administrator for Northwest Medical Center, said that in the future, "if" this ever happens again they would not wait until half way through the emergency to initiate a registration process. Registering people as they came in would have helped so that families could be contacted and medicine monitored.

Other relief centers, such as St. Bernard's and Challenger Elementary school representatives mentioned the same sorts of things and that generally it went smoothly.

The Heritage Community Center should be among the buildings to receive electricity during emergencies. Many senior citizens feel uncomfortable at other locations among young families. In addition the center has a fully equipped kitchen. Sheriff Moe said they would be seeking a grant to put in a generator at the facility.

Shannon Olson of Heritage Community Center said a lot of people she contacted were concerned about their pets and would not leave them behind, which creat

In her resignation letter to the MnSCU Board of Trustees, Eaton said, "I appreciate the confidence, help and support that I have received during my tenure as chancellor. Together we have made great progress in moving MnSCU forward."

Bill Ulland, chair of the Board of Trustees, expressed his appreciation to Chancellor Eaton for the work she has done. "Judith Eaton has led the development of our new strategic plan, established a firm fiscal foundation for MnSCU, created a new and dynamic management culture and most of all, she has set a tone for MnSCU of putting students first."

Eaton became MnSCU's first permanent chancellor in August 1995. Eaton's resignation is effective August 1, 1997. She will assume the CHEA presidency in September 1997.

MnSCU serves approximately 145,000 students at 53 campuses around the state. The system includes state universities, community colleges, technical colleges and comprehensive community and technical colleges.

Oakland Park Home board meets Apr. 17

Executive board of Oakland Park Nursing Home in Thief River Falls will meet Thursday, April 17, at 5:30 p.m. at the home.

These impressive photos of the Hale-Bopp Comet were taken by Edwin Sheridan of Kanab, Utah, a former resident of the Goodridge area and a brother of David Sheridan of 509 West Eighth Street in Thief River Falls. Edwin Sheridan left the Goodridge area in 1947 when he joined the U.S. Army. He took the above photos about 4 a.m. at Bryce Canyon with his own eight-inch telescope which he has in a personal observatory in his back yard. The telescope is equipped with computer tracking. The comet is about 25 miles in diameter and the closest it will get to earth is about 150 million miles. Comets this bright appear only once every 20 to 30 years. It should be visible through the end of April with the best viewing early in the month.

Representatives from VIP visit with State legislators

For the 12th annual "Women Come to the Capitol" program recently, a number of women from northwest Minnesota traveled to St. Paul. Theme was "Voices, Choices and Change" for the event which focused on the needs of women in Minnesota.

Events included speakers on various legislative issues of concern to women and children, workshops on community and statewide organizing and personal meetings with legislators.

Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Thief River Falls met with representatives from the Violence Intervention Project (VIP) to discuss issues of concern to battered women and sexual assault victims.

VIP serves victims of domestic violence and sexual assault in seven counties in northwestern Minnesota and has offices in Thief River Falls, Crookston, Hallock, Warren, Ada and Roseau.

Some of the issues pending in the legislature this session which were topics of discussion during the visit to the capitol are proposals to increase funding for community-based sexual assault and domestic violence services and laws related to sexual assault and domestic violence.

The VIP representatives spoke with Senator Stumpf about the difficulties faced by battered women and sexual assault victims when they come forward for help, and asked him for his support in the legislature in creating positive changes.

CITY EMPLOYEES: The dedication, perseverance, and professionalism displayed by City employees to maintain and protect our public utilities, streets, airport safety and other services that are vital to our quality of life in the City of Thief River Falls is commendable.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Aaron Furuseth
Lincoln High School

About three months ago, I took out a loan for $2,500 to buy a computer. Some may call that a bit extravagant considering that I am just a senior in high school, and I have college to pay for, but I did it anyhow. I also got internet access. Now that is a bit extravagant, but it has already paid for itself in my mind. About two months ago, as I was "surfin the net" late one night, I met a woman.

It began innocently enough. I was getting ready to go to sleep and I thought that I would look for one more topic before I shut down for the night. I was scrolling by the list of "chat rooms" and one called "TORI" caught my eye. I immediately thought of one of my favorite singers, Tori Amos, so I decided to go into the room and talk for a few minutes. I double clicked on the room name and entered the room. There was only one other person in the room, an Op who was the creator of the channel, named, "Tori."

Before I go on, I should explain a few things. The program that I was using (PIRCH) allows a person to log on with a "nick" and chat with other people from around the world. The "channels", or "rooms" as they are called, are created to give people an easy way to find other people who enjoy the same things that they do. When you create a channel, you get to name it, set and change the "topic" of the day, and you get sole "Op" status. Op stands for operator. It is designated by an "@" in front of your nick. If you have Op status you can ban people from your channel or you can give other people Op status. So what I saw when I entered the room was a big blank screen and a smaller screen on the right hand side that read:

@Tori_

Now, another thing that most people do is look for members of the opposite sex. "Tori" was a very feminine name, but I was tired and I didn't feel like going through the whole, "Where ya' from, what do you look like, how old are you?" thing. I quickly typed "Pardon..." and exited the room. I was just about to shut down my computer for the night when a message box popped up in front of me. A message box is a full sized screen that one person sends directly to another to have a private chat with them. This message box was from "Tori_." It read: "why did you leave?"

I sat there for a few seconds, trying to figure out what I should do. Then I decided to give it a try. "Sorry, but I was going to go to sleep."

There was a pause as if she were deciding and then she answered with an "Oh. I quickly typed "but I can chat with you for awhile if you want to." ok."

She replied, "I don't want to keep you up. ."

"You're not keeping me," I typed. "I want to talk to someone..." "m/f, if you don't mind the lamer question?" (m/f=male or female, a question usually reserved for "lamers" or new users)

"Female," she said, "you couldn't tell by the nick?"

I smiled to myself, "I thought so...just making sure. I printed one of the little "faces" that net users love so much. It consisted of a colon followed by a right curving parentheses . :

We began to talk. Not just the usual net jabber that I do every day, but really talk. I found out the usual of course, she was 19 years old and she was going to college in New York, but I found myself becoming more and more intrigued by this woman. Every subject we brought up, we agreed on. Every word she typed made me more interested in her. At one point in the conversation she typed "You probably wouldn't like me... I always leave my Coke cans all over the place." Anyone who knows me at all knows that Coke is my favorite thing in the whole world!

After about two hours of conversation, we agreed that we both had to sleep for the night. We promised to meet the next night, but a little earlier so that we could talk longer. Almost every night since then, we have talked for at least an hour. She sent me a picture of herself after about a week, and I saw that she is not only the most beautiful person that I have ever meet mentally, but physically as well. That poses a dilemma.

I know that some people might think that I am pathetic. I know that Tori and I will probably never get together, much as I want us to, and that I should work on finding a "good" "real" woman. But I am in love with her. My friends say that she is a 400 lb., gay convict, but I don't believe them. I do like somebody here in TRF, but I still talk to Tori. She will remain my perfect, "Internet Girlfriend."

ON MY MIND

Kim Chadwick-Quade

On A Mission

A smile is international; it transcends language barriers. It needs no words.

It was the smiles that helped Esther Gallagher and Audrey Hanson to communicate with those who didn't understand English. The smiles bonded people from different countries.

Esther and Audrey, both of Thief River Falls recently returned from a short-term, two-week mission to the Czech Republic, an eastern bloc European country that was formerly Communist controlled.

Their mission was two-fold: to expose people to the Bible and Jesus Christ and to help these same people learn conversational English. It was coordinated by International Messengers, an international organization that puts Americans in contact with Europeans, mainly former Communist countries.

Darwin Anderson, formerly of the St. Hilaire area, now living in Iowa, is director of International Messengers and coordinated the team that Esther and Audrey were a part of. In addition to conversational English, International Messengers offers a variety of programs combined with the Bible emphasis, such as basketball camps and concerts.

Esther, a secretary at Challenger Elementary School, participated in her first short-term mission to Romania in 1991. When she returned, she tried convincing her long-time friend, Audrey, a nurse for Hospice of the Red River Valley in Thief River Falls, to accompany her on another mission.

The timing and circumstances were right and the two committed. Supported soundly by their church, Evangelical Free in Thief River Falls, Esther and Audrey collected the necessary funds for their mission.

Their destination was Frydlant, a small town a few miles from a steel plant, which provided many of the students who were eager to enhance themselves. Esther taught a group of advanced students and Audrey had an intermediate class. The classes were comprised of five to seven students who were teenagers through adults.

The volunteer teachers, five in all, put in long but fulfilling days teaching a combination of the Bible and English conversation and skills like talking on the telephone, exchanging money and going to a restaurant. They had free time in the afternoon to do what they liked. The evenings were filled with fellowship, skits, games, music and an awards ceremony.

During Esther's two missions she was impressed with the openness of the people to hear the Bible's messages. "I strongly believe that for us to make it into heaven we have to have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ," Esther says. "It was exciting to see people come along in that decision, they were very open and honest... There are people who have literally never heard of Jesus Christ."

Esther and Audrey helped people become familiar with the teachings of the Bible. "We could see our students searching and seriously considering what they were hearing. It was great seeing the 'light' come on for many people," Audrey says.

For her, the experience was 'way beyond what I expected. I came home feeling privileged - to have been able to do this," Audrey says. "I fell in love with those people."

Before Audrey and Esther left Thief River Falls and the United States they packed special treats for the people they would be teaching. "They loved our chocolate," Esther says. They also brought music tapes, candy, and boxed macaroni and cheese – almost a delicacy in Czech.

What they saw in Frydlant was a beautiful country surrounded by mountains. Grocery prices are roughly the same, but the Czech buying power is so much less, with a well-paying job earning approximately $1.73 per hour. Housing is expensive and people survive on much less than many Americans. And Esther and Audrey discovered that many people hated Communism and are now glad to have their freedom, especially the freedom to travel.

Both say they learned as much as they taught. After seeing the sometimes stark conditions, Audrey says, "I realized that materialism has warped us. We need to communicate true values to our family and get back to respect and basic rules; family is important."

While on the mission the two formed another family of sorts - that of the other teachers and students. It didn't matter that thousands of miles had separated them or that they lived in a different country.

"I learned that people are different, but yet not different - we laugh the same, we hurt the same," Esther says.

Because their experiences forged a forever memory in their minds, Esther and Audrey would both like to be involved in another short-term mission, next time including their husbands.

It's the smiles, the non-verbal communication, that they remember and want to share.

SCAVENGER HUNT

For next week's Activities feature, you will need your time.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

The Thief River Falls public library invites you to browse through its new selection of children's books including the following.

Kellogg, Steven. I Was Born About 10,000 Years Ago. There aren't many yarn spinners who could lay claim to beating these irresistibly tall tales. These tales range from building the Pharaoh's pyramids to marrying Queen Elizabeth in Milwaukee.

Serfozo, Mary. What's What? Lots of questions are asked to demonstrate to children some of the everyday qualities they will encounter. In a surprise ending, all of the qualities come together in one small object that every child would love to have!

VIDEO VARIETY

Barney's Making New Friends. Join Barney and his friends in song and play as they welcome Kenneth, a new boy, to school.

MAGAZINE MENTION

It's splish-splash in a geothermal bath as you explore Iceland, a cold country that bubbles with heat. Learn all about this Viking land of fire and ice in the April issue of National Geographic World.

Remember that the Thief River Falls public library has preschool storytimes every Wednesday from 11:15 to 11:45 a.m. These are co-sponsored by the Thief River Falls ECFE and Learning Readiness. Also remember to check out the parenting corner by the children's room for new information and helpful hints for busy parents on books, reading and much more.

PARENTING TIPS

Teaching By Example

Parents are a child's first teachers and role models. Usually children are more affected by what their parents do than by what they say. They learn to behave by seeing how their mothers and fathers behave and following their example. For this reason, you need to be aware of the "lessons" you may unintentionally be teaching your children.

Social skills and attitudes are often best taught by example. A child will learn good manners more easily when "please" and "thank you" are part of a daily life and not just used on special occasions. The learning is gradual and occurs more naturally at home.

Consistency is also very important. If you teach your child one thing but then behave in an opposite way yourself, your child will become confused and frustrated as to what to and whom to believe. Suppose a five-year-old is caught hitting another five-year-old. His parent tells him that he must not hit people and then gives him a spanking as punishment. The parent's action is inconsistent with the message and the child doesn't know whether to believe the words or the action.

"Monkey see, monkey do" certainly described how young children learn. Because they lack prior knowledge and skills, they eagerly look for someone to imitate. That someone is usually one or both of their parents. So, parents, be aware of what message your child is getting. Is it the one you want him to have?

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

As you model good behavior for your child, use words to describe what you are doing. For example, as you buckle your seat belt, say, "We wear our seat belts in the car so we will be safe."

SPEAKING OF

...Helping Hands Deserve A Hand

Isn't it amazing? Once the kindness button is turned on, it doesn't shut off. Finally, I got my wish. I saw Letters to the Editor in the Northern Watch like I haven't seen in a long time and I loved it! They were all so eloquent and thankful. What a bunch of great people we have in this area - both those who helped others and those who wanted to write about the good things others did for them.

And the helping isn't ending. How many groups of people have started helping cities that are being flooded? How many people have donated clothing, food and supplies for flooded areas? How many are helping our own and other cities sandbag? It just doesn't stop. The button is turned on and it will stay on as long as someone needs help.

We've always known we are good people here in the midwest. We read about our "work ethic" and we see it every day. We heard about "stoic," "get-the-job-done," midwesterners on national television - Vice President Gore talked about our heroic deeds, as did many of the reporters from the major television networks. They seemed surprised.

None of us who live here are surprised to see the heroes and heroines in action. We've known about it for years. We've seen them in action in other disasters, when there are fires, storms and accidents. The good midwesterners come out in droves to help others less fortunate, to bring food, comfort, support, to help rebuild. It's part of our nature to help others in times of need.

In fact, we are so accustomed to seeing this compassion that it is hard to realize that there are places where such kindness is not present - where robbing and looting and other selfish acts take place during a power outage such as the one we experienced. It is hard to believe that there are places where people would not turn out in droves to help others in times of crisis, where they would turn their backs rather than reach out their hands to help.

Living in this area may have its hardships, but the cold weather must bring out the warmth in the people because they have surely been showing it lately. And I have a feeling they will continue to show it as the flooding goes on. Yes, the Spirit is alive and well in the midwest - no doubt about that!

THE STORY OF A FIRE ENGINE

First of 2 parts

Thief River Falls was not yet a city when the village council ordered a fire engine, a state-of-the-art steam engine. This engine was a pumper, that is, the engine carried water and a powerful pump for "getting the wet stuff on the hot stuff."

The order included a 1000 foot hose, all for $2850.

Unfortunately the fire engine arrived one day late. On March 7, 1894, a fire completely destroyed the Great Northern Depot in Thief River Falls.

Few people in town had seen a fire engine. The day after the disastrous fire a crowd quickly gathered when the new equipment was unloaded. The volunteer fire men took the engine to the river for a test. The fire department history says that all the children present and quite a few men as well as the bushes and trees were watered down!

The volunteer fire fighters named the shiny dark red engine "Ogahmah No. 1," and had the name engraved on the engine. Ogahmah is the Ojibwe name that means "chief."

This model of the Waterous Engine Works Company was designed for use by small villages and towns. Although it was deigned to be pulled by a team of horses, it was light enough for men to pull it. Waterous of St Paul advertized that it was "equipped with a "quick steaming boiler and double pumps made of pure phosphor bronze metal."

Its connections were made of forged machinery steel, and arranged so that they were easy to disconnect and take down. The engine came equipped with driver's seat, rest with gong, horse pole with whiffletrees, and a hand pole with reel and rope.

There were two problems with a steam model: the steam engine was slow in getting up steam and the steam pump could freeze up in cold weather.

One of the old engine's stories that has been told and retold took place on October 4, 1901. The department responded to an alarm sent in from the Red Lake boarding house. While the engine was turning the corner of Horace and Second Street, the engine somehow landed in the ditch bottom up. Fortunately no one was injured and the firemen dashed to the fire armed with buckets they hoped to fill from a well near the boarding house. Unfortunately, the first fireman to reach the well was so eager to help that he pulled out the pump. That turned out to be the only thing saved from the fire. According to the history of the department, "Many of the fire laddies were so full of laughter that they were forced to lie on the ground in paroxysms of mirth and for a long time after." William Smiley, the fireman who pulled the pump out of the well, was ever after called the "pump man" of the department.

In 1912 the city council purchased a team of fire horses and appointed Chris Paulson as teamster. Prior to this, whenever the fire bell was rung, the first team that arrived at the station from one of the numerous livery stables was hired for five dollars.

Stanley Newland, Lincoln Class of 1938, told of the excitement he felt when he watched the horse-drawn fire engine.

"The Thief River fire engine was pulled by a powerful, spirited team of draft horses. The horses' stall faced the street. Their harnesses were suspended from the ceiling. When the fire whistle sounded, the horses were led out of their stalls, the harnesses quickly dropped onto their backs, and were buckled.

"The team was hooked up to the hose wagon, and off they went.

"If kids were nearby, they raced to see the horses come charging out to the street, sparks flying from their shoes hitting the street--so exciting!

"After the city bought its first fire truck, the horses were no longer needed. The fire department sold one team to a farmer who lived just outside of town on Highway 59.

"One day the fire whistle sounded. The poor farmer had all he could do to restrain the team. The team was hitched to the farmer's hay-wagon out in the field."

After 1934 when the city purchased its first motorized fire vehicle, a fire truck, the old horse-drawn engine was put on reserve and used occasionally until 1941 by the City Street Department to flush streets. According to Freeman Luska, a Thief River Falls volunteer fireman, by 1945 the water pump was not operational. But the steam boiler was used to melt ice in water catch basins during the spring thaw. The fire departmept occasionally used the old steam engine in parades.

Several years later the old engine was taken to the local scrap iron dealer, Phillips Iron and Metal. But this was not the end of the fire engine. Ogahmah No. 1 went on to get a life of its own. What happened to the Thief River Falls engine is the subject of the next Prairie Rambling.

Thief River Falls — Ella Larson, 84, Thief River Falls, died on Saturday, April 12, 1997, at Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls.

Funeral service was held on April 15, at Zion Lutheran church in Thief River Falls. Burial will be in the Viking cemetery near Viking.

Ella Amanda Holden was born on September 14, 1912, to the late Eric and Gunhild (Dokken) Holden in Viking. She was baptized and confirmed into the Lutheran faith at Viking. She attended school in Viking. Ella worked for Poner's Eat Shop in Thief River Falls and at Itasca State Park near Park Rapids. She was united in marriage to Lester Larson on March 13, 1940, in Viking. The couple settled in Thief River Falls, and owned and operated the NuWay Cafe until 1953. The recently reorganized Thief River Falls Public Library board invites everyone to the National Library Week Open House at the public library from April 14-18. Library hosts open house for National Library week

Thief River Falls public library invites everyone to an open house through Friday of this week, April 18. The Quilters Guild has a display of quilts for the public to view and there will also be a display in honor of former librarian Bertha Hastad which commemorates her many years of service to the community.

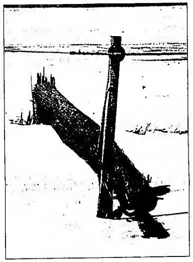
The library also invites the public to add to an "I Remember Bertha" scrapbook. This book will contain comments on memories of Miss Hastad and her years with the public library. The scrapbook will be given to her family following conclusion of the open house. Coffee and refreshments will be served throughout the week.

Bertha Hastad was born and raised in Thief River Falls and attended Mayville State Teacher's College in North Dakota. She taught school in rural northwestern Minnesota for several years. In 1948 a library clerk position opened up in the Thief River Falls public library and Bertha was intrigued. She applied for it and was hired.

Bertha worked her way up to assistant librarian in 1962 and then was named head librarian in 1965 following the sudden death of Frances Shanahan. She often said, "I was happy from the start to be working in the library."

In 1968 the library regionalized and Bertha took on the new challenge of bookmobile librarian for the newly formed Northwest Regional Library system. In 1971 she retired from library work, but not from an active volunteer schedule. Her work with children and adults will be remembered for many years to come.

"The Thief River Falls public library is pleased to honor Bertha's memory during National Library Week and invites everyone to stop by the library during the week and join in that honor," states librarian Heidi Hoks.



Downed power poles such as this one west of Warren were all too common a sight in Kittsen, Marshall and Polk counties following the storm which hit the area last Saturday and Sunday. PKM Electric Cooperative lost more than 2,500 poles in the storm.

Lights Out

What a winter, yet another storm for our area. Most of rural Plummer was without electric from Saturday evening till afternoon on Monday. It was hard on all of us who were with out lights, heat, water, etc. and it sure was tuff on our farmers that had to milk their cows by hand and getting water to their stock. We all pulled together and helped each other out and everything will be ok because we are all survivors.

Staying at the home of Hazel Ollie for the weekend because they had no power were daughter Sharon Loralee and Boston Iverson of rural St. Hilaire.

Staying at the home of Jerry and Carol Gerardy while power was out was son Toni, daughter-in-law Sheila Gerardy and children. Art and Avis Froland were overnight guests of good friend Inga Linder. The Frolands also were without power but said they sure had a good time with there friend Inga.

Staying at the home of Connie and Roger Hughes because of power out was mother Bertha Hughes, daughter Tori, son-in-law Brinn and grandson Nicholas Schindler all of Thief River Falls and the lists go on.

Easter guests at the home of Roger and Connie Hughes were Bertha Hughes, Tori, Brian, Nick Schindler of Thief River Falls, Linder Ellis, brother Randy and his daughter Leslie of Cass Lake and Brad and Shelly Hughes of Warroad.

Don and Merle Gagner of Maple Bay enjoyed a very nice visit with Jean Carpenter of Plummer.

Eve Circle Meets

The ladies of Eve Circle from Immanuel Lutheran Church of Plummer met at the home of Amelia Eskell. There were eight ladies in attendance. Clara Hesse was in charge of the meeting and Fern Eskell lead the bible study. Amelia served a lunch.

Happy Birthday Wilma!

A surprise birthday party was held for Wilma Huotari of Plummer on Tuesday. Attending the fun filled gathering were husband Tom, Amelia, Fern, Melvin, Rosemary and Eddie Eskell, Ruth Wilkens, and Ray Nononen. Cake and ice cream was served and the birthday gal opened her cards and gifts. Happy Birthday Wilma!

Snow-bird Jean back home

Danny Carpenter of Plummer drove to Milwaukee, WI. to pick up mom Jean and bring her back home. Jean had a great and warm winter down in Mesa, AZ. with sister Gloria and brother-in-law Art Fossum for a month, then Jean spent a month with daughter Cindy and son-in-law Bruce Thomas of Manhattan Kansas and then three weeks with daughter Carol and son-in-law Vernon Hovet of Milwaukee, WI. Jean's son Danny arrived Friday and spent the weekend with mom, sis and family. We all sure missed you Jean. Welcome Home!

On Monday Floyd, Wevelf and Russell Sorenson were breakfast and dinner guests at the home of Jerry and Carol Gerardy. Jerry and Carol are another couple in our area that is always reaching out to help any one in need and we are blessed to have them.

Otter Tail begins repairs, cleanup

For Otter Tail Power Company which serves part of the Thief River Falls area, the power is back on but the work is far from over. Now begins the lengthy task of cleaning up and replacing electrical equipment.

Even though all of the 125 communities put out of service by the April 5-6 weekend storm were back on line by Friday, April 11, hundreds of poles must be replaced and broken poles, crossarms and conductor removed from fields and roads.

"We want to express our gratitude to everyone who helped speed restoration by conserving electricity," says Marlowe Johnson, customer service vice president of the company's North Dakota service territory, based in Jamestown, ND.

"Words can't express our admiration and gratitude for the courage, resourcefulness and patience of those whose power was off for several days. And we'll never forget the kindness of our customers who brought coffee, doughnuts, sandwiches and chili to our crews while they were working in adverse conditions."

Otter Tail cautions that occasional outages may occur during the next few weeks because some equipment may have suffered undetectable damage. Customers are urged to contact their nearest Otter Tail office if problems develop.

"This week our crews are also working hard to repair damaged farm and rural lines along with service to some homes and businesses in towns where tree limbs fell on lines," adds Roy Larson, customer service vice president in Fergus Falls.

"We again ask for the understanding of customers who may be inconvenienced by Otter Tail vehicles parked on roadways. We want to make repairs as quickly but also as safely as possible."

Must Widespread Damage

Otter Tail Power Company has been hard hit like this before, but never so widespread. All told, the storm took out more towns (close to 125) than any before in company history. It also took out more than 900 poles, a number second only to the record 2,000 poles downed by an ice storm in 1953.

The storm struck the community of Washburn, ND, shortly before midnight on Friday, April 4. From there it moved in a northerly direction toward Devils Lake, ND, continued eastward to a line from Forman, ND to Hallock, and then bent southward to Crookston early Sunday morning, April 6.

Crews from Otter Tail were dispatched to trouble areas as quickly as possible. However, blizzard conditions, zero visibility and icy roads made travel impossible for most employees. On Monday afternoon, following aerial and vehicular assessment of the damage, crews were dispatched to the stricken areas. Crews then had to battle water, ice, mud and snow. In some cases, use of all-terrain vehicles was necessary.

Otter Tail Power and neighboring electric suppliers who are members of the Mid-Continent Area Power Pool cooperated in coordinating restoration of the high voltage transmission system, which was decimated. Four of the five major transmission lines serving eastern North Dakota from the western part of the state were out of service.

The company's Hoot Lake plant east of Fergus Falls and Big Stone plant, owned by Otter Tail and two other electric suppliers near Milbank, SD, remained in service to contribute voltage support for eastern North Dakota. Operating these two plants and two lines from Minnesota may have prevented an overload condition that could have jeopardized service to the entire region.

Retirees Lend Assistance

Retired employees of Otter Tail Power provided assistance in a number of ways. At Hallock, 88-year-old Mel Sunhy, retired Hallock division manager, patrolled the primary electric system. Swede Larson, retired service representative, ran errands. Dale Soh, retired Hallock area line crew lead lineman, hauled coffee, pop and doughnuts to crews in the field.

Storm Facts and Figures

- Close to 125 communities and about 20,000 Otter Tail Power Company customers were without electric service on Sunday, April 6
- By Thursday evening, April 10, service had been restored to all communities except Clyde, ND, which Otter Tail expected to return to service on Friday.
- More than 900 downed poles, most of them along Otter Tail's 41,600-volt systems in eastern and central North Dakota and western Minnesota, were downed. Also destroyed were several 12,500-volt lines.
- Approximately 200 Otter Tail Power line personnel, service representatives and various technicians worked to restore service. They were assisted by nearly 100 workers from Northern States Power, Minneapolis; Minnesota Power, Duluth; and Aerial Contractors, Fargo, ND.

Scores of support staff, including members of Otter Tail's system operations department, division office personnel and retirees helped with restoration efforts.

- It will be necessary to replace 99 structures along the 345,000-volt line between Jamestown and Fargo, ND. Jamestown was served for several days by Otter Tail's backup internal-combustion peaking plant east of town and interconnection with another electric supplier. Buffalo was fed by a line from Colgate, ND.
- Otter Tail employees at the company's Central Stores in Wahpeton, ND, supplied 25 truckloads of electrical equipment to the troubled areas.
- Poles came from Otter Tail's division stockpiles and from various suppliers.
- Other electrical material also was provided from warehouses located at Otter Tail division office communities in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota.

ed some problems.

One person also suggested contacting a veteranarian to find out what to do for small animals.

Later in the discussion, Mike Howard, manager of SuperValu Foods in Thief River Falls, said that they had 6,000 square feet of space in their building which could be used for pets. Howard said that since the storms they have made plans for changes at the store, including the installation of a natural gas generator. He also said SuperValu would be looking at storing food of institutional sizes at the store on a rotational basis.

(SuperValu was praised as one of the stores in the community to provide supplies during the storm.)

Law enforcement officials and the fire department took on some unusual roles, such as taxiing people to shelters. From a liability standpoint, law enforcement officials face risks when they perform this role. They also risk being caught not being able to respond to emergencies.

Shannon Olson, also the dispatcher for the Tri-Valley Heartland Express bus service, and Dale Svendsgaard, bus driver, responded to the need for passenger transportation service by organizing transportation service to relief centers. Olson said having some of the STS crews riding with the bus really helped. She said when they encountered individuals unable to get out of their homes because of high snow banks the STS crews quickly created a path to the door. They also helped pull the bus out of deep snow.

Local National Guardsmen also responded to the call for help. Two track-vehicles were used to rescue stranded motorists and rural families without any power. The tracked vehicles were the proper vehicles for the job, he said.

A national guardsman said the national guard unit should have had some of the emergency equipment it needed on hand, instead of having to send to Grand Rapids for it. A indoor storage place for the M577 is also needed.

Though they praised the efforts of the sheriff's department and volunteers, they also suggested establishing a command center.

Better planning between the city and sheriff's department will be pursued. Officials praised each other for their efforts, but conceded that they were probably lucky it wasn't more serious.

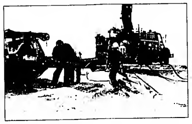
Everyone agreed that KTRF provided a valuable service during the blizzard. They coordinated many activities and responses and as well as helped guide people through a very difficult situation.

Jon Praska, station manager, said that at times over the years people wondered why Mark Allen kept the old surplus generator in the back of the station going.

He said he has learned that it was meant to keep the station operating for a maximum of 12 hours. Perhaps it was luck that it kept operating. Praska said when he tried to start it Thursday it wouldn't start.

Andrea Liston, news director at KKAQ/KKDQ, expressed the frustration, similarly felt at The Times, of being unable to provide a similar service to the community. Liston said the station is currently doing some re-wiring to make sure they aren't caught in a similar situation the next time this happens.

Destructiva power of the storm which struck North Dakote and Minnesota the weekend of April 5 and 6 is illustratad in this power pole on the Otter Tail Power Company transmission systam. The company lost about 900 polas in tha storm.



Crews working on Otter Tail Power Company lines damaged by the April 5 and 6 ice storm bettled cold, snow end fatigue to restore electric service as quickly as possible. More than 900 poles were downed in the Ottar Tail system.

The effects of ica on poles and transmission lines in the Otter Tall Power Company service area is indicated in the photo above. Poles were topplad throughout the system. By tha time line crews could reach some of the lines, poles were in threa feet of weter under three inches of ica.

After a week of dealing with employees and customers at the PKM Electric Cooperative office in Werren, receptionist Keren Olson couldn't be feulted for wearing this T-shirt to work on Saturdey, April 12. Menager Chuck Riesen preised the efforts of all of the cooperative's employees who put in many hours of extre duty during the extensive power outage.

Lincoln band leaves Wednesday for trip to Las Vegas, Nevada

Fifty-two members of the band at Lincoln high school, along with seven adult chaperones and four bus drivers, left this morning (Wednesday, April 16) for a week-long trip to Las Vegas, NV, and other points west.

Band members raised funds for the trip during the past several months and director Bruce Felt, the students and their parents expressed appreciation to the community for support of the trip.

The band will have four performances, beginning with a 7 a.m. combined session Friday with the Las Vegas School of the Performing Arts Band. Later in the day the local students will have an optional trip back to the School of Performing Arts to observe its jazz band in performance.

Sunday the band will attend a clinic at the University of Nevada Las Vegas (UNLV) and play a short concert for a high school band from San Francisco, CA, as well as listen as that band plays. An afternoon concert will be played at the MGM Grand theme park.

On Monday, April 21, the band will be in Wells, NV, for a concert and clinic with the Wells Area High School band. Director of the band at Wells is Kari Frandsen, who was a student teacher at Lincoln last year while completing her studies at Bemidji State University.

Traveling on two charter buses from Otter Tail Minn-Dakota Coaches of Fergus Falls, the band group will leave on the return trip to Thief River Falls about noon Monday, arriving here sometime in the afternoon of Tuesday, April 22.

Band students and their parents were provided with a list of rules, room assignments, chaperone groups and other information at a group meeting several days prior to the trip. Chaperones include Dave Lee, Mike Lehrer, Mrs. Lori Narlock, Steve and Patsy Young and Mrs. Donna Harlow in addition to director Bruce Felt.

"The only way all of us can get as much out of this trip as possible is if we work together," Felt noted in his rules for the trip. "You will need to be patient with, tolerant of and courteous to the other members of the wind ensemble and to the adults working with us. Leave every person we come in contact with as impressed with our band and with you as individuals as I am on a daily basis."

While in Las Vegas the band group will be staying at the Imperial Palace hotel, owned by former Thief River Falls resident Ralph Engelstad.

Last previous trip for the Lincoln band was in 1992 when the marching band traveled to participate in the Calgary Stampede parade.

Band members making the trip to Las Vegas include the following:

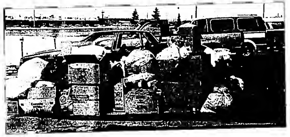
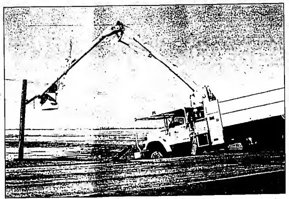
Railroad track just west of Alvarado had to be plowed out of a huge snow drift following the snow and ice storm which hit the area April 5 and 6. The grain elevator at Alvarado is visible at the end of this cut in the new snow. Railroad crews checking a culvert which runs under the tracks in this location reportedly had to dig down through 20 feet of snow to find the ice-filled culvert.

Lots of snow remains to melt and find its way to ditches and rivers in the area west of Warren. This bank of snow remained Saturday at a farm several miles west of Warren.



Materials collected for flood victims at Ada awaited pickup last week at the Family Bowl parking lot in Thief River Falls. An appeal through Trinity Lutheran Church with cooperation of KKAQ and KTRF radio stations on Monday resulted in three more loads of needed cleaning and basic food items taken to the Borup and Ada shelters Sunday and Monday. Especially needed by the flood victims are cleaning and disinfecting items such as Hilex brand bleach, rubber gloves, dish soap and laundry detergent; basic food items including flour, sugar, instant coffee and catsup; and light sources including candles, flashlights and flashlight batteries. Power had been restored to most of the city of Ada but failed again late Monday.



Boom truck from Lake Country Electric Cooperative of Grand Rapids was put into use repairing the electric line along County Road 17 in the area south of Sherack in Polk county last Saturday. The boom allowed linemen to reach across flooded ditches to attach wires to poles.

Infection Control update course held at NCTC

The class meets the MN Board of Nursing and Dentistry Requirements for CEU's.

The instructor is Joan Cook, Infection Control Manager, Merit Care Hospital, Fargo, ND, and the cost of the class is $35.

April 28 Seminar on Personal Effectiveness

"Winning Strategies Begin with Personal Effectiveness" is the title of a workshop for educators, business personnel and community members to be conducted Monday, April 28, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at the Best Western Inn of Thief River Falls. Bev Starkey will be the instructor.

Basic concept of the workshop is that personal effectiveness is the key to accomplishing what a person needs or wants to do. Working successful with others and building teamwork depends on personal attitude and communication skills.

"People tend to react to the actions of others," states Mary Morken, coordinator of the Northern Coalition Teacher Center in Thief River Falls. "How you act may determine how they react to you. Since we cannot change them, we might ask ourselves 'How can I change?' so they will react differently.

"When we start with ourselves, we empower ourselves with skills to get along and get things done. Result: our interaction with other people improves, stress is decreased and we have personal power to make changes. Prepare to learn and be entertained."

Bev Starkey is a full-time professional speaker. She specializes in personal effectiveness and communication skills and has a background as a professional entertainer, a teacher and 20 years of business experience with a large corporation.

In the educational field, Starkey has presented sessions at state association conferences, school districts, colleges and universities nationwide, including Princeton, Purdue and the United States Air Force Academy. She has provided programs for Honeywell, 3M, Ray-o-Vac and numerous other state and national conventions.

For more information about workshop fees and registration, call Kathy Myers at the Northwest Service Cooperative at 681-8005. Registration deadline is April 21.

Child care for flood workers offered in EGF

Tri-Valley Family Service Center in East Grand Forks is providing emergency child care for volunteers participating in the flood fighting effort from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week until the emergency is over.

Parents needing child care while working with sandbagging or other flood fighting efforts are asked to call 218-773-8452 to provide as much advance notice as possible. "A day's notice would be great," says center director Mary Barrett.

Parents will receive a voucher when they drop off their children. Vouchers must be signed by a flood operations supervisor and returned to the Family Service Center when the children are picked up. There will be no charge for the child care service but donations will be appreciated. Meals will be provided but parents must bring infant care items such as diapers and bottles.

The center can also use volunteer workers, especially senior citizens and young teens unable to work with the sandbagging itself.

SWCD banquet Thurs., April 17 at Steak Knife II

46th Anniversary banquet of the Marshall-Beltrami Soil and Water Conservation District will take place Thursday, April 17, at 6:30 p.m. in the Steak Knife II in Grygla. The location has been moved from the previously announced Grygla Community Center.

Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for students under 12 years of age with preschool children admitted free. Tickets are available from board members Grant Satre, Lloyd Wiseth, Milton Anderson, Gordon Foss and Orvis Byklum or the SWCD office on the north end of Motel 89 in Grygla.

Speaker will be Fred Kollman, area resource specialist with the Natural Resource Conservation Service in Thief River Falls.

The program will include recognition of the outstanding conservationists, Lee and Donna Nelson and Richard and Margaret Nelson of Goodridge and Goodyear Award winners Orlan and Eleanor Dahl and Arvin and Marvel Dahl of Gatzke.

Ashley Holthusen, honorable mention winner in the state conservation essay contest, has also been invited to present her essay at the banquet program.

Door prizes will be given and special promotional gifts presented to those attending while supplies last.

Rydell Refuge Opportunity Fair Thursday night

Volunteer Opportunity Fair will be presented Thursday, April 17, at 7 p.m. at Rydell Wildlife Refuge in Polk county to show people how to get involved with projects that will benefit wildlife and the public's enjoyment of the outdoors.

The refuge may be reached by going three miles west of Erskine or three miles east of Mentor on Highway 2, then 2.5 miles south on Polk County 210 to the main drive of the refuge. If arriving from the south, turn off Polk Co. 41 onto Polk Co. 210 and go about 3.5 miles north to the refuge entrance.

Volunteers over the past year at Rydell Refuge have cleaned and maintained flower beds, assembled, placed and monitored bluebird and wood duck houses, cleaned and maintained hiking and skiing trails, set up bird feeding stations and hosted the Visitor's Center.

Hosts for the evening April 17 will be the Friends of the Rydell Refuge Association. For more information call Les Peterson at 1-800-529-7576.

More than $4,000 in the area's share of the National Campaign for Human Development is available for distribution to local projects in grants up to $500 each.

Projects in the 14 counties of northwestern Minnesota must benefit the poor, be self-help oriented, involve the poor in planning and implementation, promote empowerment and conform to the moral teachings of the Catholic church.

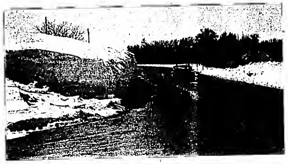
Persons who know of such projects are invited to encourage an application for a grant by calling or writing the Campaign for Human Development, Office of Christian Service, 1200 Memorial Drive, Box 610, Crookston, MN 56716, phone 218-281-4533.

Applications must be returned by May 16.

PKM Electric Cooperative manager Chuck Riesen (left) and manager of finance and administration Mike Schmidt were marking off areas restored to service on a map on Riesen's office door Saturday afternoon, April 12. As of Monday afternoon all but about 20 customers had service restored and they were expected to be on-line by the end of today.

Raising downed power lines to insulators and crossarms attached to newly-set poles was this crew from Grand Rapids working in the Sherack area of West Polk county Saturday. It was expected virtually all of PKM Electric subscribers would be back on line by today.

This front end loader in the pole yard of PKM Electric Cooperative on the north edge of Warren was kept busy loading and unloading poles and other supplies during the week following the cooperative's major power outage last week.



Entering Alvarado from the east would have presented a major problem during the storm which struck the area April 5 and 6. This bank of snow still remained Saturday, April 12.

Most of the costumes for the musical are being ordered from New York to assure authenticity. Props for the 1940's period of the play have been difficult to find, especially fancy furniture of that period.

The cast involves 35 students, a number of whom have given up jobs and other activities to devote extra time to the musical.

Northland baseball season opens season 1-5...

Pioneers have a busy start

Weather twice delayed the start of the 1997 Northland Community and Technical College baseball schedule, erasing games April 7 at Fergus Falls and April 9 vs. the Concordia College junior varsity in Moorhead.

But the Pioneers tried to make up for lost ground by driving 1,000 miles to play six games in three days – Saturday/Sunday doubleheaders at Williston, ND and a Monday twinbill in Brainerd.

Saturday, Northland was shut out by UND-Williston 5-0 and was outscored by Dickinson State 12-10. In Sunday rematches, the Pioneers beat UND-Williston 6-2 and lost to Dickinson State 10-0.

Monday's nonconference matchup with Minnesota Community College Conference Southern Division member Central Lakes produced 13-12 and 14-4 wins for the host Raiders – the opener going eight innings and the nightcap six.

Northland coach Terry Wiseth, happy just to have the opportunity to play, wasn't overly concerned about the 1-5 start. "We got outside, and played some games," he said. "That was the big thing."

There were some bright spots, especially offensively, in the Pioneers' season-opening flurry of games. "It looks like we have 12-13 kids who can hit the ball," noted Wiseth. Especially impressive at the plate were Gerry Hanson, a sophomore from Roseau, who was 5-for-8 with 2 RBI, and Scott Lorenson, a sophomore from Plummer, who was 4-for-8 with 9 RBI, two doubles and two triples.

The Northland pitching staff turned in respectable performances, according to Wiseth. "We don't have any overpowering kids, but they threw strikes," he said.

Defense needs some work, admitted Wiseth. "We need to work on our defense," he said. "We weren't making the plays that we can make. Our pitching isn't so overpowering that we can go out there and give up five runs an inning. The errors we made all came back to hurt us."

Because of the weather and field conditions, changes will be made to the rest of this week's Northland baseball schedule. An MCCC Northern Division opening doubleheader today (Wednesday) against Vermilion in Ely was switched to Sunday, and efforts are being made to move a Saturday match-up with Mesabi in Thief River Falls to Virginia.

Prowlers' progress slowed

■ Weather hurts young squad's development

There's some potential; some possibilities. But because of the weather, there's still more questions than answers for head coach Charlie Cornell as he tries to prepare Thief River Falls for the 1997 high school baseball season.

The poor spring weather has limited the team to indoor work and erased scheduled first-week starts at Irv Wilson Field against Badger/Greenbush-Middle River and Red Lake County. The Prowlers hope to play a pair of games Saturday in Detroit Lakes, where they are scheduled to meet the Lakers at 10 a.m. and Fergus Falls at 12-noon.

"We've been throwing in the gym," pointed out Cornell. "I imagine the first time we get outdoors, we'll be playing a game."

The 1997 squad returns just four lettermen from last year's 8-8 team – seniors J.J. Efta, Courtney Skjerven, Greg Wik, and Nick Stokke. Wick is the only regular position player back, and he may be moved from the outfield to the infield this spring.

Stokke and Skjerven were part of the Prowlers' 1996 pitching staff. The left-handed Stokke emerged as the team's No. 1 pitcher by year's end with a 2-2 record, 3.85 earned-run-average, 24 strike-outs, and 11 walks in 29 2/3 innings. Skjerven was 1-2 with a 4.03 ERA, 19 strikeouts, and 15 walks in 17 1/3 innings.

"We're going to be awfully young and inexperienced," acknowledged Cornell. "I think we've got some talent in the junior class. They played a lot and did a good job with the JV last year, but they have to step up to that next level this year."

Those juniors are led by Andy Harbott, a catcher, and Paul Frank, an infielder. They both gained experience playing against older competition in Legion ball last summer.

Others in that class who could contribute, according to Cornell, are infielders Casey Skjerven and Chris Mumm, along with outfielder Jeremy Swanson. Hard-hitting sophomore Andrew Solem could make an impact with his bat.

Frank, Casey Skjerven and Solem could join Stokke and Courtney Skjerven in the pitching rotation.

"We've got some good athletes," noted Cornell. "The question is, can they hit the ball and make the plays when we get outside and into game situations. It would have been nice to have gotten this team outside April 1."

Other juniors on the roster include catcher David Hoglo; infielders Ryan Anthony and Kyle Williams; outfielders Ryan Rogalla and Ryan Hesse; infielders/outfielders Hamilton Keefe and Nick Swanson; infielder/pitcher Bryan Nelson.

Joining Solem in the sophomore ranks are infielders Jeff Beste, Jarod Reierson and Adam Stusynski; outfielders Wade Chiodo, Garrett Novak, and Ryan Evenson; infielder/pitcher Derek Berg; and outfielder/pitcher Jeremy Smsky.

The preseason turnout also includes freshmen Tyler Stinson, Anders Brown, Mike Dowers, Josh Jenson, Jonathan Pream, Derek Walseth, Duane Wolff, Brett Johnson, Robert Martineau, Derek Kalsnes, Stephen Wigand, Nick Drees, Sam Kezar, and Tim Hruby.

Northland opens softball schedule with twinbill split

Contrasting results were featured Monday afternoon as the Northland Community and Technical College softball team opened its 1997 season with a doubleheader split against North Hennepin in Brooklyn Park.

North Hennepin overwhelmed Northland 21-0 in Game 1, but the Pioneers bounced back to take Game 2 by a 5-4 margin on Sarah Falk's RBI base hit in the bottom of the seventh.

"It was a case of first-game jitters," reported Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "They were nervous. We made lots of errors, and just never really got going."

A four-hit pitching performance by Carisa Meyer highlighted the Pioneers' second-game turnaround.

"They settled down and played a good game," noted Nikunen. "Carisa pitched a real good game, and we did a much better job defensively behind her."

Nikunen took his team to the Twin Cities area on the weekend to give his team its first outdoor work of the preseason that has been limited to indoor drills because of the weather.

DNR nongame wildlife program observes 20th anniversary

Minnesota's nongame wildlife program was created in 1977 as part of the Section of Wildlife. In 1980, then State Representative Collin Peterson authored a bill creating the nongame wildlife, or "chickadee checkoff," on state income tax and property tax refund forms and voluntary contributions began funding the fledgling conservation program.

Since then, Minnesota taxpayers have voluntarily donated nearly $1 million annually to this landmark conservation effort, and more than three-dozen other states have started similar programs funded by a tax checkoff.

Last year, 4.1 percent of Minnesota income tax returns and 3.2 percent of property tax tax refunds designated funds to the checkoff – a total of $933,025 – with the average contribution of $8.88.

"Each year, the percentage of households donating to the nongame wildlife program has decreased, but the average contribution has gone up," said Katie Haws, Regional Nongame Wildlife Specialist at Bemidji. "The funding has stayed fairly constant, but like every other program, inflation has taken its toll."

"These funds," continued Haws, "are the only way that conservation efforts for 490 nongame species of mammals, birds, amphibians, reptiles and fish are supported," said Haws. "The program receives no funds from the sale of hunting or fishing licenses. The importance of a contribution can not be overestimated."

In its 20-year history, the nongame wildlife program has seen many notable successes. In 1984, a statewide list of endangered, threatened, and species of concern was created – and subsequently revised in 1996. Animals such as the rare piping plover, and plants such as the white-fringed prairie orchid, are now given special protection because of laws associated with the creation of that list.

The bald eagle, once officially listed as endangered, has now been reclassified to special concern status. Much of its dramatic comeback can be traced to improved public awareness, lowered mortality from illegal killing, improved rehabilitation programs for injured birds, and individual management plans written by nongame wildlife personnel for each breeding pair of eagles.

"We currently keep track of 225 eagle pairs in 18 counties in northwest Minnesota," said Haws. "We have excellent cooperation from both public land managers and private landowners who want to protect nesting bald eagles." Haws says that in recent years, breeding success has averaged 1.1 fledgling chicks per active nest.

In addition, each nongame office maintains a large library of educational materials, including videos, pamphlets and posters on nongame topics. The 1997 nongame poster, which features a medley of 12 of Minnesota's favorite song birds, can be ordered from the nongame program's central office, or through any one of the six regional nongame specialists.

Haws cites other accomplishments of the nongame program, including the very successful reintroduction of trumpeter swans and peregrine falcons to the vibrant naturally reproducing populations in the state. However, many new challenges will face Minnesota's rare and endangered species. "The future of nongame preservation will include more cooperative ventures with the public," advised Haws, "such as customized stewardship plans for landowners, and lakeshore landscaping efforts conducted by lake association members."

Haws challenges taxpayers to take the "checkoff plunge" and do their part in conserving Minnesota's "other" wildlife species. The loon insignia on Minnesota income and property tax forms is a symbolic reminder to taxpayers that their voluntary support is needed to fund special conservation projects for Minnesota's rare, endangered and non-hunted wildlife species.

The loon-line checkoff is found on line 10 of the M1 individual income tax form, on line 3 of the short form, and on line 15 of the property tax refund form.

For more information about nongame wildlife projects in the northwest and west-central Minnesota region, or to order posters, contact Katie Haws at 218-755-2976, or write to DNR Nongame Wildlife, 2115 Birchmont Beach Road NE, Bemidji, MN 56601.

Police receive numerous assaults

During the past couple of weeks police have received a number of complaints regarding assaults or disorderly conduct.

Assault. On April 8 at 2:20 p.m. police received a report that a woman had been struck by a car. Upon investigation, police learned that a woman and man had been arguing in the 700 block of North Arnold when the man got in the car and ran into the woman. Timothy Donald Stenytum, 23, Thief River Falls, faces charges of fifth degree assault. When he came to the law enforcement to be questioned, police discovered he had driven to the law enforcement center and was intoxicated. He was then charged with gross misdemeanor driving while intoxicated.

Those recommendations amounted to a total of $3,850. Sims also recommended eliminating the following coaching positions, which he explained the coaches were aware of: the assistant cross-country coach for a total savings of $1,452, the assistant boys swimming coach for a savings of $1,925.64, the FMS wrestling coach for a total savings of $775.44. Sims explained that there were low numbers in all three activities. He said the above reductions certainly could take the sting out of raising user fees for participants and parents to $71 per sport for Lincoln High school and $56 per sport for Franklin Middle school.

Later, Carl Clack, board chairman, commended Sims and others who had input on the budget reductions.

Board representative Steve Young asked how many people participated in the process.

Superintendent Robicheau said the meetings were highly advertised. Because of the storm, participation at Lincoln High school was minimal. Franklin Middle School had some participation, and Challenger also recorded some participation, but not extensive participation. Robicheau said he didn't think a lot of different questions would have been asked if participation would have been higher. He said he would have liked to have seen more participation, but given the winter...

Students will be asked to make up only one of the two days cancelled because of the latest storm. Superintendent Robicheau said he will not ask students to make up the April 7 day. The day cancelled on April 8 will be made up on June 3. Graduation will still be held the last Friday in May and seniors will not be asked to make up the lost day. Staff and teachers will make up the last days.

The board approved the elimination and establishment of positions for the 1997-98 school year: elimination of .8 FTE medical careers teacher position at LHS; eliminate 1.0 FTE third grade teacher position; eliminate 1.0 FTE fifth grade teacher position; eliminate .6 FTE ESL teacher position; establish .4 FTE medical careers teacher position at LHS; establish 2.0 FTE fourth grade teacher positions; eliminate the 24-hour/week, 35-week/year 1.0 FTE educational assistant position.

On a roll call vote, the board placed Ila Flesche, .8 FTE medical careers teacher at Lincoln, on unrequested leave of absence for the 1997-98 school year.

The board approved of the termination of the following non-tenured certified staff for the 1997-98 school year: Challenger — Diane Aandal, .5 FTE speech clinician, Patricia Peterson, 1.0 FTE EBD teacher, Elizabeth Quick, .6 FTE ESL teacher, Paula Proska, .5 FTE title 1 long-term substitute, Darcy Dallagher, fifth grade long-term substitute; Franklin Middle School — Leslie Ammerman, .5 FTE science/social, Mark Davis, 1.0 FTE phy. ed. long term substitute, Kim Maidment, .6 FTE EBD, Chuck Wahath, 1.0 FTE 6th grade science, and Bob Wayne, assistant to the principal; Lincoln High School — Dean Woodman, .6 FTE physical science long-term substitute, Tim Mahoney, 1.0 FTE industrial arts, Terri Staples, 1.0 FTE guidance counselor; ALC Roseau satellite teachers — Ann Olson, Patricia Smidt, and Carla Vacura.

The board recognized the following several students participating in Bemidji Languages Day April 4; Kae Legg who recently completed her high school graduation through Northwest Area Learning Center; appreciation to the following staff for their extensive volunteer help at Challenger during last weekend's storm: Floyd Erickson, Linda Rux, Durlyn Rux, Sandy Johnson, Le Roy Vigen, Jerry Prickett, and Mike Lehner, and to SuperValu Foods for supplying food; American Legion, which donated $100 for the volunteer program Junior Great Books Program; the VFW which donated $300 for the Spanish Club's Costa Rica Trip; donations to the Little Brother/Little Sister program this year: Women of Today, Eagles Club, Red Lake Electric, Northern Motors, Sheldon's Auto, Heritage Center, Chuck Richards, Trinity Church Sunday School, American Legion, Northwest Medical Center (from their Christmas auction), Rotary Club, Norwest Bank and School Personnel (Greens for Jeans Program), Northern State Bank, VFW, and Zion Church World Day of Prayer.

Foundations to meet in TRF April 24

An informational meeting to explain new grant programs from The McKnight Foundation and the Minnesota Futures Fund will be held April 24, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the City Hall in Thief River Falls.

These grant programs were recently established to assist communities in helping families move from welfare to work and to help non-profits cope with federal and state revenue cutbacks.

The McKnight Foundation has pledged up to $20 million over two years for the planning and establishment of regional partnerships to develop networks and services to families in their transition from welfare to work. Such networks are expected to involve businesses, non-profits, government agencies and religious and civic organizations. Planning grants of up to $50,000 will be available with possible implementation grants following the planning.

The Minnesota Futures Fund has funds available to non-profits for grants up to $20,000 for planning or technical assistance enabling them to improve their cost effectiveness and efficiency. To receive support organizations must be committed to change and willing to explore strategies which are new and innovative.

Hosted by the Northwest Minnesota Initiative Fund, the April 24 meeting will include state agency presentations on federal and state welfare reform measures, officials from the McKnight Foundation and the Minnesota Futures Fund with information about available funds, follow up discussions among interested applicants.

Guidelines and application materials for grants from both McKnight and the Futures Fund will be available at the meeting. People interested in attending should call 218-759-2057 or 1-800-659-7859 to confirm.

The categories are in the following areas: agriculture, business, financial institutions, industry, labor, low income, minorities, seniors, soil and water conservation districts, vocational schools, watershed districts and women.

The commission encourages groups with expertise or special interest in any of these areas to nominate a representative for a position. These are one year terms of offices and members receive a $35 per diem payment as well as travel expenses for the days on which they attend commission meetings.

NWRDC is a multi-purpose planning organization serving Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau counties. The NWRDC is a policy making body comprised of 35 individuals who serve as representatives of counties, municipalities, townships, school boards and public interest areas.

NCTC offers trenching course

Custom Training and Continuing Education, Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls, is offering a four-hour class entitled "Trenching and Excavating" on Thursday, April 24, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Shooting Star Casino in Mahnomen, and on Friday, April 25, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Ramada Inn (near West Acres) in Fargo, ND.

This four-hour course is designed for workers who are involved in construction activities and who work in or around excavations and trenches and for utility, public works and highway construction employees.

Construction is one of the nation's most hazardous occupations with an annual work related fatality rate that is three times the rate for all other industry. An average of 60 workers dies in cave-ins every year. Because of these statistics the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has certain requirements that must be met when working in or around a trench or excavation. One of them is employee training.

This class addresses the hazards associated with trenching and excavating, soil classifications and testing methods, cave-ins and types of protective support systems, sloping and benching requirements, inspection requirements, access and egress requirements, testing and control of hazardous atmospheres and training and documentation requirements.

The instructor is Arnold P. Kraft, president of ARK Management Associates of Burnsville, MN. The cost of the class is $95 which includes extensive resource and training materials and lunch.

For more information and to pre-register, call Custom Training and Continuing Education at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls at 218-681-0868 or 1-800-959-6282.

Funeral

Many from this area attended the funeral service for John [illegible] in McIntosh on Saturday with Rev. Kari Moren officiating. Solos were Henry Burreck singing "My God and I" and Charles Svalen singing "The Lord's Prayer" with Diana [illegible] organist. John spent most of his life on the Nelson farm north of Gully in [illegible]. The Nelson farm was across the road from my folks so I knew the kind of things Rev. Moen, Bud Bjornaraa and the two girls said in their speeches were true about John. John was Bud's stepfather.

John was always good natured, kind and caring, he loved the outdoors especially the forests. John's father Olaf Nelson and uncle Erick Johnson were also interested in wood. One of them had an idea or a dream that resulted in the Nelson and Johnson Veneer and Box factory which was located 13 miles north and a mile west of Gully in the middle of a large grove of trees. Most of the eggs shipped out of the "North Country" were packed in the Veneer egg cases made at the factory.

John attended grade school in district nine. John's sister Christine, my brothers and sister and I walked the two miles to school with them most of it thru the middle of a large grove of trees, walking on a path prepared by our dads. Perhaps that's when John developed his love of trees, they were good protection from the cold north wind. We hadn't heard of school buses. John went on to school and graduated from McIntosh high school in 1936.

His first wife Sophie passed away in 1988. He married Geline Tveiten Bjornaraa in 1989. They lived on the Nelson farm before moving to Oklee and then to McIntosh in 1992.

The large crowd at the funeral coming from all directions told its own story, all those that had a chance to meet or know John automatically became his friend. Pallbearers were Travis, Courtney, Kent and Robyn McKercher, Shane and Michelle Fore, Jackie Gallo and Jamie Bjornaraa. Honorary Pallbearers were Raymond and Edwin Halvorson, Harry and Howard Hanson, Glen Tasa, Arlan Fore, James Nygaard, Allen Erickson, Verner and Clifford Arveson, James Velava and Orrin Anderson. The ladies served a nice meal after the service. It was John's wish to be buried in a wooden casket. Appropriately he was laid to rest in an all oak casket.

Easter Sunday potluck dinner guests at the Arnold Brovold home were Gay, Doreen and Sarah Brovold, Les, Carol, Sanna and Luke Torgerson of Thief River Falls.

Grandma Patty was up early on Saturday, she needed to decorate a birthday cake. Trent and Pam Dyrdahl's son, Chance was a year old and there would be a party in his honor to celebrate his first birthday. Guests at Trent and Pam's were David and Patty Carlson, Pearl Waine, Shawn, Holde, Marre and Shirley Solhiem, Bev Anderson, Mike and Shawn Dyrdahl, Danny, Bobbie and Brooke Dyrdahl, Joy, Tessa and Misty Dyrdahl and Ashley and Brittany. They were all guests for supper including birthday cake and ice cream.

Happy Birthday and [illegible] Chance.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Turenne, Map [illegible], Chad Gilbert, Amber Peoples, Mr. and Mrs. Carey Hanson, Willie Emerson and Ellie Handy attended Easter Services at Good Shepherd Church in Clearbrook. After services they were dinner guests at Ed and Lyn's cabin at Clearwater Lake. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Scott Handy, Miriam Handy, Mr. and Mrs. Jon Handy and Sara and they were all there to also celebrate Ellie's 85th birthday. Ellie also had coffee with many at the Gully Cafe on Saturday with guests from Fargo, ND, Grand Forks, Moorhead, Barnesville, Fosston, Thief River Falls, Minneapolis, Embarrass, Bemidji, Gully and from Wisconsin.

Bill Emerson from Wisconsin is here visiting Ellie and they have been busy visiting others. On Tuesday they visited Collie Nelson at Longby, on Wednesday Blanche and Hillard and Arnold Scott. Thursday they visited Elmer Nords. Lyn Turenne and Amber Peoples visited Ellie on Friday and other visitors this week were Map and Chad Gilbert, and Dave, Jennie and Jessica Borgen of Badger.

We have more cheerful news now about little Danielle, daughter of Steve and Marci Waine who was born March 7th. Things were not so sure for little Danielle to start with. Arriving a bit early weighing 4 pounds 13 ounces with R.H. negative Blood Factor. She was flown by air ambulance to Fairview Riverside Hospital in Minneapolis right away. With so many caring and concerned friends and relatives praying and concerned about her it seems to have helped giving her determination to fight for survival. Her mother is with her at Riverside and if Danielle keeps gaining they may hopefully be home this week.

Karen Molleas daughters Amahin and Nikano from Portland, OR, have been here visiting their mother. Both are students at Portland State University and were here on Spring break.

Grygla-Gatzke blood drive is slated April 22

Blood drive for the Grygla-Gatzke area will be held Tuesday, April 22, [illegible] p.m. in the Grygla [illegible] center.

To make an appointment to donate blood call [illegible] at 454-3315, [illegible] or during business hours at [illegible].

Studies show that [illegible] percent of all people before age [illegible] will need blood or blood products during their lifetime. Every [illegible] seconds someone in the United States needs blood. [illegible] men and women [illegible] to donate, yet less than [illegible] percent of those eligible actually give blood.

The biggest reason people don't donate is that "no one has asked them," Rundell said. "We want everyone in the Grygla-Gatzke area to consider themselves asked."

In this area more than 3,000 units of blood are needed each month to supply the needs of patients [illegible] by United Blood Services of Fargo, ND. The human body is still the only source for this life-saving product.

Persons who have received a blood transfusion within the previous 12 months are not eligible to donate. Donors must wait for one week after the last dosage of antibiotics for an infection and must be symptom-free of colds and flu on the day of donation. Ear piercing not done at a licensed establishment and tattoos defer a donor for 12 months.

Funeral

Another faithful "Old Timer" has left us. Funeral services were held at Sand Valley at Trail on Saturday for Knute Flateland, Rev. Robert Kelly officiating with Cindy Bjerklie organist. Knute passed away at his home near Trail on April 1st just three days before his 96th birthday. The younger people in the area will miss Knute. He drove the school bus for many years. Several of the relatives stopped in Gully on their way to the funeral. It was good to see Allen and Olin Flateland of Fosston all dressed up and doing so well. Others with them were Charlie and Ginny Edling of Brooklyn Park, Bradlee and Margaret Flateland of Foley, Jason Flateland of Osseo. Knute had lived a good long life but parting is still sad. Our sympathy to the Flateland family.

Went to the Mall on Monday morning to see if there was any news for the paper, but the conversation was the same all over, how they had to shovel to get out, how deep the drifts were, how tired out they were from shoveling, etc. The only one that seemed happy was Wally, but I met him in the Post Office with a big smile on his face with a letter from Gros Point Avenue North in St. Paul in hand.

Leon Peterson visited at the Kenneth Forsberg home on Friday evening. Others there that evening were Erick and Arlene Bergman. They had just returned from a trip to Atlanta, GA, where they visited their son Greg and wife Karen.

Happy Birthday Sanna Brovold!

This week it was my turn to go one more numeral up the ladder in counting of years. Edna Engdahl our cook had told Carol she would make a cake for me and in spite of her busy schedule she made and decorated a large cake that looked like it belonged in Fairyland with its decorations of light green, pink, yellow and lavender large enough so most of the people that came into the Cafe on Saturday afternoon had a taste. Carol came over from Thief River Falls with a bunch of red tulips and candles to decorate a couple of long tables. Then with the help of Sarah they served cake, mints and nuts and Carol T. waited on us with coffee. I'm grateful for all the cards and gifts I received. The cards may fade and the gifts wear out but the friendly caring and sociable atmosphere cannot be forgotten. Then I would like to quote young five year old Evan Godland in his article in the Record in December. "How am I ever going to tell the people know how much I appreciate all this kindness!

Gully American Legion Auxiliary

The Gully American Legion Auxiliary met on April first at 10:30 a.m. for the regular monthly meeting besides a day to collect and trim cancelled stamps and Betty Crocker coupons and soup labels. President Nancy called the meeting to order. Sanna gave the prayer for April. All stood for a minute in silence to honor the memory of our departed service men. The pledge of allegiance was given. Roll call was taken with five members present: Cathy, Irene, Mary, Nancy and Sanna. Cathy will send cancelled stamps to Department. It was decided to get four serving spoons for Betty Crocker coupons and hope to get some money for balance of coupons.

The annual convention will be held at Rochester this year. This is children and youth month. We had already donated to "Forgotten Children." It was decided to give $25.00 to Melissa Nelson to help with Cole and $25.00 to Merel Weine to help with Daniel along with cards saying, "Thinking of You." Nancy reported on all the 1996 project's we have taken part in. The New Veterans Home in Fergus Falls asks for our support. We had potluck dinner and adjourned.

Visitors at the Arnold Brovold home Friday were David and Darlene Rindahl and Esther Rindahl, Luella and Clifford Arveson.

Carol and Les Torgerson were caught in the storm on Sunday on their way back to Thief River Falls. We were thankful for telephone so they could give instructions to Luke on where to find candles for light in the house for his friend Kyle and himself and also how to get a camp stove working to get some hot food to eat.

Auxiliary

As Auxiliary members we felt good after reading about what the cancelled stamps, Betty Crocker coupons and picture post cards that we trimmed had been, used, for according to "Home Service" report said enough of these three had provided $774.30 that would be used for accessories for the Delta Talker for the Minneapolis Veterans Home.

Our Homes, Communities and Jobs Depend on a Stable Supply of Energy

Americans use more than 700 million gallons of petroleum products each day in the form of gasoline, heating oil, diesel fuel and jet fuel. Much of that petroleum is transported through underground pipeline systems.

FOR YOUR SAFETY:

IDENTIFY PIPELINES
Be aware of pipeline markers in your neighborhood. Write down the name and phone number of the pipeline company listed on the markers in case of an emergency. Markers include warning signs, aerial patrol markers, casing vents and painted posts.

RECOGNIZE A PIPELINE LEAK BY:
- SIGHT: Pool of liquid, dense fog or discolored vegetation
- SOUND: Hissing or roaring noise from the pipeline
- SMELL: Unusual smell

REACT TO A PIPELINE LEAK
- Leave the leak area immediately.
- Do not touch, breathe or go near leaking liquids.
- Do not create any spark in the leak area.
- From a safe distance, call 911 or your local emergency number and the pipeline company.
- Do not drive into a leak or vapor cloud area.
- Warn others.

CALL BEFORE YOU DIG
Know the location of all underground utilities near your excavating site. Call your State's Excavators "One Call System" Representatives from the pipeline or utility will come to your site and locate the utility for you at no charge.

Did April 15 Leave A Lightness In Your Step?

If there is a little more lightness in your step after April 15, it is probably due to less weight in the purse or wallet. Federal and state income tax deadline day has a way of doing that to a person. In spite of the deadline deferral announced for disaster declaration counties, for most taxpayers the April 15 deadline date is most valid.

In the first place, many taxpayers who are due a tax refund file their tax forms early. In the second place, by the time the deferral was announced most taxpayers had taken action to at least prepare their taxes for filing. And in the third place, the nine per cent interest rate to be applied to tax due by the Internal Revenue Service from April 15 to May 30 leaves no incentive to delay.

U.S. Senator Rod Grams hits the proverbial nail on the head when he writes: "As working Americans, it's easy to go from month to month without ever looking closely at just how much Washington demands from us in taxes. After all, payroll taxes are withheld automatically; it's not as though we have to write the federal government a check every two weeks. If we did, I have no doubt the taxpayers would have revolted years ago."

"April 15 is the one day out of the year when we're forced to consider the high cost of government, and for most taxpayers, the revelations are shocking." Sen. Grams writes. He provides seven important tax facts every Minnesotan needs to know, as collected by Congress' Joint Economic Committee, on which he serves.

Taxes Dominate Family Budgets. The typical family pays more in total taxes—federal, state and local—than it spends on food, clothing and shelter combined. That's a tax rate of nearly 40 percent.

Government Takes a Bigger Bite. The typical working Minnesotan now toils nearly three hours of an eight-hour workday just to pay taxes. In 1996, the tax bite on a typical workday totaled two hours and 47 minutes. By comparison, in 1945 the tax bite took one hour and 59 minutes.

How Times Have Changed. A family that pays $21,320 in taxes today would have paid just $7,046 back in 1955 (after adjusting for inflation and allowing for real income growth). Today's taxes are a threefold increase!

More Taxes Mean Less Freedom. Tax Freedom Day for the typical Minnesota worker didn't arrive until May 15 in 1996—the latest date ever. This means that if every dollar earned beginning January 1 went to pay federal, state and local taxes, taxpayers wouldn't begin working for themselves until May 15.

Interest Payments on the National Debt Remain a Major Expense. Interest payments on the nation's $5.3 trillion national debt eat up one out of every seven dollars sent by taxpayers to Washington.

How Much Should Families Pay in Total Taxes? According to a 1996 Reader's Digest poll, the maximum tax burden Americans believe a family should bear is 25 percent—not just for federal income taxes, but taxes from all levels of government, including social security taxes, sales taxes and property taxes.

Dependent Deduction Hasn't Kept Up With Inflation. The personal and dependent exemption that totaled $600 in 1950 rose to $2,550 by 1996. Had this deduction simply kept pace with inflation, it would total more than $8,000 today.

"Due to the tremendous tax burden they're asked to bear, Minnesotans are particularly vulnerable to the crush," Sen. Grams states. "Our working families pay the seventh-highest per capita tax rate among the 50 states, but see only a minimal return on their sizeable investment. A study conducted by Harvard University revealed that, despite its high-tax status, Minnesota ranks 47th in the amount of federal tax dollars spent in our state. While Minnesotans paid an average of $5,355 in federal taxes in 1995, Washington spent only $3,962 per person in Minnesota.

"....Do you really want Congress and the President making your spending decisions for you? Of course not—you can spend your dollars much more wisely than the government ever would.

"After all," the Senator points out, "it's not the government's money. It's yours, and you shouldn't have to go begging to Washington to keep a little bit more of it for your family."

Sen. Grams isn't really telling us much we didn't already know, but he is in a much more influential position to do something about it. How he performs at accomplishing change will speak louder than how he provides information.

Area Property Losses Extensive This Year

More than in any spring in the memory of most area people, property losses this spring will be extensive. Nearly every homeowner in this area is experiencing some loss, or at least additional expense in attempting to protect property from loss. Primary culprits have been the power outage which interrupted pumps and furnaces and caused flooded basements and frozen pipes, and the record snowfall and its resultant flooding.

People in the Ada community are just returning to their homes where damage is extensive and clean-up is major. A collection of materials at the Family Bowl went to the flood victims late last week. Items collected at Trinity Lutheran Church were brought to the shelter at Borup on Sunday and to Ada on Monday.

In great demand were flashlights and batteries, Hilex brand bleach (the only bleach which kills mold and bacteria), dish soap and laundry detergent, rubber gloves and such staples as instant coffee, sugar, flour and catsup. These items will continue in demand for some time and are received with eagerness and deep gratitude.

Money donations are valued less than products because they must be converted into useable items. Many flood victims were evacuated without their vehicles and they are unable to go anywhere to purchase the items they need to reclaim their living places.

Farmers have sustained a number of individual losses of livestock and dairy herds have been damaged from a productivity standpoint.

On a larger scale, PKM Electric Cooperative alone projects a $2 million to $3 million cost for its emergency operations to restore service to its customers and $6 million to $8 million to rebuild its system over a period of time.

And flooding in this area is just beginning to take its toll as the cold spell of the past week or so begins to moderate and melting of snow and ice accelerates.

Remarkably the number of accidents has been quite low and fatalities throughout Minnesota and the Dakotas have been few. The harsh winter is carrying over into a devastating spring and the costs will be high.

To The Editor:

In the early 1980's I worked at Northwest Medical Center and still follow with great interest the medical happenings in the community of Thief River Falls. It was particularly interesting to read the article in the Times of March 19, 1997, regarding the decision by the Falls Clinic/ Dakota Clinic to build a new regional clinic and outpatient surgical center in Thief River Falls.

The benefits of this type of medical center cannot be examined without looking at the entire healthcare system for the community of Thief River Falls. Many of the services offered at this new facility are currently being offered by Northwest Medical Center. In rural areas healthcare planning must be done with significant input from the community while examining the three major components of healthcare quality, access to care and cost effectiveness.

Many of the services offered by the Dakota Clinic in their new facility will be duplicative of those services that are already offered at Northwest Medical Center. What will this do to the overall cost of healthcare to the community of Thief River Falls? How will this affect Northwest Medical Center as a full-service hospital that's expected to have surgical services, emergency services, intensive care services, etc available 24 hours a day, seven days a week? Are patients currently being denied access to care at the current site of the clinic and hospital? And will the quality significantly improve with the building of a new Dakota Clinic on a different site?

Since leaving Thief River Falls I've had the opportunity to be an administrator of an 85-bed hospital, as well as a 28 physician multi-specialty group. It is my judgement that increased access to care, improved quality, and decreased costs to the community will not be realized by the construction of a new seven million dollar clinic and surgical center in Thief River Falls over what is currently being offered.

More than likely there has been a failure by Northwest Medical Center and the Dakota Clinic to involve the community in the planning of healthcare services for Thief River Falls and the surrounding areas. Most likely the planning, or lack thereof, was done from a basis of frustration, politics, and greed as opposed to good sound community health planning.

What can citizens of Thief River Falls expect? You should ask to be sitting at the table as these crucial decisions of healthcare access, quality and cost are being discussed. Ultimately, you will pay the bill for any decisions that are made regarding healthcare services.

Sincerely,
Robert Stevens, President
Ridgeview Medical Center
Waconia, Minnesota

To The Editor:

Deer are becoming extinct because of a few things: wolves, not enough food for a winter and snow that is too deep.

The DNR has a lot of land and they do plant a few crops around the refuge area for food. They plant a few hay, corn and grain fields, because I have seen them planting and watched it grow. They should probably plant more crops, but it costs quite a bit of money. A lot of that money is going for moose, frog mutations, ducks and mosquito research. Analyzing and figuring out what's wrong with these, what's killing them or what disease they carry is expensive. Some of the money goes for elk feeding, and trying to maintain the wolf population.

The wolf population is large enough, so now they can use some of that money for deer feeding. Wolves kill some deer but they don't kill too many.

They should quit deer hunting for a year or two so they can regenerate. In about 1969 they did not have a season, because there weren't too many deer around. Most of the deer were dying back then because of a disease. After a year the population went back up.

They should feed a little bit soon, a little bit later in the year, and push more trails for the deer to get to the feed, but the DNR has a lot to do.

Sincerely,
Matt Rybakowski

Odd Fellows To Burn Mortgage

"Young Pine lodge of Odd Fellows next Tuesday evening, April 22, will burn the mortgage on its property, celebrating the retirement of the debt incurred in 1923 when the building adjoining the lodge hall was purchased by means of a bond issue bought by members of the lodge.

"Odd Fellows and Rebekahs will commemorate the occasion with a program and dance, with the mortgage burning ceremony as a feature. The present Odd Fellows hall, the first brick building erected in Thief River Falls and the first with a full basement, was built in 1899, and the debt incurred at that time was retired in 1921."

'The equipment is designed to lift potatoes and other ground-harvested field crops onto trucks for sacking, thus eliminating the back-breaking tasks of lifting the filled sacks from the ground onto the trucks.

"The design for the new equipment was worked out in the Forsberg plant with the cooperation of Joe Dean of Des Moines, Iowa, originator of the idea, and his brother, Rodney Dean, who has been in Thief River Falls the past several weeks."

FROM THE NEW CITY

THE NEWS, HENRY W. LEE, EDITOR — APRIL 22, 1897
THIEF RIVER FALLS, POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA

Contemptible

[H. W. Lee, publisher of and the writer of the following editorial in THE NEWS, was also the attorney for the local faction who wished to preserve the village status of Thief River Falls rather than to become a city. Samuel Ware was the editor of THE PRESS, another Thief River Falls newspaper. Mr. Ware had been favoring the change to a city for this community. Apparently each was in the habit of insulting the other within the editorials of the day. Since THE THIEF RIVER FALLS TIMES of today has access to the pages of THE NEWS, we can see what Mr. Lee wrote, but can only surmise the content of THE PRESS' editorials by Mr. Lee's responses. During March and April of 1897, Mr. Lee, as the attorney for the losing side in the village/city controversy, had brought and won a law suit to force the city to pay his legal fees, since the village council was no longer in a position to do so and was, he claimed, the successor to the village council with regard to its debts.]

"It is astounding how contemptible some things, who claim to be men, can be. Every time we have been successful in a lawsuit, Ware has denounced the judge who rendered the decision. Judges of the United States Supreme and District Courts have been vilified by THE PRESS. In last week's issue he suggests that suitors should perjure themselves in order to remove cases from Judge Ives. We suppose that Ware has some followers. If every man or woman who does not endorse his malicious screeds on Federal Judges and others whom he cannot control would express their dissatisfaction of his course in a proper manner, he would either quit or find himself short in his accounts; he certainly would not get over $50 at one lick out of the spoils which the council are distributing to their followers. He also makes a malicious onslaught on Commissioner Hansen who is one of the best of Red Lake County commissioners - a man who has neither friends to reward nor foes to punish, but who conscientiously discharges his duty as he sees it. Red Lake county has no more efficient commissioner than K. M. Hansen and his course in the distribution of seed grain meets the hearty approval of all good citizens. If some deadbeats have failed to get three times what they are entitled to, they can get Ware to air their grievances. Birds of a feather flock together and you will always find buzzards and crows near a dead horse."

Thief River Falls provides flood help

Filled sandbags, homes for evacuees, shelters and meals offered to RRV flood victims

– Plans for evacuees –

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Monday afternoon plans were established for housing and feeding evacuees to Thief River Falls from Grand Forks and East Grand Forks.

Police Chief Ken Froschheiser explained that a meeting was held with representatives of the local ministerium. The purpose of the meeting was to ask them to help coordinate and set up evacuation centers, and establish priorities.

As of 3:30 p.m. Monday, over 300 evacuees from East Grand Forks, Grand Forks had registered with the Pennington County Law Enforcement Center.

Froschheiser said the Evangelical Free Church at Third Street and Arnold Avenue (the former Washington Elementary School), has been established as the main evacuation center in Thief River Falls.

Now that an evacuation center has been established, individuals not staying at the center will not be eligible for assistance. Chief Froschheiser explained that if evacuees are staying at a local motel, they will not be able to receive any assistance for staying at the motel. They must move to the shelter.

Meals are being prepared and served at the Evangelical Free Church. Individuals staying with family or friends in the area are welcome to eat at the center. The shelter and cafeteria was established so that local families would not be overburdened.

Meal times are 7:30 to 9 a.m. for breakfast, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. for lunch, and 5:30 to 7 p.m. for dinner.

Transportation to and from the Evangelical Free Church is available through the Tri Valley Heartland Express Bus at 681-6760.

A central site for donations has been established. The city is in need of clothing, bedding, toiletries, towels, pillow cases and other similar items for the evacuees. Those items should be taken to Trinity Lutheran Church at Fourth Street and Horace Avenue.

Financial donations for the Red Cross or Salvation Army should be sent or taken to the Pennington County Law Enforcement Center.

Chief Froschheiser said that if Evangelical Free Church becomes full, the list of alternate sites, include: Zion Lutheran Church, Trinity Lutheran Church, St. Bernard's Catholic Church, and St. John Lutheran Church. If those sites are filled, they will prioritize the remaining sites.

Individuals who have been evacuated Grand Forks or East Grand Forks, should have their prescriptions, if any, with them. However, during normal working hours, Dakota Clinic in Thief River Falls has agreed to fill non-narcotic prescriptions without a prescription. Narcotic prescriptions must be approved by a physician.

During non-operating hours, emergency medical treatment or prescription needs can be filled at Northwest Medical Center at the emergency room.

Dakota Clinic is offering free tetanus shots for any individual who feels they need one because they have come in contact with flood water and have a cut.

Minnesota Job Service has set up a special claims office in Room 131 at Northland Community and Technical College.

A number of patients from United Hospital of Grand Forks have been evacuated and transported to Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls. Families of patients evacuated to Thief River Falls can stay at United Methodist Church at First and Horace Avenue in Thief River Falls.

Approximately half a million sandbags were filled in an emergency effort in Thief River Falls during the past several days. More than 400 workers jammed the Eighth Street boat launching area both Saturday and Sunday for the bag-filling effort, although a minimal number of the bags was needed in the immediate Thief River Falls area. Semi-trailer loads of pallets containing filled bags rolled out of the Eighth Street bridge area steadily on their way to communities in need in the flooding Red River Valley.

– Emergency meeting held –

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Sunday evening local emergency officials, staff of Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC), Good Samaritan staff, and other officials met at NCTC to get out information about the emergency response in Thief River Falls and how it will affect operations.

The moving of Good Samaritan rest home to NCTC necessitated a number of changes including no school for students on Monday.

Dr. Orley Gunderson, president of NCTC, explained the order of events that took place Friday (see story on Good Samaritan in this edition). Gunderson said that they will do everything they can as an organization to help Good Samaritan operate and meet the requirements of the State of Minnesota. He said he wanted them to have a good experience in Thief River Falls. He also wants to do everything he can for the students of NCTC.

Ken Denman, director of nurses for Good Samaritan, said he was from Florida and thought he had been through a lot with his experiences with hurricanes, but he said, he had no idea what overland flooding was or what it was capable of.

Denman said residents had experienced some anxiety and tension early in the move. Things had calmed down as the system became operational. He explained, however, that residents in nursing homes like order. Any change is likely to increase their anxiety level and that's the worst thing for many. To begin addressing that situation, they have started setting up some modules for residents so that they experience some privacy.

Denman said, that he cannot thank the community enough.

Sandy Parker, RN Northwest Medical Center, said she had been working closely with professional and non-professional volunteers. She said she is putting everyone to good use. Sunday night she was concerned that there might be a lack of volunteers on Monday when everyone goes back to work. Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer should call 681-0840.

Parker said the community had been tremendous — bringing clothing, televisions, arm chairs and other things to the college.

It was an emotional moment for Dan Olson, who played an instrumental role in organizing the relocation of Good Samaritan. He explained that it became real difficult for him while moving in some of the residents. One of the residents was frightened and had no idea where her family was.

Olson said the hospital's mental health unit would be available for residents and family. "If you need help, we'll be there," he said.

The evacuation of United Hospital is also of concern to Northwest Medical Center. A number of patients were being evacuated to Northwest Medical Center. Extra doctors from Grand Forks and many other communities were being requested to provide assistance. Dick Spybalski, chief executive officer at Northwest Medical Center, said he didn't know how long this will last.

Dr. Chuck Winjum said Dakota Clinic would be contacting area physicians to provide assistance and would do whatever needed to help.

Pennington County Sheriff Gerald Moe is getting a little too used to disasters. This is the third disaster in Pennington County in a year. Lately, he said, everything they've done, they've done for everyone else in the region.

As of Sunday evening over one-half million sandbags had been prepared and sent to sites across Northwest Minnesota from the sandbagging operation at Centennial Park in Thief River Falls. At one point during operations Sunday, they counted 425 people at Centennial Park.

Part of being emergency director for the county involves making some tough decisions. Sheriff Moe said that as of Monday they would be taking over the food service at NCTC from Lon Gobell. They will direct staff of Lon's to work with them, but the purpose of taking over the operation is to absorb any business loss they might have. As – Panic amidst confusion –

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Radio reports of a breach in a dike at Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge Monday afternoon were greatly exaggerated due to a lack of information.

The reports resulted in a mass influx of people at Centennial Park to fill sandbags and some panic among residents living along the banks of the Thief River and Red Lake River.

The reports also filtered down river causing considerable concern. The sirens alarmed people in Red Lake Falls to the threat.

Law enforcement personnel explained Monday night that the radio reports were a result of some incomplete information. As more accurate information became available it was provided to the radio stations. It was explained that there had been a leak in an interior dike at Agassiz and even if it had given away, there was at least one more dike to hold back the influx of water.

Sheriff Gerald Moe said he wasn't sure where the original call came from, but it resulted in some panic on his own part. He said he realized that they didn't have any sandbags for themselves. He was also concerned about the residents of Good Samaritan at Northland Community and Technical College. He also realized he didn't have enough information about the report, such as where it was in Agassiz, whether it could be controlled, and how fast it would reach Thief River Falls.

He asked Marshall County Sheriff's department to send someone and Paul Jacobs of the Emergency Management division of the Department of Public Safety to go to the location in Agassiz. Shortly after that he received a call from Dave Bennett of Agassiz and was told that there was no need for concern.

By then however, traffic on Eighth Street was stretched east and west in a chaotic jumble, and people were running down the street trying to get to the sandbagging site. Sheriff Moe said sandbaggers prepared 15 semi-loads of sandbags in a relatively short period of time. Those sandbags, with the exception of a few which were shipped to Kittson County, are being stored at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center site.

Moe agreed that the situation was an overreaction, which was caused by a lack of information or mis-communication and frayed nerves. "All of the good work done over the weekend kind of went to hell in a few moments Monday night," he said.

– Bed frames are needed –

Good Samaritan Nursing Center of East Grand Forks, temporarily housed at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls, has an immediate need for twin bed frames to accommodate residents now living here.

Ken Denman, director of nursing services, has requested anyone having twin bed frames which can be loaned to the center to please call 681-0840 and indicate what they have and whether it can be delivered to NCTC or will need to be picked up.

Denman said that the Good Samaritan Center transferred 120 residents to Thief River Falls due to the flood in East Grand Forks, and that 108 residents and five congregate living apartment evacuees are presently housed at the college.

"Hospital type beds or electric positioning beds would be optimal," Denman said, "but use of any twin bed frames would be appreciated for the duration of this emergency situation. We have our own mattresses and are in need of the frames only."

Denman said people should call the 681-0840 number before taking any action so that a coordinated receipt of frames can be arranged.

"It was like moving into a really good friends home."

Worst case scenarios usually don't happen, but last week in Grand Forks, ND, and East Grand Forks, it did happen. Flood waters swept through the communities leaving thousands homeless. Among those torn from their homes, were residents and staff of the Good Samaritan Center, a nursing home. Friday night, they packed up their belongings and moved to Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls.

Sandra Bentley, administrator for Good Samaritan, said they weren't completely caught off guard. All week they had been making preparations for a worst case scenario. She had voluntary commitments from about 60 of the 180 staff to move with the residents if they were forced from the rest home.

Bentley has a firm grasp of her faith in spite of all that has happened. "God has provided in abundance during our hour of need," she said.

Friday morning she said she knew what commitment levels she had from her staff if the Kennedy bridge went out. At about 4:15 p.m., Bentley said she went across the street to her home and saw water coming down the street.

Bentley said because they were dealing with concerns at the nursing home they weren't fully aware of what was happening at the dikes. The first thing they did was separate and start calling people to get an accurate picture of what was going on.

During the week, Bentley said they had contacted possible sites for relocating if need be. At about 7:30 p.m. she contacted Dan Olson, associate administrator at Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls. Olson had made plans with Orley Gunderson to move residents and staff of the Good Samaritan to Northland Community and Technical College.

Olson said he would have to get final word from Gunderson, but Gunderson had been so worked up about the situation in a community where he had roots, that he had left for East Grand Forks.

He learned then that Bentley had already been in contact with Gunderson.

By 8 p.m. National Guard troops were landing in Thief River Falls. School District 564 buses were lined up and ready to transport troops and supplies to East Grand Forks and Grand Forks. Those same troops and buses would be used in the evacuation of Good Samaritan.

Supplies from Good Samaritan began arriving in Thief River Falls via two and one-half ton National Guard trucks at about 11 p.m.

Bentley said the National Guard were a great help. By about 1:30 a.m. the first residents began to arrive. By about 3 a.m. the last resident had arrived.

Bentley said it was a long slow drive to Thief River Falls because of the heavy fog.

The hardest part of the incident, she said, was helping them onto the buses and seeing or sensing the residents' vulnerability. At the same time she was experiencing personal vulnerability. She said she had to be reassured that she was doing the right thing.

It was "pretty awesome" in terms of response by volunteers and the accommodations made at the college, Bentley said. It was reassuring to arrive and see that some residents were already tucked in and asleep.

When the call went out for volunteers Friday night, the response was immediate. Olson said many things had already been accomplished by the time he arrived at the college. Cots and mats from the National Guard and hospital had been delivered and set up. Sleeping bags, blankets and other supplies were being carried into the college. Lon Gubell, food service provider at the college, had already set up snacks for residents and volunteers. Local businesses such as Bridgeman's and many others would play an integral part of the response as well.

Assembled in front of Zion Lutheran Church in Viking, this group of Viking residents and school children participated Wednesday, April 16, in the filming of an opening segment for the ABC television program "Good Morning America." The assemblage shivered in mid-morning cold as producer Bill Cunningham, cameraman Ed Mathey and sound technician Ted Godbutt worked around school buses, an incessantly barking dog and the city's regular garbage collection in an effort to complete the segment. They were still standing there when the Times' photographer left, but presumably were dismissed later that day.

Bentley said that at 5 a.m. Saturday morning she called her family. Many other people would be doing the same thing.

At the time residents and staff had left the facility, they did not have water in Good Samaritan. As of Sunday evening, Bentley still had not heard for sure whether there was water in the facility.

Some of the staff are dealing with their own emotions as well as the emotions of residents. Bentley said at least four staff members had lost their homes. Residents, many of whom rely on routine, were confused. Bentley said even to them the flood was unbelievable because they had not seen anything like it in their lifetimes.

Bentley and her staff will be reassessing their situation daily. They must maintain requirements set by State of Minnesota. Some of the residents had been moved by families. Some have been transferred to hospitals. It could, however, be a long time before they can return to Good Samaritan in East Grand Forks.

Bentley said she has been relying on her faith to help her through this situation. The response from residents of Thief River Falls has been tremendous. Bentley said "It has been like moving into a really good friend's home."

of Monday, students and faculty will have to get food elsewhere, he said.

Moe said he has been working closely with the Minnesota Department of Emergency Management, and FEMA.

Thief River Falls has established an emergency evacuation site at Evangelical Free Church (formerly Washington Elementary school), said Thief River Falls Police Chief Ken Froschheiser. That site will house evacuees from East Grand Forks and Grand Forks. He asked that evacuees sign up with the Pennington County law enforcement center (681-6161). That will help officials determine who's not missing, and help with enforcement and emergency response issues.

Job Service is expecting to see a lot of people file disaster claims. He said they will be using Room 131 at Northland Community and Technical College to process claims.

Even though they did everything they could, people in East Grand Forks are feeling like they lost and are taking it personally, said Carol Stumpf. The emotional toll is great, she added.

Deb Filer and Rick Nelson of NCTC, expressed how amazing it was that people responded so quickly. Nelson said there were a number of issues to resolve, but was optimistic. Filer said each day would be a new challenge.

Pat Gaffaney, who has held a barbecue at Centennial Park each day that sandbagging operations have been going on, thanked the many volunteers and added that as long as they will be out there, no one will go hungry.

Veterans Service office to be closed

Office of Pennington county veterans service officer John F. Ellison will be closed Monday and Tuesday, April 28 and 29, while he attends the Minnesota DVA/CVSO spring conference in Fargo, ND.

Tunheim bill to extend tax filing

Minnesota taxpayers living in the 21 counties designated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) as a disaster area would get an extension, without penalty, to file their state tax returns under a bill authored by Rep. Jim Tunheim of Kennedy.

Rep. Tunheim said the deadline for state tax returns would be extended to May 30. For northwestern Minnesota, eligible counties would be Kittson, Roseau, Marshall and Pennington.

"This is just a simple matter of compassion for people who have lost their homes, possessions and income," Rep. Tunheim said. "In addition, many businesses have lost important records. We can't expect them to meet tax deadlines when the store is still half under water. Extending the deadline is only common sense."

The bill extends the deadline for individuals and business in the following conditions: Matters relating to tax court, filing for income tax returns, paying income taxes, claiming income tax refunds, commencing actions relating to income taxes, appealing to the tax court from orders relating to income taxes and appealing to the supreme court from decisions of the tax court relating to income taxes.

The May 30 deadline would apply to individuals and businesses in disaster areas designated between April 1 and April 10. Interest will not be assessed nor collected from an individual, and interest must not be paid on an income tax refund to anyone who uses the extension. Also, taxpayers can take a deduction for uninsured flood-related property losses incurred since January 1 on their 1996 return, instead of having to wait until next year. This will help people recover part of their losses sooner than later and contribute to their rebuilding efforts."

The measure was next scheduled to go to the Senate where quick action was also expected. Gov. Arne Carlson would have to sign the bill for it to take effect.

Eric Bergeson is speaker for home study spring tea

Writer Eric Bergeson, manager of Bergeson Nursery at Fertile, will be guest speaker when the River Valley and Star extension home study clubs host a spring tea on Friday, May 2, at Oak Park Lutheran church of rural Oklee.

Registration will begin at 7 p.m. with the program to get underway at 7:30 p.m.

Bergeson recently published a paperback collection of 75 essays he had written for publication in the Fertile Journal newspaper. The newspaper column and the book were both titled Down on the Farm and the content deals with growing up, working and living in the small town/rural community.

Boyd Christenson, veteran KFGO radio personality in Fargo, ND, says Bergeson "has captured the mood and pace of life here on the plains." UND English instructor and poet Jay Meek says "Down on the Farm's musings are as barbed and well-formed as cockleburs."

Bergeson grew up in the rural Fertile area, graduated from Fertile-Beltrami high school and received his master's degree in history from the University of North Dakota. While at UND he worked as an editor and columnist for the student newspaper.

During his college years he also studied in New Zealand, Poland and Cambridge, England.

Participants in the spring tea will be entertained by Bergeson's witty, poignant observations of life in this area's representation of small town and rural America, and may also be provided with some late spring horticultural advice as a bonus.

Following Bergeson's presentation, the tea and collage of desserts will be served.

For more information, contact Jolene Lundeen at 796-5670 or the Pennington county extension office.

ON MY MIND

Kim Chadwick-Quade

Do all you can ..
as long as you ever can

Because April is the month to recognize and honor volunteers, I planned on writing about volunteers this week. I was going to use a previous story that was appropriate and well-received, update some information and submit it.

But after what's happened in the area in the last two weeks, I discovered I didn't have to redo anything; the story was in my front yard.

About 10 a.m. Saturday morning law enforcement officials suggested that two of my neighbors sandbag their homes. Within minutes the sandbags and dozens of volunteers arrived to help. There were friends, neighbors and those who just wanted to lend a hand. The sandbagging effort attracted more people than a good rummage sale; cars lined both sides of our normally-quiet street.

Friends called asking if we needed anything, others brought food. In a short time, the job was finished and the volunteers moved on to help others.

In another part of Thief River Falls, citizens convened to fill the sandbags we had used. Others went to Northland Community and Technical College to assist with the more than 100 people who had been displaced from area nursing homes. And on the television, I heard our residents offering their homes to evacuees from Grand Forks and East Grand Forks.

All of these people have truly displayed the volunteer spirit, as did those who sprang into action two weeks ago after the severe ice storm and power outage. People helped at shelters and others offered their assistance to neighbors, friends and strangers. We've seen countless examples of goodwill and volunteering.

These actions also take place year-round, year after year in Thief River Falls and beyond. Many people say "yes" when they're called upon to volunteer, to do something good for no monetary reward.

Volunteers are utilized in countless ways - nursing homes and hospitals, schools, libraries, churches, United Way, food shelves and soup kitchens, and service and fraternal organizations.

People come forward everyday and say "I'll do that. What can I do to help?"

What if people didn't volunteer? What if everyone was too busy to help?

No one would listen to the children read at school or learn science projects. The senior citizens and shut-ins wouldn't receive their home-delivered meals, possibly their only meal of the day. The church wouldn't be cleaned. There would be no one to cook for and serve a funeral for a family member. Your children couldn't attend religious education classes. There would be less money to seek cures for deadly diseases.

Without volunteer blood donors, people would die. Without 4-H and scouting programs, our young people would be without vital leadership skills. Less fortunate children and adults would go hungry. Some children wouldn't celebrate Christmas.

Without volunteers, many parts of our society would be at a standstill. We couldn't function.

That's why we thank all the people who've come forward and said "yes" to helping others; there are a lot of them. The volunteer spirit has definitely been alive here for the last two weeks and way before.

I know it will continue - that's how we are. Many surely live with the thought in mind: Do all the good you can, in all the ways you can, in all the places you can, to all the people you can, as long as you ever can.

Oklee H.S. presents play on Sunday

Oklee High School will be presenting the play "It was a Dark and Stormy Night" by Craig Soldaro Sunday, April 20, at 2 and 7:30 p.m. in the Oklee gymnasium.

The play takes place in Sam Slaughter's (Bob Christianson) mansion during the beginning of World War II. Same is a famous murder mystery writer who is a recluse and produces a weekly radio show from his mansion called "It was a Dark and Stormy Night". The radio personalities bring Slaughter's plays to life as Cleo Riviera (Kelli Hofstad), Audrey Ross (Tracy Rystad), Carter Lane (Jacob Larson), and Molly Mead (Erin Melby). The director Barbara Prescott (Tara Bachand) and the producer Pete Wilson (Jim Dulka) try to hold the show together while Sam Slaughter decides to fire Audrey Ross and threatens the rest of the case as well so he can allow his new "friend" Molly to have the lead in his new cast.

Not many people like Sam Slaughter, he fired the aging star Audrey, two-timed Cleo Riviera, yelled at his butler (Julie Gamm), his agent Hillary Dunn (Rachel Melby) and a woman from his past Shiela (Anna Rustan) threaten blackmail. Before Sam can meet the kidnapping demands, he is kidnaped.

Detective Sumson (Quinn Bishop) begins to unravel the mysterious disappearance as Sam's Publisher (Averre Marquis) brings three contest winners to watch the production of a new radio play. The contest winners (Cassie Knutson, Vanessa Lundeen, and Pam Kolstoe) find more than they counted on as they watch as Shiela is found dead, Sam is kidnaped or worse, and who will be next.

Tickets are available at The Third Base in Brooks, D&R Grocery, and Rustan's Grocery.

Shaving Cream Fingerpainting

Shaving cream is a wonderful sensory material. Be sure to use unscented shaving cream because the perfume in the scented cream may irritate children's skin. Baking sheets provide children with a contained surface on which to work, reducing mess. Another option is to let children fingerpaint directly in the sink. The soapy residue leaves the sink sparkling clean. Hint: Warm shaving cream feels especially good. To heat shaving cream, simply set the can in hot water for a few minutes.

PARENTING TIPS

Talking About Negative Feelings

You can help your child learn to put negative feelings into words. Often, when parents discourage their children's negative feelings, they mean to discourage their behavioral expression rather than the feelings themselves.

At about five years old, children have good enough control of their actions and good enough language to learn to substitute words for actions when they feel angry, frustrated and otherwise upset. For example, suppose your child's little brother scribbles in the pages of her favorite book. She has a right to be angry, but she doesn't have the right to hit or yell at him.

You can help her learn to express such feelings in an acceptable way by:

- the way you respond to her when she does something similar, and
- your putting into words for her how you think she probably feels. "You're mad because Joey scribbled in your book. Feel like talking about it?"

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Set a good example for your child by stating your feelings with words.

Gajen Ramanathan received a close cut recently after losing a bet that 50 percent of his accounting students at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls couldn't receive an "A". Ramanathan has made an offer to shave his head since he began teaching at Northland in 1993.

NCTC professor loses his hair over a bet with students

There are times when a second thought might be given to promises made to college students. That's perhaps the way Northland Business Instructor, Gajen Ramanathan might be thinking following winter quarter at the college.

At the beginning of winter quarter, Ramanathan told his accounting students that if more than 50 percent of them earned an "A" during the quarter, he would shave his head. The winter quarter results were exceptional with 15 of 25 students meeting the goal.

According to Ramanathan, "The students were amazing! They took the challenge and met it!" He added, "after the grades were released and they met the goal, they told me I didn't have to shave my head, however, I made a promise and I wasn't going to back down."

Gajen is seen on campus wearing several styles of headgear and, occasionally, exposing his shaved head to students, faculty and staff. When asked if the challenge is open during spring quarter, Ramanathan said, "I have made this offer since I began teaching at Northland in 1993 and I will continue to make this offer ... but ... now 60 percent or more must score an "A". I don't want to be bald all the time!"

Telephone books distributed by U.S. West

The new US West Direct Minnesota Northwest white and Yellow Pages is scheduled to begin delivery April 24. More than 34,000 directories will be distributed to homes and businesses throughout the Minnesota Northwest area.

"The communities this directory serves are very important to US West Direct, and we are committed to making this year's phone directories handy, useful and the best available resource kit for shoppers," says Jerry Ebers, sales director.

New in this year's director, listings for the communities of Donaldson, Lake Bronson and Lancaster have been added to the White Pages.

A noticeable difference in this year's book is the URL for the US West Yellow Pages on the Internet, located on the cover of the Yellow Pages paper directory (http://yp.uswest.com).

For the first time, advertisers wanting to list their email and/or Internet URL address now have the option of including this information with their phone number and street address.

Northwest Minnesota area businesses and residents are being asked to recycle their outdated US West Direct White and Yellow Pages between April 24 and May 12. Recycling containers are located at Hugo's in Crookston and Thief River Falls, and Wally's Supermarket in Roseau.

More counties added to the disaster declaration

Twenty-five counties have been added to the disaster declaration issued by President Clinton on April 8. The addition, sought by Governor Arne Carlson, makes a total of 46 counties eligible for state and federal programs available to individuals, businesses and communities who suffered damage or loss from flooding, severe winter storms, snow melt, high winds, rain and ice.

The 25 counties were added after the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) reviewed damage assessment information submitted by the Minnesota Division of Emergency Management (DEM). "If damage assessment figures come in from other counties and the state, FEMA will review adding more counties and additional federal program to the declaration," John McKay, federal coordinating officer said in making the announcement.

People who suffered damage in the following counties are encouraged to apply for assistance: Aitkin, Anoka, Becker, Blue Earth, Carver, Dakota, Goodhue, Grant, Hennepin, Houston, Kandiyohi, Lake of the Woods, Le Sueur, Lincoln, Mahnomen, Morrison, Nicollet, Ramsey, Redwood, Renville, Scott, Sibley, Stevens, Wabasha, and Winona.

A toll-free application telephone number is now operational for those in the 25 additionally declared counties affected by the disaster who suffered property damage or loss. This number can be used to apply for a wide range of state and federal disaster assistance programs such as funding for disaster housing assistance, U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) low-interest loans for individuals and businesses to repair or replace damaged property, disaster unemployment assistance, and grants for serious needs and necessary expenses not met by other programs.

McKay said those impacted may apply for assistance immediately by calling the toll-free registration number, 1-800-462-9029 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. (CT) seven days a week, until further notice. Those with a speech or hearing impairment may call a special TTY number at 1-800-462-7585.

...Jumbled Thoughts This Week

My brain is jumbled - I am completely disoriented - I am having trouble remembering what day it is - I have been losing my glasses and can't see to find them - my ears hurt from listening to the television, the radio and the scanner all at once - my eyes are red from watching television and crying at what I see. Anyone would think I was a flood refugee!

I may not be a refugee, but I am living with two of them, well, maybe four. My daughter and son-in-law fled the flood, along with their two cats, two vehicles, and a canoe, which is now residing in my back yard. It is not hard to feel the pain this flood has caused when it is so near.

Since my brain is so jumbled, today's column is also jumbled. Is that the way you are feeling too?

We are in the midwest, aren't we? I have forgotten sometimes over the past few flood days. Water, water everywhere. The Coast Guard is patrolling the waterways of Grand Forks. Can it be? The question is, if it looks like an ocean and acts like an ocean, is it an ocean?

The best cartoon I have seen in the past few flood days is the one that ran in last week's Times - the sign that read, "Land of 10,000 Lakes," with the 10,000 crossed out and written over to read, "Land of 1 Lake."

A fire burning out of control in the middle of a flood? Firemen getting hypothermia from icy water while fighting the fire? And the final insult, the fire truck running out of gas while trying to fight the fire - while sitting in flood water.

After the fire, buildings that look like the remains of World War II, but sitting in the canals of Venice, empty windows looking like dead, staring eyes.

Soldiers in hum-vees, patrolling the flooded streets, soldiers in boats, soldiers in helicopters flying over the flood waters, soldiers rescuing people from the flood waters, soldiers throwing sand bags, building dikes, soldiers, soldiers everywhere. It is a war, but the enemy is water.

Moving pictures - pictures of young mothers and fathers trying to pack up their lives to flee the flood in minutes, pictures of blocks and blocks of houses buried in brown water, pictures of animals left behind, pictures of flooded streets, the bare tops of trees, roads that lead to nowhere, bridges that are part of what they had once bridged, abandoned toys floating, deserted cars, pictures of extraordinary rescues, pictures of a fire burning out of control.

The faces - faces of solid, tough farmers crying tears of despair, the lovely faces of little old ladies who don't know what to do next, the fearful faces of little children, the tired faces of people who have fought the good fight but had to give it up.

Sounds - the sounds of water rushing over a dike, the crackling sound of fire, sounds of comfort, sounds of pain, sounds of sadness.

People helping people - again. People giving of themselves, offering their homes and lives to those they don't even know, people giving of what they have to feed and clothe others, people filling sandbags for others, people building dikes as they watch their own homes disappear in the flood waters, the elderly lady who made two large casseroles for the flood fighters, the children who gave sandwiches and drinks to truck drivers.

And, more heartache, although the crest is near in Grand Forks and East Grand Forks, the imminent danger to other communities and farms as the Raging Red makes its way north.

The Story of a Fire Engine, part 2

No one is sure when or how, but the owner of the Waterous Engine Company heard that Ogahmah No. 1 was in the scrap yard. Only about 17 steam fire engines remained in existence. In 1953 the Waterous Company came and salvaged the engine, still in good shape, and took it from Thief River Falls to St Paul. Restoration work included four new wheels, a paint job, a new hose, plus brass lamps and other brass accessories.

The Waterous Company used the engine for parades and display until 1966 when they donated it to the Minnesota Historical Society to be put on display.

Having no suitable display space, the Society loaned the engine to Lumbertown USA, a restored 1870s logging village near Brainerd, where it was shown to visitors until the mid 1980's. Next the St Paul Fire Museum displayed the Thief River Falls engine.

In 1992 the Minnesota Historical Society completed their new History Center in St Paul. The same year the Thief River Falls engine went into the first display there, a centerpiece for the popular "Minnesota A to Z" exhibit. Ogahmah No. 1 illustrates "F is for Fire Engine." It is shown in front of a huge photo of a burning building. A dalmation stands beside it. This breed of dog was part of any fire-fighting team because the dog helped make way for the galloping horses. Dalmatians also were counted on to help calm excited horses.

Why all the interest in an old fire engine? First of all, it tells the story of a fire-fighting in a labor-intensive era. Freeman Lanska, who was a volunteer fireman for 30 years, told how the fire department had to keep a fire going at all times at the station so that hot coals would be available at any time. When the fire bell rang, the hot coals were loaded into the truck to get the fire under the boiler going. The steam generated would provide pressure to pump water from the back of the truck. At the fire, the intake hose on the front of the truck was parked over a cistern, well, or close to the river. The water pump in the truck could pump out either side. A fireman had to watch the water pressure gauge up front so they knew what was happening.

Only enough coal to last 5 to 10 minutes could be carried on the truck, so a coal truck always started for the fire whenever the bell in old Central School clanged three times, paused, and then again clanged three times.

The horses that had drawn the engine to the fire would be nervous and straining at their harnesses so the teamster would be take them away from the site of the fire. Without the horses, the pumper could be pulled short distances by men.

The engine is attractive. Waterous' early advertising extolled the fine points of their product: "In the finish of the No. 2 engine all working parts are polished steel and brass, with polished air chamber. The boiler is lagged with asbestos, covered with Russia iron jacket held in place by burnished brass bands. The engine is otherwise neatly painted in gold striping and ornamental work making a very pleasing and attractive finish." On the front of the engine was a large silver ball. This was an "air dome" that helped steam come out smoothly, sort of a hydraulic shock absorber.

Thief River Falls Fire Department history tells of the early days of the city with its dirt streets, wooden sidewalks, and horse and buggy traffic. The town bustled with activity with plenty of people hustling about, lads in knickers and girls in pinafores underfoot, and animals not an unusual sight in midtown. "Should the fire bell clang, what a hullaballoo of activity! Snorting horses, careening wild-eyed down the street, yelling teamster, volunteer fire fighters running or riding horses rushing to be the first at the scene of the fire. Dust billowed as onlookers appeared, seeming to flow out of the weed patches between the houses."

This is the world that the old fire engine evokes. Sounds and sights of fire-fighting were much different from today. Flashing red lights and fire whistles were not used until the 1930's, about the same time that fire trucks replaced the horse-drawn engine in Thief River Falls.

Steam fire engines were used only a few years. Before steam engines, water was pumped on fires by hand. The Waterous Company began to make gas engines to pump water in 1898. They worked much better in cold weather and were ready to be used at a moment's notice.

Since 1992, a million people have seen Ogahmah No. 1 at the Minnesota History Center. In 1996 alone there were 260,000 visitors to the exhibit, 76,000 of them school children. The fire engine is on display now, and you can see it at the Minnesota History Center on West Kellogg Boulevard in St Paul any day of the week.

MDA warns against burning containers that held pesticides

Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) warns pesticide users that the burning of pesticide containers in an open fire is no longer permitted in Minnesota. The burning ban extends to all types of pesticide containers including plastic and paper bags, rigid plastics, metals and aerosols.

Steve Poncin, MDA pesticide regulatory advisor, said "burning pesticide containers produces airborne pollutants that can be harmful to human and animal health, as well as cause environmental damage. The problem is compounded when pesticide containers are not rinsed or are inadequately rinsed."

In addition to air pollution, the residue from an open fire can be hazardous. Combustion in open fires seldom consumes all materials. The result is a concentration of residue in a localized area of soil. High levels of heavy metals and/or pesticides can be found in a site used continually for burning.

In 1991 the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency established rules banning the practice of burning pesticide containers in open fires. Since that time many counties have enacted regulations that also limit and restrict open burning.

Current methods of proper pesticide container disposal include recycling plastic containers through the empty pesticide container collection and recycling program and taking other types of containers to a sanitary landfill. Regardless of the disposal method, pesticide containers must be properly prepared for disposal in accordance with the particular pesticide label directions.

For more information about the empty pesticide container collection and recycling program, contact the Minnesota Department of Agriculture at 612-296-5136. For information about open burning regulations and permits, contact the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources at 612-297-4467.

ACTIVITIES

Shaving Cream Fingerpainting

Shaving cream is a wonderful sensory material. Be sure to use unscented shaving cream because the perfume in the scented cream may irritate children's skin. Baking sheets provide children with a contained surface on which to work, reducing mess. Another option is to let children fingerpaint directly in the sink. The soapy residue leaves the sink sparkling clean. Hint: Warm shaving cream feels especially good. To heat shaving cream, simply set the can in hot water for a few minutes.

PARENTING TIPS

Talking About Negative Feelings

You can help your child learn to put negative feelings into words. Often, when parents discourage their children's negative feelings, they mean to discourage their behavioral expression rather than the feelings themselves.

At about five years old, children have good enough control of their actions and good enough language to learn to substitute words for actions when they feel angry, frustrated and otherwise upset. For example, suppose your child's little brother scribbles in the pages of her favorite book. She has a right to be angry, but she doesn't have the right to hit or yell at him.

You can help her learn to express such feelings in an acceptable way by:

•the way you respond to her when she does something similar, and

•your putting into words for her how you think she probably feels. "You're mad because Joe scribbled in your book. I feel like talking about it."

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Set a good example for your child by stating your feelings with words.

Gejen Ramanathan received a close cut recently after losing a bet that 50 percent of his accounting students at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls couldn't receive an "A". Ramanathan has made an offer to shave his head since he began teaching at Northland in 1993.

NCTC professor loses his hair over a bet with students

There are times when a second thought might be given to promises made to college students. That's perhaps the way Northland Business Instructor, Gajen Ramanathan might be thinking following winter quarter at the college.

At the beginning of winter quarter, Ramanathan told his accounting students that if more than 50 percent of them earned an 'A' during the quarter, he would shave his head. The winter quarter results were exceptional with 15 of 25 students meeting the goal.

According to Ramanathan, "The students were amazing! They took the challenge and met it!" He added, "after the grades were released and they met the goal, they told me I didn't have to shave my head, however, I made a promise and I wasn't going to back down."

Gajen is seen on campus wearing several styles of headgear and, occasionally, exposing his shaved head to students, faculty and staff. When asked if the challenge is open during spring quarter, Ramanathan said, "I have made this offer since I began teaching at Northland in 1993 and I will continue to make this offer but now 60 percent or more must score an "A". I don't want to be bald all the time!"

Telephone books distributed by U.S. West

The new US West Direct Minnesota Northwest white and Yellow Pages is scheduled to begin delivery April 24. More than 34,000 directories will be distributed to homes and businesses throughout the Minnesota Northwest area.

"The communities this directory serves are very important to US West Direct, and we are committed to making this year's phone directories handy, useful and the best available resource kit for shoppers," says Jerry Ekers, sales director.

New in this year's directory, listings for the communities of Donaldson, Lake Bronson and Lancaster have been added to the White Pages.

A noticeable difference in this year's book is the URL for the US West Yellow Pages on the Internet, located on the cover of the Yellow Pages paper directory (http://yp.uswest.com).

For the first time, advertisers wanting to list their email and/or Internet URL address now have the option of including this information with their phone number and street address.

Northwest Minnesota area businesses and residents are being asked to recycle their outdated US West Direct White and Yellow Pages between April 24 and May 12. Recycling containers are located at Hugo's in Crookston and Thief River Falls, and Wally's Supermarket in Roseau.

Flood victim benefit April 27 in Grygla

A community benefit to aid flood victims will be held from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday, April 27, at the Community Center in Grygla. All proceeds of the dinner will go to area flood victims.

Chili, sandwiches and all the trimmings will be served. The event is sponsored by local churches and organizations. A free-will offering will be accepted. Donations can be sent to Lynette Jelle, Box 49, Grygla, 56727; or Mildred Klamar, Route 2, Box 75, Gatzke, MN 56724.

More counties added to the disaster declaration

Twenty-five counties have been added to the disaster declaration issued by President Clinton on April 8. The addition, sought by Governor Arne Carlson, makes a total of 46 counties eligible for state and federal programs available to individuals, businesses and communities who suffered damage or loss from flooding, severe winter storms, snow melt, high winds, rain and ice.

The 25 counties were added after the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) reviewed damage assessment information submitted by the Minnesota Division of Emergency Management (DEM). "If damage assessment figures come in from other counties and the state, FEMA will review adding more counties and additional federal program to the declaration," John McKay, federal coordinating officer said in making the announcement.

People who suffered damage in the following counties are encouraged to apply for assistance: Aitkin, Anoka, Becker, Blue Earth, Carver, Dakota, Goodhue, Grant, Hennepin, Houston, Kandiyohi, Lake of the Woods, Le Sueur, Lincoln, Mahnomen, Morrison, Nicollet, Ramsey, Redwood, Renville, Scott, Sibley, Stevens, Wabasha, and Winona.

A toll-free application telephone number is now operational for those in the 25 additionally declared counties affected by the disaster who suffered property damage or loss. This number can be used to apply for a wide range of state and federal disaster assistance programs such as funding for disaster housing assistance, U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) low-interest loans for individuals and businesses to repair or replace damaged property, disaster unemployment assistance, and grants for serious needs and necessary expenses not met by other programs.

McKay said those impacted may apply for assistance immediately by calling the toll-free registration number, 1-800-462-9029 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. (CT) seven days a week, until further notice. Those with a speech or hearing impairment may call a special TTY number at 1-800-462-7585.

Share the American Dream with a teenager from another country. Students from Europe, South America, Central America, Scandinavia and the former Eastern Bloc would like to spend an academic quarter, semester or year in the United States. All share a common dream, to live as a typical American teenager with all the responsibilities and privileges that are involved.

Students come with their own spending money and medical insurance. They are screened for academic and English skills and ready to immerse themselves in another culture. They bring interests and talents to share with your family as well as a belief that student exchange promotes global understanding.

...Jumbled Thoughts This Week

My brain is jumbled - I am completely disoriented - I am having trouble remembering what day it is - I have been losing my glasses and can't see to find them - my ears hurt from listening to the television, the radio and the scanner all at once - my eyes are red from watching television and crying at what I see. Anyone would think I was a flood refugee!

I may not be a refugee, but I am living with two of them, well, maybe four. My daughter and son-in-law fled the flood, along with their two cats, two vehicles, and a canoe, which is now residing in my back yard. It is not hard to feel the pain this flood has caused when it is so near.

Since my brain is so jumbled, today's column is also jumbled. Is that the way you are feeling too?

We are in the midwest, aren't we? I have forgotten sometimes over the past few flood days. Water, water everywhere. The Coast Guard is patrolling the waterways of Grand Forks. Can it be? The question is, if it looks like an ocean and acts like an ocean, is it an ocean?

The best cartoon I have seen in the past few flood days is the one that ran in last week's Times - the sign that read, "Land of 10,000 Lakes," with the 10,000 crossed out and written over to read, "Land of 1 Lake."

A fire burning out of control in the middle of a flood! Firemen getting hypothermia from icy water while fighting the fire! And the final insult, the fire truck running out of gas while trying to fight the fire - while sitting in flood water.

After the fire, buildings that look like the remains of World War II, but sitting in the canals of Venice, empty windows looking like dead, staring eyes.

Soldiers in hum-vees, patrolling the flooded streets, soldiers in boats, soldiers in helicopters flying over the flood waters, soldiers rescuing people from the flood waters, soldiers throwing sand bags, building dikes, soldiers, soldiers everywhere. It is a war, but the enemy is water.

Moving pictures - pictures of young mothers and fathers trying to pack up their lives to flee the flood in minutes, pictures of blocks and blocks of houses buried in brown water, pictures of animals left behind, pictures of flooded streets, the bare tops of trees, roads that lead to nowhere, bridges that are part of what they had once bridged, abandoned toys floating, deserted cars, pictures of extraordinary rescues, pictures of a fire burning out of control.

The faces - faces of solid, tough farmers crying tears of despair, the lovely faces of little old ladies who don't know what to do next, the fearful faces of little children, the tired faces of people who have fought the good fight but had to give it up.

Sounds - the sounds of water rushing over a dike, the crackling sound of fire, sounds of comfort, sounds of pain, sounds of sadness.

People helping people - again People giving of themselves, offering their homes and lives to those they don't even know, people giving of what they have to feed and clothe others, people filling sandbags for others, people building dikes as they watch their own homes disappear in the flood waters, the elderly lady who made two large casseroles for the flood fighters, the children who gave sandwiches and drinks to truck drivers.

And, more heartache, although the crest is near in Grand Forks and East Grand Forks, the imminent danger to other communities and farms as the Raging Red makes its way north.

The Story of a Fire Engine, part 2

No one is sure when or how, but the owner of the Waterous Engine Company heard that Ogalalah No. 1 was in the scrapyard. Only about 17 steam fire engines remained in existence. In 1953 the Waterous Company came and salvaged the engine, still in good shape, and took it from Thief River Falls to St. Paul. Restoration work included four new wheels, a paint job, a new hose, plus brass lamps and other brass accessories.

The Waterous Company used the engine for parades and display until 1960 when they donated it to the Minnesota Historical Society to be put on display.

Having no suitable display space, the Society loaned the engine to Lumbertown USA, a restored 1870s logging village near Brainerd, where it was shown to visitors until the mid 1980s. Next the St. Paul Fire Museum displayed the Thief River Falls engine.

In 1992 the Minnesota Historical Society completed their new History Center in St. Paul. The same year the Thief River Falls engine went into the first display there, a centerpiece for the popular "Minnesota A to Z" exhibit. Ogalalah No. 1 illustrates "F is for Fire Engine." It is shown in front of a huge photo of a burning building. A dalmatian stands beside it. This breed of dog was part of any fire fighting team because the dog helped make way for the galloping horses. Dalmatians also were counted on to help calm excited horses.

Why all the interest in an old fire engine? First of all, it tells the story of fire-fighting in a labor-intensive era. Freeman Lanska, who was a volunteer fireman for 30 years, told how the fire department had to keep a fire going at all times at the station so that hot coals would be available at any time. When the fire bell rang, the hot coals were loaded into the truck to get the fire under the boiler going. The steam generated would provide pressure to pump water from the back of the truck. At the fire, the intake hose on the front of the truck was parked over a cistern, well, or close to the river. The water pump in the truck could pump out either side. A fireman had to watch the water pressure gauge up front so they knew what was happening.

Only enough coal to last 5 to 10 minutes could be carried on the truck, so a coal truck always started for the fire whenever the bell in old Central School clanged three times, paused, and then again clanged three times.

The horses that had drawn the engine to the fire would be nervous and straining at their harnesses so the teamster would take them away from the site of the fire. Without the horses, the pumper could be pulled short distances by men.

The engine is attractive. Waterous early advertising extolled the fine points of their product: "In the finish of the No. 2 engine all working parts are polished steel and brass, with polished air chamber. The boiler is lagged with asbestos, covered with Russian iron jacket held in place by burnished brass bands. The engine is otherwise neatly painted in gold striping and ornamental work making a very pleasing and attractive finish." On the front of the engine was a large silver ball. This was an "air dome" that helped steam come out smoothly, sort of a hydraulic shock-absorber.

Thief River Falls Fire Department history tells of the early days of the city with its dirt streets, wooden sidewalks, and horse and buggy traffic. The town bustled with activity with plenty of people hustling about, lads in knickers and girls in pinafores underfoot, and animals not an unusual sight in midtown. Should the fire bell clang, what a hullabaloo of activity! Snorting horses careening wildly down the street, yelling teamsters, volunteer fire fighters running or riding horses rushing to be the first at the scene of the fire. Dust followed as onlookers appeared, seeming to flow out of the weed patches between the houses.

This is the world that the old fire engine evokes. Sounds and sights of fire fighting were much different from today. Flashing red lights and fire whistles were not used until the 1930s, about the same time that fire trucks replaced the horse drawn engine in Thief River Falls.

Steam fire engines were used only a few years. Before steam engines, water was pumped on fires by hand. The Waterous Company began to make gas engines to pump water in 1898. They worked much better in cold weather and were ready to be used at a moment's notice.

Since 1992, a million people have seen Ogalalah No. 1 at the Minnesota History Center. In 1996 alone there were 260,000 visitors to the exhibit, 76,000 of them school children. The fire engine is on display now and you can see it at the Minnesota History Center on West Kellogg Boulevard in St. Paul any day of the week.

MDA warns against burning containers that held pesticides

Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) warns pesticide users that the burning of pesticide containers in an open fire is no longer permitted in Minnesota. The burning ban extends to all types of pesticide containers including plastic and paper bags, rigid plastics, metals and aerosols.

Steve Poncin, MDA pesticide regulatory advisor, said "burning pesticide containers produces airborne pollutants that can be harmful to human and animal health, as well as cause environmental damage. The problem is compounded when pesticide containers are not rinsed or are inadequately rinsed."

In addition to air pollution, the residue from an open fire can be hazardous. Combustion in open fires seldom consumes all materials. The result is a concentration of residue in a localized area of soil. High levels of heavy metals and/or pesticides can be found in a site used continually for burning.

In 1991 the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency established rules banning the practice of burning pesticide containers in open fires. Since that time many counties have enacted regulations that also limit and restrict open burning.

Current methods of proper pesticide container disposal include recycling plastic containers through the empty pesticide container collection and recycling program and taking other types of containers to a sanitary landfill. Regardless of the disposal method, pesticide containers must be properly prepared for disposal in accordance with the particular pesticide label directions.

For more information about the empty pesticide container collection and recycling program, contact the Minnesota Department of Agriculture at 612-296-5136. For information about open burning regulations and permits, contact the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources at 612-297-4467.

ACTIVITIES

Shaving Cream Fingerpainting

Shaving cream is a wonderful sensory material. Be sure to use unscented shaving cream because the perfume in the scented cream may irritate children's skin. Baking sheets provide children with a contained surface on which to work, reducing mess. Another option is to let children fingerpaint directly in the sink. The soapy residue leaves the sink sparkling clean. Hint: Warm shaving cream feels especially good. To heat shaving cream, simply set the can in hot water for a few minutes.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

The Thief River Falls public library invites you to browse through its new selection of children's books including the following:

Lindbergh, Reeve. Nobody Owned the Sky. Born a century ago, Bessie Coleman worked in the cotton fields and dreamed of flying. Although her chances of learning to fly were slim, she never let her dream die and instead became the first licensed African-American aviator in the world.

Johnston, Tony. The Wagon. One Carolina morning a child is born into slavery. To help pass the time, he dreams that the wagon he's helped build for Master is a glorious chariot of freedom.

VIDEO VARIETY

Barney in Concert. Barney and the Backyard Gang hold a live musical extravaganza at the Majestic Theater in Dallas, TX featuring traditional songs and fun new musical arrangements.

MAGAZINE MENTION

Children can chum up curiosities from the deep when making sand prints, shell angels, and other beachcombing projects. In the May issue of Family Fun you'll discover how all of these good vacation mementos can be created right at the beach, using just a few inexpensive materials.

Remember that the Thief River Falls public library has preschool storytimes every Wednesday from 11:15 to 11:45 a.m. These are cosponsored by the Thief River Falls ECFE and Learning Readiness. Also remember to check out the parenting corner by the children's room for new information and helpful hints for busy parents on books, reading and much more.

PARENTING TIPS

Talking About Negative Feelings

You can help your child learn to put negative feelings into words. Often, when parents discourage their children's negative feelings, they mean to discourage their behavioral expression rather than the feelings themselves.

At about five years old, children have good enough control of their actions and good enough language to learn to substitute words for actions when they feel angry, frustrated and otherwise upset. For example, suppose your child's little brother scribbles in the pages of her favorite book. She has a right to be angry, but she doesn't have the right to hit or yell at him.

You can help her learn to express such feelings in an acceptable way by:

- the way you respond to her when she does something similar, and
- your putting into words for her how you think she probably feels: "You're mad because Joey scribbled in your book. Feel like talking about it?"

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Set a good example for your child by stating your feelings with words.

Gajen Ramanathan received a close cut recently after losing a bet that 50 percent of his accounting students at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls couldn't receive an "A". Ramanathan has made an offer to shave his head since he began teaching at Northland in 1993.

NCTC professor loses his hair over a bet with students

There are times when a second thought might be given to promises made to college students. That's perhaps the way Northland Business Instructor, Gajen Ramanathan might be thinking following winter quarter at the college.

At the beginning of winter quarter, Ramanathan told his accounting students that if more than 50 percent of them earned an "A" during the quarter, he would shave his head. The winter quarter results were exceptional with 15 of 25 students meeting the goal.

According to Ramanathan, "The students were amazing! They took the challenge and met it!" He added, "after the grades were released and they met the goal, they told me I didn't have to shave my head, however, I made a promise and I wasn't going to back down."

Gajen is seen on campus wearing several styles of headgear and, occasionally, exposing his shaved head to students, faculty and staff. When asked if the challenge is open during spring quarter, Ramanathan said, "I have made this offer since I began teaching at Northland in 1993 and I will continue to make this offer. . . but. . . now 60 percent or more must score an "A". I don't want to be bald all the time!"

Telephone books distributed by U.S. West

The new US West Direct Minnesota Northwest white and Yellow Pages is scheduled to begin delivery April 24. More than 34,000 directories will be distributed to homes and businesses throughout the Minnesota Northwest area.

"The communities this directory serves are very important to US West Direct, and we are committed to making this year's phone directories handy, useful and the best available resource kit for shoppers," says Jerry Ebers, sales director.

New in this year's director, listings for the communities of Donaldson, Lake Bronson and Lancaster have been added to the White Pages.

A noticeable difference in this year's book is the URL for the US West Yellow Pages on the Internet, located on the cover of the Yellow Pages paper directory (http://yp.uswest.com).

For the first time, advertisers wanting to list their email and/or Internet URL address now have the option of including this information with their phone number and street address.

Northwest Minnesota area businesses and residents are being asked to recycle their outdated US West Direct White and Yellow Pages between April 24 and May 12. Recycling containers are located at Hugo's in Crookston and Thief River Falls, and Wally's Supermarket in Roseau.

Flood victim benefit April 27 in Grygla

A community benefit to aid flood victims will be held from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday, April 27, at the Community Center in Grygla. All proceeds of the dinner will go to area flood victims.

Chili, sandwiches and all the trimmings will be served. The event is sponsored by local churches and organizations. A free-will offering will be accepted. Donations can be sent to Lynatte Jelle, Box 49, Grygla, 56727; or Mildred Klamar, Route 2, Box 75, Gatzke, MN 56724.

More counties added to the disaster declaration

Twenty-five counties have been added to the disaster declaration issued by President Clinton on April 8. The addition, sought by Governor Arne Carlson, makes a total of 46 counties eligible for state and federal programs available to individuals, businesses and communities who suffered damage or loss from flooding, severe winter storms, snow melt, high winds, rain and ice.

The 25 counties were added after the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) reviewed damage assessment information submitted by the Minnesota Division of Emergency Management (DEM). "If damage assessment figures come in from other counties and the state, FEMA will review adding more counties and additional federal program to the declaration," John McKay, federal coordinating officer said in making the announcement.

People who suffered damage in the following counties are encouraged to apply for assistance: Aitkin, Anoka, Becker, Blue Earth, Carver, Dakota, Goodhue, Grant, Hennepin, Houston, Kandiyohi, Lake of the Woods, Le Sueur, Lincoln, Mahnomen, Morrison, Nicollet, Ramsey, Redwood, Renville, Scott, Sibley, Stevens, Wabasha, and Winona.

A toll-free application telephone number is now operational for those in the 25 additionally declared counties affected by the disaster who suffered property damage or loss. This number can be used to apply for a wide range of state and federal disaster assistance programs such as funding for disaster housing assistance, U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) low-interest loans for individuals and businesses to repair or replace damaged property, disaster unemployment assistance, and grants for serious needs and necessary expenses not met by other programs.

McKay said those impacted may apply for assistance immediately by calling the toll-free registration number, 1-800-462-9029 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. (CT) seven days a week, until further notice. Those with a speech or hearing impairment may call a special TTY number at 1-800-462-7585.

Anyone would think I was a flood refugee!

I may not be a refugee, but I am living with two of them, well, maybe four. My daughter and son-in-law fled the flood, along with their two cats, two vehicles, and a canoe, which is now residing in my back yard. It is not hard to feel the pain this flood has caused when it is so near.

Since my brain is so jumbled, today's column is also jumbled. Is that the way you are feeling too?

We are in the midwest, aren't we? I have forgotten sometimes over the past few flood days. Water, water everywhere. The Coast Guard is patrolling the waterways of Grand Forks. Can it be? The question is, if it looks like an ocean and acts like an ocean, is it an ocean?

The best cartoon I have seen in the past few flood days is the one that ran in last week's Times - the sign that read, "Land of 10,000 Lakes," with the 10,000 crossed out and written over to read, "Land of 1 Lake."

A fire burning out of control in the middle of a flood? Firemen getting hypothermia from icy water while fighting the fire? And the final insult, the fire truck running out of gas while trying to fight the fire - while sitting in flood water.

After the fire, buildings that look like the remains of World War II, but sitting in the canals of Venice, empty windows looking like dead, staring eyes.

Soldiers in hum-vees, patrolling the flooded streets, soldiers in boats, soldiers in helicopters flying over the flood waters, soldiers rescuing people from the flood waters, soldiers throwing sand bags, building dikes, soldiers, soldiers everywhere. It is a war, but the enemy is water.

Moving pictures - pictures of young mothers and fathers trying to pack up their lives to flee the flood in minutes, pictures of blocks and blocks of houses buried in brown water, pictures of animals left behind, pictures of flooded streets, the bare tops of trees, roads that lead to nowhere, bridges that are part of what they had once bridged, abandoned toys floating, deserted cars, pictures of extraordinary rescues, pictures of a fire burning out of control.

The faces - faces of solid, tough farmers crying tears of despair, the lovely faces of little old ladies who don't know what to do next, the fearful faces of little children, the tired faces of people who have fought the good fight but had to give it up.

Sounds - the sounds of water rushing over a dike, the crackling sound of fire, sounds of comfort, sounds of pain, sounds of sadness.

People helping people - again. People giving of themselves, offering their homes and lives to those they don't even know, people giving of what they have to feed and clothe others, people filling sandbags for others, people building dikes as they watch their own homes disappear in the flood waters, the elderly lady who made two large casseroles for the flood fighters, the children who gave sandwiches and drinks to truck drivers.

And, more heartache, although the crest is near in Grand Forks and East Grand Forks, the imminent danger to other communities and farms as the Raging Red makes its way north.

The Story of a Fire Engine, part 2

No one is sure when or how, but the owner of the Waterous Engine Company heard that Ogahmah No. 1 was in the scrap yard. Only about 17 steam fire engines remained in existence. In 1953 the Waterous Company came and salvaged the engine, still in good shape, and took it from Thief River Falls to St Paul. Restoration work included four new wheels, a paint job, a new hose, plus brass lamps and other brass accessories.

The Waterous Company used the engine for parades and display until 1966 when they donated it to the Minnesota Historical Society to be put on display.

Having no suitable display space, the Society loaned the engine to Lumbertown USA, a restored 1870s logging village near Brainerd, where it was shown to visitors until the mid 1980's. Next the St Paul Fire Museum displayed the Thief River Falls engine.

In 1992 the Minnesota Historical Society completed their new History Center in St Paul. The same year the Thief River Falls engine went into the first display there, a centerpiece for the popular "Minnesota A to Z" exhibit. Ogahmah No. 1 illustrates "F is for Fire Engine." It is shown in front of a huge photo of a burning building. A dalmation stands beside it. This breed of dog was part of any fire-fighting team because the dog helped make way for the galloping horses. Dalmatians also were counted on to help calm excited horses.

Why all the interest in an old fire engine? First of all, it tells the story of a fire-fighting in a labor-intensive era. Freeman Lanska, who was a volunteer fireman for 30 years, told how the fire department had to keep a fire going at all times at the station so that hot coals would be available at any time. When the fire bell rang, the hot coals were loaded into the truck to get the fire under the boiler going. The steam generated would provide pressure to pump water from the back of the truck. At the fire, the intake hose on the front of the truck was parked over a cistern, well, or close to the river. The water pump in the truck could pump out either side. A fireman had to watch the water pressure gauge up front so they knew what was happening.

Only enough coal to last 5 to 10 minutes could be carried on the truck, so a coal truck always started for the fire whenever the bell in old Central School clanged three times, paused, and then again clanged three times.

The horses that had drawn the engine to the fire would be nervous and straining at their harnesses so the teamster would be take them away from the site of the fire. Without the horses, the pumper could be pulled short distances by men.

The engine is attractive. Waterous' early advertising extolled the fine points of their product. "In the finish of the No. 2 engine all working parts are polished steel and brass, with polished air chamber. The boiler is lagged with asbestos, covered with Russia iron jacket held in place by burnished brass bands. The engine is otherwise neatly painted in gold striping and ornamental work making a very pleasing and attractive finish." On the front of the engine was a large silver ball. This was an "air dome" that helped steam come out smoothly, sort of a hydraulic shock absorber.

Thief River Falls Fire Department history tells of the early days of the city with its dirt streets, wooden sidewalks, and horse and buggy traffic. The town bustled with activity with plenty of people hustling about, lads in knickers and girls in pinafores underfoot, and animals not an unusual sight in midtown. "Should the fire bell clang, what a hullaballoo of activity! Snorting horses, careening wild-eyed down the street, yelling teamster, volunteer fire fighters running or riding horses rushing to be the first at the scene of the fire. Dust billowed as onlookers appeared, seeming to flow out of the weed patches between the houses."

This is the world that the old fire engine evokes. Sounds and sights of fire-fighting were much different from today. Flashing red lights and fire whistles were not used until the 1930's, about the same time that fire trucks replaced the horse-drawn engine in Thief River Falls.

Steam fire engines were used only a few years. Before steam engines, water was pumped on fires by hand. The Waterous Company began to make gas engines to pump water in 1898. They worked much better in cold weather and were ready to be used at a moment's notice.

Since 1992, a million people have seen Ogahmah No. 1 at the Minnesota History Center. In 1996 alone there were 260,000 visitors to the exhibit, 76,000 of them school children. The fire engine is on display now, and you can see it at the Minnesota History Center on West Kellogg Boulevard in St Paul any day of the week.

MDA warns against burning containers that held pesticides

Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) warns pesticide users that the burning of pesticide containers in an open fire is no longer permitted in Minnesota. The burning ban extends to all types of pesticide containers including plastic and paper bags, rigid plastics, metals and aerosols.

Steve Poncin, MDA pesticide regulatory advisor, said "burning pesticide containers produces airborne pollutants that can be harmful to human and animal health, as well as cause environmental damage. The problem is compounded when pesticide containers are not rinsed or are inadequately rinsed."

In addition to air pollution, the residue from an open fire can be hazardous. Combustion in open fires seldom consumes all materials. The result is a concentration of residue in a localized area of soil. High levels of heavy metals and/or pesticides can be found in a site used continually for burning.

In 1991 the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency established rules banning the practice of burning pesticide containers in open fires. Since that time many counties have enacted regulations that also limit and restrict open burning.

Current methods of proper pesticide container disposal include recycling plastic containers through the empty pesticide container collection and recycling program and taking other types of containers to a sanitary landfill. Regardless of the disposal method, pesticide containers must be properly prepared for disposal in accordance with the particular pesticide label directions.

For more information about the empty pesticide container collection and recycling program, contact the Minnesota Department of Agriculture at 612-296-5136. For information about open burning regulations and permits, contact the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources at 612-297-4467.

SBA Disaster loans available for flood victims

Homeowners, renters, and businesses with property damaged by the ongoing severe winter storms and flooding are now eligible to apply for low-interest disaster loans from the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA).

"Don't be misled by our name," said Michael C. Allen, director of the SBA's Disaster Assistance office. "In times of disaster, SBA acts as the Federal government's 'disaster bank,' and provides long term, low-interest disaster loans to homeowners and renters, non-farm businesses of all sizes, as well as private non-profit organizations." These loans are the primary source of Federal funds for long term recovery and rebuilding efforts.

Disaster victims are eligible to apply for SBA disaster loans if their homes or businesses were damaged by the severe winter storms and floods. Disaster loans of up to $200,000 are available to homeowners to repair or replace damaged or destroyed real estate. Homeowners and renters are eligible for up to $40,000 to repair or replace damaged or destroyed personal property.

Business owners may qualify for up to $1.5 million to repair or replace damaged or destroyed real estate, machinery and equipment, inventory, and other business assets. In addition, small business owners may qualify for economic injury disaster loans (EIDLs) if they have been financially impacted by the disaster. Even if these small businesses have not suffered any property damage, they may qualify for these working capital loans to help pay obligations until normal operations resume.

Those who need assistance should first register with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) by calling 1-800-462-9029. Disaster victims may also obtain personalized assistance by calling SBA toll free at 1-800-359-2227, during normal business hours. Speech and hearing-impaired individuals may call 404-347-3751.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURIT

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. I just started getting Social Security and understand that my minor children will also get benefits. Due to divorce and remarriage, I have children in two states. Will all of them get benefits?

A. Assuming all requirements are met, the children could get benefits. What matters is their relationship to you, not physical location or custody. Benefit checks would usually go to where the children are. Requirements vary but eligible children can include biological children, both in and out of marriage, step children, and adopted children. Benefits are potentially payable to children under age 18, children age 18-19 and full-time high school students, and disabled adult children whose disability began before age 22. For more information see the Social Security Fact Sheet "Social Security Benefits for Children" (SSA Publication 05-10085) available from any Social Security office or the national Social Security toll-free phone 1-800-772-1213.

The receipt of benefits by children, or anyone else, on your record does not change the amount which you receive. Benefits received by other people on the record are subject to a family maximum amount. Again, benefits to you on your record are the same whether others receive on the record or not.

Q. I just discovered old family records showing that my date of birth is December 18 and not December 10, which I've always used. I get Social Security retirement now. Do I need to correct any records at this stage of the game?

A. No. A mid-month change of date would not accomplish anything.

Q. My employer has me in the company health insurance plan. When I reach age 65 later this year would I still sign up for Medicare? I'm not retiring.

A. The two parts of Medicare, Hospital Part A and Medical Part B, work differently. You should file an application for the hospital portion of Medicare for which there is no monthly premium. Since you are covered by your employer's group health plan you may delay enrolling in Medicare medical insurance (Part B) and enroll during a special enrollment period. The rules allow you to enroll any time while you are covered under the group health plan or during a special eight-month period that begins with the month your group health coverage ends or the month employment ends — whichever is first.

If you do not take Part B now, the usual sign up point is when your existing group coverage ends. This is a special enrollment and would not be subject to Part B premium increase for late filing.

Since you will attain age 65 in 1997 it is possible that you could continue working and still receive some Social Security cash benefits for the year. For someone age 65-69, gross wages of up to $13,500 during 1997 would not effect Social Security benefits payable at all. Earnings over that amount would effect monthly Social Security retirement payable. You should discuss this with a Social Security representative soon.

To make an appointment call the National Social Security toll free number 1-800-772-1213. Evidence needed would include a certified copy of your birth certificate and an estimate of your expected gross wages or net self-employment for the year. If not born in the United States, then proof of citizenship or legal residence would also be required.

SBA Disaster loans available for flood victims

Homeowners, renters, and businesses with property damaged by the ongoing severe winter storms and flooding are now eligible to apply for low-interest disaster loans from the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA).

"Don't be misled by our name," said Michael C. Allen, director of the SBA's Disaster Assistance office. "In times of disaster, SBA acts as the Federal government's 'disaster bank,' and provides long term, low-interest disaster loans to homeowners and renters, non-farm businesses of all sizes, as well as private non-profit organizations." These loans are the primary source of Federal funds for long term recovery and rebuilding efforts.

Disaster victims are eligible to apply for SBA disaster loans if their homes or businesses were damaged by the severe winter storms and floods. Disaster loans of up to $200,000 are available to homeowners to repair or replace damaged or destroyed real estate. Homeowners and renters are eligible for up to $40,000 to repair or replace damaged or destroyed personal property.

Business owners may qualify for up to $1.5 million to repair or replace damaged or destroyed real estate, machinery and equipment, inventory, and other business assets. In addition, small business owners may qualify for economic injury disaster loans (EIDLs) if they have been financially impacted by the disaster. Even if these small businesses have not suffered any property damage, they may qualify for these working capital loans to help pay obligations until normal operations resume.

Those who need assistance should first register with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) by calling 1-800-462-9029. Disaster victims may also obtain personalized assistance by calling SBA toll free at 1-800-359-2227, during normal business hours. Speech and hearing-impaired individuals may call 404-347-3751.

Q&A Soci Secu

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. I just started getting Social Security and understand that my minor children will also get benefits. Due to divorce and remarriage, I have children in two states. Will all of them get benefits?

A. Assuming all requirements are met, the children could get benefits. What matters is their relationship to you, not physical location or custody. Benefit checks would usually go to where the children are. Requirements vary but eligible children can include biological children, both in and out of marriage, step children, and adopted children. Benefits are potentially payable to children under age 18, children age 18-19 and full-time high school students, and disabled adult children whose disability began before age 22. For more information see the Social Security Fact Sheet "Social Security Benefits for Children" (SSA Publication 05-10085) available from any Social Security office or the national Social Security toll-free phone 1-800-772-1213.

The receipt of benefits by children, or anyone else, on your record does not change the amount which you receive. Benefits received by other people on the record are subject to a family maximum amount. Again, benefits to you on your record are the same whether others receive on the record or not.

Q. I just discovered old family records showing that my date of birth is December 18 and not December 10, which I've always used. I get Social Security retirement now. Do I need to correct any records at this stage of the game?

A. No. A mid-month change of date would not accomplish anything.

Q. My employer has me in the company health insurance plan. When I reach age 65 later this year would I still sign up for Medicare? I'm not retiring.

A. The two parts of Medicare, Hospital Part A, and Medical Part B, work differently. You should file an application for the hospital portion of Medicare for which there is no monthly premium. Since you are covered by your employer's group health plan you may delay enrolling in Medicare medical insurance (Part B) and enroll during a special enrollment period. The rules allow you to enroll any time while you are covered under the group health plan or during a special eight-month period that begins with the month your group health coverage ends or the month employment ends — whichever is first.

If you do not take Part B now, the usual sign up point is when your existing group coverage ends. This is a special enrollment and would not be subject to Part B premium increase for late filing.

Since you will attain age 65 in 1997 it is possible that you could continue working and still receive some Social Security cash benefits for the year. For someone age 65-69, gross wages of up to $13,500 during 1997 would not effect Social Security benefits payable at all. Earnings over that amount would effect monthly Social Security retirement payable. You should discuss this with a Social Security representative soon.

To make an appointment call the National Social Security toll free number 1-800-772-1213. Evidence needed would include a certified copy of your birth certificate and an estimate of your expected gross wages or net self-employment for the year. If not born in the United States, then proof of citizenship or legal residence would also be required.

SBA Disaster loans available for flood victims

Homeowners, renters, and businesses with property damaged by the ongoing severe winter storms and flooding are now eligible to apply for low-interest disaster loans from the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA).

"Don't be misled by our name," said Michael C. Allen, director of the SBA's Disaster Assistance office. "In times of disaster, SBA acts as the federal government's 'disaster bank,' and provides long term, low-interest disaster loans to homeowners and renters, non-farm businesses of all sizes, as well as private non-profit organizations." These loans are the primary source of Federal funds for long term recovery and rebuilding efforts.

Disaster victims are eligible to apply for SBA disaster loans if their homes or businesses were damaged by the severe winter storms and floods. Disaster loans of up to $200,000 are available to homeowners to repair or replace damaged or destroyed real estate. Homeowners and renters are eligible for up to $40,000 to repair or replace damaged or destroyed personal property.

Business owners may qualify for up to $1.5 million to repair or replace damaged or destroyed real estate, machinery and equipment, inventory, and other business assets. In addition, small business owners may qualify for economic injury disaster loans (EIDLs) if they have been financially impacted by the disaster. Even if these small businesses have not suffered any property damage, they may qualify for these working capital loans to help pay obligations until normal operations resume.

Those who need assistance should first register with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) by calling 1-800-462-9029. Disaster victims may also obtain personalized assistance by calling SBA toll free at 1-800-359-2227, during normal business hours. Speech and hearing-impaired individuals may call 404-347-3751.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. I just started getting Social Security and understand that my minor children will also get benefits. Due to divorce and remarriage, I have children in two states. Will all of them get benefits?

A. Assuming all requirements are met, the children could get benefits. What matters is their relationship to you, not physical location or custody. Benefit checks would usually go to where the children are. Requirements vary but eligible children can include biological children, both in and out of marriage, step children, and adopted children. Benefits are potentially payable to children under age 18, children age 18-19 and full-time high school students, and disabled adult children whose disability began before age 22. For more information see the Social Security Fact Sheet "Social Security Benefits for Children" (SSA Publication 05-10085) available from any Social Security office or the national Social Security toll-free phone 1-800-772-1213.

The receipt of benefits by children, or anyone else, on your record does not change the amount which you receive. Benefits received by other people on the record are subject to a family maximum amount. Again, benefits to you on your record are the same whether others receive on the record or not.

Q. I just discovered old family records showing that my date of birth is December 18 and not December 10, which I've always used. I get Social Security retirement now. Do I need to correct any records at this stage of the game?

A. No. A mid-month change of date would not accomplish anything.

Q. My employer has me in the company health insurance plan. When I reach age 65 later this year would I still sign up for Medicare? I'm not retiring.

A. The two parts of Medicare, Hospital Part A, and Medical Part B, work differently. You should file an application for the hospital portion of Medicare for which there is no monthly premium. Since you are covered by your employer's group health plan you may delay enrolling in Medicare medical insurance (Part B) and enroll during a special enrollment period. The rules allow you to enroll any time while you are covered under the group health plan or during a special eight-month period that begins with the month your group health coverage ends or the month employment ends — whichever is first.

If you do not take Part B now, the usual sign up point is when your existing group coverage ends. This is a special enrollment and would not be subject to Part B premium increase for late filing.

Since you will attain age 65 in 1997 it is possible that you could continue working and still receive some Social Security cash benefits for the year. For someone age 65-69, gross wages of up to $13,500 during 1997 would not effect Social Security benefits payable at all. Earnings over that amount would effect monthly Social Security retirement payable. You should discuss this with a Social Security representative soon.

To make an appointment call the National Social Security toll free number 1-800-772-1213. Evidence needed would include a certified copy of your birth certificate and an estimate of your expected gross wages or net self-employment for the year. If not born in the United States, then proof of citizenship or legal residence would also be required.

Ojibwe artist to sell, display his paintings at NCTC celebration

Robert "Punk" Wakanabo, Ojibwe artist from Cass Lake, will be visiting Northland Community and Technical College as part of Native Images Celebration '97 Thursday and Friday, April 24 and 25.

Wakanabo will headline this year's celebration and display and sell his prints and original paintings in the NCTC gallery from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. each of the two days.

With no formal training in art, Wakanabo realized he had a hidden talent that he needed to explore and began to paint his first serious work of art. Before it was finished, his only daughter was killed by a school bus outside his home. Breanna Leigh never got to see her father's first serious painting. "Punk" went into a state of depression and anger and began to abuse alcohol.

One day he realized that drinking was not going to bring back his daughter and determined to use his energy in a more productive manner. It took about a year before his inner talent began to surface and he started painting again. He also became very active with the School Bus Safety Task Force of Minnesota, with which he has spent countless hours lobbying to get monitors on school buses. He was appointed by the Governor to be on the School Bus Safety Advisory Committee.

Four years ago Wakanabo decided to make his living from painting, not just as a hobby to fill his time. He has between 150 and 200 originals and 11 limited edition prints made in just the past four years. In 1993 he created his first serious painting entitled "Grand Entry."

His first print was showcased on the cover of Twin Light Trail magazine published in London, England. His seventh print, entitled "Dreams of the Summer Hunt," earned him the title of 1994 "Artist of the Year" for the Great Lakes Region Native American Fish and Wildlife Society.

Another of his paintings, "The Strength of Our People—The Women," won third place in the People's Choice category at the 1994 Pow Wow and art show in Milwaukee, WI.

All of Wakanabo's paintings have historical backgrounds and feature many hidden objects. Each painting comes with a story explaining his work of art, is culturally expressed and is one of a kind.

"Punk" signs all of his prints "Punk/BLD." In memory of his daughter, BLD stands for Breanna Leigh's Dad.

The public is encouraged to visit the gallery at NCTC during the Wakanabo showing April 24 and 25.

Federal government approves waiver to be in effect for voluntary basement flooding

Waiver issued by the Federal Emergency Management Agency for coverage of loss caused by an insured person who voluntarily fills his or her basement with water will remain in effect for the remainder of spring flooding.

The waiver of the Standard Insurance Flood Insurance Policy exempts the action of filling a basement or underground area with water if the insured meets both of the following conditions:

(1) Voluntary flooding is done on the advice of community officials and authorities where the property is located, and

(2) The building must be insured to at least 80 percent of its replacement cost in order to meet the requirement for sewer back-up coverage.

Effective date of the waiver coincides with the time that the threat of flooding in the Upper Midwest resulted in community officials giving this advice.

For more information on flood insurance, call your insurance agent, the National Flood Services Hotline at 1-800-637-3846, the NFIP Hotline at 1-800-611-6123 or the Department of Commerce Consumer Response Hotline at 296-2488 or 1-800-657-3602. Eriksson wins scholarship on science paper

Nicholas Eriksson, son of Mervin and Tolly Eriksson of Missoula, MT and grandson of Orlanda Eriksson of Thief River Falls and the late Algot Eriksson, has won a third place award and $20,000 scholarship in the prestigious 56th Westinghouse Science Talent Search in Washington, DC.

Nicholas' father is a 1971 Lincoln high school graduate and 1975 graduate of the University of North Dakota, and now employed as a civil engineer with the U. S. Forestry Department in Missoula.

A senior at Sentinel high school, Nicholas earned the prize with a paper he wrote about a partition function that counts the ways a whole number can be expressed as a sum. He used algebra and number theory to find where partition function takes an odd value and compiled a number of theorems about the function.

Eriksson also plays bassoon and saxophone in the Montana All State Band and Missoula Youth Symphony and was named outstanding soloist at the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival. He plans to study math at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Retired Educators join in celebrating community service

Local members of the Northland Retired Educators have been invited to participate in a national "Celebration of Community Service." This event is part of the observance of the 50th anniversary of the National Retired Teachers Association whose motto is Celebrate the Vision Launch the Future.

Since September of 1996, members have logged their number of volunteer hours in schools, churches, hospitals, libraries and a number of other locations. This activity will culminate in May when the total number of those volunteer hours is sent to the president of Retired Educators Association of Minnesota.

A grand celebration of the service to the community performed by retired educator association members for the 1996-97 program year will take place in October. At that time participants will be honored in a program that will include a presentation by Mayor Bob Reeve of Thief River Falls, according to Polly Reed and Jim Dalager, co-president of the Northland Retired Educators.

Lowell Lofrooth, Claudia Berggren and Kali, Bud and Marie Stollen, Ellen Stromberg, Frank Grochowski, Elmer Holmstrom, and Evelyn Albough visited Judy Kleinvachter this week.

Tip for this week - Do all you can to alleviate the pain and loss that the folks have suffered here in the Red River Valley. You will feel a lot better if you do!

The flood of 1997 tops any other news from northwest Minnesota for this week. The devastation is so extensive that only watching the TV is a chilling experience. Just to think of walking around in that cold water up to your armpits is enough to give you pneumonia. I recall trying to wade across a 12-foot wide creek in the late spring back in 1940, and it almost made my knees buckle under me. Of course, it came out on the north side from an old glacier, so no sun had a chance to warm it.

Everyone around for hundreds of miles have been doing all they could to help sandbag or anything else to try to stem the flood and most of us hurt to see the damages done to friends and neighbors. Now all we can do is to help shelter and feed those who have lost their homes. Those who were in the Grand Forks hospitals have been evacuated to Thief River Falls or hospitals near their homes. Roy's brother, Johnny, was helicoptered with others out of the flooded area and then taken by ambulance to Thief River Falls where he will remain for awhile. Roy brought him his vitamins that he had left in his apartment yesterday and with the fortification from them we expect he will soon be on his way home.

On Friday morning, Dean and JoAnne Holmstrom and Elsie Lofrooth drove to Farmington, where they were joined by Elaine Gravum of Thief River Falls to visit Douglas and Karleen Holmstrom. On Sunday after the christening of baby Parker Douglas Holmstrom, a reception was held at the Douglas Holmstrom residence which was attended by about 50 relatives.

Judy, Lois and Kris Kleinvachter, along with other relatives, enjoyed a "Fish Fry" at the Senior Center at Strandquist on Saturday evening sponsored by Vance and Kelly Lofrooth of Cedar.

Irene Nelson and Eunice Lofstrom motored to Thief River Falls on Saturday to visit with Louie Lofstrom in the hospital.

The funeral service for Anne Hanson was held in the Bethesda Lutheran church in Strandquist on Sunday evening. She had been living in Thief River Falls for several years. Her sister Ella Thun, age 101, is still living at Thief River Falls. Anne was 96.

Gordon Klegstad and Arlyne Cote visited with Irene Nelson this week.

Envirothon teams in area participate in regional competition

Five teams from Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls, four from Grygla, three from Badger, three from Goodridge and one each from Kittson Central, Marshall County Central and Roseau high schools will participate in a regional outdoor learning competition called the Envirothon on Thursday, April 24, at Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge east of Holt.

The event is sponsored by Soil and Water Conservation Districts (SWCD) and the Minnesota Board of Water and Soil Resources (BWSR).

The Envirothon consists of five learning stations covering soil, aquatics, wildlife, forestry and pesticides. Natural resource professionals at each station use the outdoors to test the students' resource knowledge. In addition, each five-member student team must give an oral presentation on the advantages and disadvantages of pesticide use.

"We think this is a wonderful educational opportunity for students," said Grant Satre, chair of the Marshall-Beltrami Soil and Water Conservation District at Grygla. "By investing in our youth, we help ensure a future in which we can all continue to enjoy our natural resources."

The Agassiz NWR Envirothon is one of nine regional events around the state. The top teams from each region will advance to the state Envirothon May 22 at Tamarac Wildlife Refuge near Detroit Lakes.

The state champion will attend the national Envirothon in Pennsylvania in early August. Winners of the national event will receive prizes and scholarship money.

Local funding for the Agassiz NWR Envirothon is provided by numerous local and area sponsors. Funding for the state Envirothon is provided by the auxiliary of the Minnesota Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts and the Minnesota Board of Water and Soil Resources.

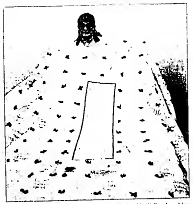
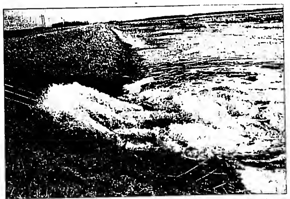
Price of gas at this service station in Warren didn't matter but there was plenty of water for a car wash when this picture was taken Friday by Times advertising representative Denise Layman. High clearance vehicles moving through the area created wave action.



Honoring victims of the Oklahoma City federal building bombing is this 112x112 quilt created by Terri Mayer of Thief River Falls and which was on display at the Thief River Falls Home, Sport and Family show. The quilt has 192 squares—one for the name of each of the 171 victims, 14 for the Garth Brooks song "The Change," two for the outline of the state of Oklahoma and state flag, and others for a rainbow, cross, dove and embroidered "Peace" and "God Bless the Children and Innocent." Second anniversary of the bombing was observed April 19. Terri said she had never made a quilt before and started on this one April 12, 1996. It was sewn entirely by hand and she said she averaged five to six hours per day in working on it.



Rushing through outlet structures in highway 219 north of Goodridge Saturday, April 19, water from flooded farm fields was making its way west to the Thief River.

NOTICE TO THIEF RIVER FALLS HOME RESIDENTS AND COMMERCIAL PROPERTY OWNERS

BASEMENT SUMP PUMP WATER HAS TO BE DISCHARGED INTO THE STORM SEWER SYSTEM.

Pumping from sump pumps into the sanitary sewers is causing heavy overload in the sanitary sewer system for the City. All sump pumps need to be plumbed to discharge into your yard or street so that the water flows into the storm water system. This overloading will cause an increase in sewer rates.

This change in plumbing needs to be completed immediately before any rain falls. Additional rain will cause backups in the sanitary sewer system.

If you have any questions call 681-4425 or 681-5816.

We're Your Friends and Neighbors

We came together as a community to help our friends and neighbors in NW Minnesota

Hundreds of local and area residents gathered at Centennial Park to fill sandbags

There were smiling faces everywhere.

Piles of pallets were stacked high with sandbags

For some residents it was a new experience.

Each volunteer took their job seriously.

Young and old alike helped fill sandbags.

Appeal to residents results in terrific response

Throughout the week students, STS crews, Minnesota Conservation Corps representatives had been busily filling sandbags. Friday it became apparent that a much greater need existed so the call went out — Volunteers report for sandbagging detail.

Officials were pleased with the response. It is, however, not unlike residents of Thief River Falls to respond in this manner.

Sunday, Pennington County Sheriff Gerald Moe estimated that over 500,000 sandbags had been filled over the weekend. At one point on Sunday, officials counted a total of 425 volunteers helping to fill sandbags.

Officials were not too surprised by the response. They were however, pleased with the attitude and the calm, business-like manner of those who volunteered.

When asked about their response, one individual said, "In Northern Minnesota we're all neighbors."

The response was not limited to volunteers. Several local businesses helped by keeping the volunteers fed. Pat Gaffaney, who had a barbecue going throughout the weekend, said that as long as there were volunteers at the site, they wouldn't go hungry.

The response was also not limited to filling sandbags. Volunteers lined up to help residents and staff of the Good Samaritan which on Friday were evacuated from East Grand Forks to Northland Community and Technical College.

Sandra Bentley, administrator of Good Samaritan Center, said she was awed by the response of the community. She said she felt as if she had moved into the home of a good friend.

The stress of the move was wearing off on Monday. Because of the hospitality and help, and the disaster, Bentley said an Esprit de Corp was developing among her staff. Some residents were also showing signs of vigor.

Individuals interested in volunteering can call 681-0840. Friends and relatives should call 681-0838.

Sunday evening, the call went out for assistance at the evacuation center. Donations of clothes, bedding, and toiletries were needed. Once again the community responded.

Representatives of Evangelical Free Church and the local ministerium agreed to operate the emergency evacuation center at the church (formerly Washington Elementary school). By Monday morning about 500 people had been registered in the community. Many, however, were just learning of meal services and supplies available to them at the evacuation center.

Flood waters in Grand Forks and East Grand Forks will slowly recede — so slowly that evacuees will remain in Thief River Falls for some time. Officials are asking for the community to continue their support.

Free well test kits are available in TRF, RLF

Free testing of private water wells is available for Minnesotans in the 21 counties designated on April 8 as a federal flood disaster area.

At the Inter-County Nursing Service offices in Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls, free well testing kits consisting of bottles for taking water samples and instructions for taking a sample an submitting it to the state Public Health Laboratory for testing are available.

Area residents whose wells may have been contaminated will need to have their wells tested for possible bacterial contamination. Until the wells are tested and found to be safe, owners of potentially contaminated wells should boil their water for at least five minutes before using it for drinking or cooking.

All wells located in or near flooded areas should be tested. If the wells were actually in contact with flood water, well owners will need to flush and disinfect their wells before having them tested. Detailed instructions for flushing and disinfecting wells are also available from the nursing service offices.

Some well owners may wish to consult a licensed well contractor for advice on dealing with a potentially contaminated well—or even have the contractor disinfect the well.

Once a well has been tested, and found to be free of contamination, the well owner will be notified by mail. A second sample bottle will be mailed to the well owner if any contamination is detected, and the well owner will be asked to repeat the disinfection process before submitting another sample. If any contamination is found in the second sample, further disinfection and testing will be necessary. The well owner must pay for any additional testing.

It will take approximately five working days to get well test results back from the state laboratory, according to officials at the Minnesota Department of Health. During that time, it will be necessary to continue to boil water before drinking it or using it to prepare food.

For that reason, some well owners may wish to have their wells tested by a private lab at their own expense in order to get the results back more quickly. State-certified testing labs can usually be found in the yellow pages under "laboratories—testing." The test typically costs $10 to $20.

Senator Stumpf receives Freedom of information award for sponsorship

State senators Steve Kelley (DFL-Hopkins) and LeRoy Stumpf (DFL-Thief River Falls) were recently named co-recipients of the 1997 John R Finnegan Freedom of Information Award for their efforts in sponsoring Technology Access Grants (TAG) legislation over the past two years.

Both Stumpf and Kelley, who was a House member at the time, have taken leadership roles in assuring enhanced opportunities for public Internet access in schools and regional public libraries. The grant funds are adding public connections to the internet, and provide for distance learning through interactive television.

"We are reaching the goal of much greater Internet access in rural Minnesota where local telephone services are encouraged to set up low-cost Internet connections in schools and libraries,"Stumpf said. "These grants are making a difference in our rural communities. This recognition is gratifying."

"I feel extremely honored to receive the John R. Finnegan Freedom of Information Award because it represents dedication to fair and open access to government information," Kelley said. "Every day, more essential information goes online. Consequently, it is more important than ever to provide broad public access to on-line computer services so individuals and entire communities aren't left behind."

The Freedom of Information Award is named for retired St. Paul Pioneer Press Senior Vice President John R. Finnegan, who is well-known in the journalism profession for his longtime dedication to openness in government and work on behalf of the people's right to know. The annual award, sponsored by the Minnesota Coalition on Government Information, has been given out since 1989.

The other recipient of the Freedom of Information Award this year is Access Minnesota, a statewide federally funded computer technology access effort implemented by the Minnesota Extension Service.

Minnesota Extension web site offers IRS disaster relief link

If you are affected by spring flooding this year and need quick information on how to get tax relief, you can call up the Minnesota Extension Service's "Minnesota Meltdown" web page to link directly to the IRS.

This quick link could be especially useful if you have damaged or lost property in a location declared by the President as a major disaster area. If you do, you may be able to get some money back from the IRS right now. To find out what's available, go to the Minnesota Extension Service homepage and click the "Minnesota Meltdown" icon near the top. This will bring you to a number of categories related to this year's severe weather-related conditions. Find the IRS link under the "Financial & Business" category and click.

From here you can access a variety of information on tax relief from damage you may have incurred. For example, click "Disaster Area Losses (including flood losses)" to get information on how to figure your casualty losses. This section tells you that if you have a deductible loss from an area designated as eligible for Federal Disaster Assistance, you can treat the loss as having occurred either in the current or previous tax year - whichever provides the best results for you.

The IRS page also has a direct contact link in case you have had an emergency and need more time to pay your taxes (click "contact us"). Other links include helpful "forms and publications", as well as links to other sites on the IRS homepage for general information on individual and business taxes.

McKnight pledges $20 million for welfare reform

McKnight Foundation has committed up to $20 million over two years to assist in moving families in Minnesota from welfare to work.

The Foundation will encourage partnerships of businesses, nonprofits, civic and religious organizations, and governments to develop local support networks to help families get and keep jobs. McKnight's support is limited to two years and will supplement but not replace state and local resources.

"We share the desire of many others in the state to see as many people as possible participate in the economic mainstream," said Michael O'Keefe, McKnight's executive vice president. "If that is to happen, we believe that communities must provide a coordinated system of employment, education and training, childcare, transportation, social services, and informal supports, among other things, to help people make the desired transition from welfare to work."

To begin the process, the Foundation will sponsor a series of meetings around the state in the next several weeks including one in Thief River Falls. Local groups at the county or multi-county level may apply for planning grants this spring and grants to implement plans later this year. In addition, the Foundation will support a few modest statewide initiatives as well as ongoing evaluation and learning so those engaged in welfare reform can learn about what works from others in Minnesota and elsewhere. The Foundation will not make grants to individuals.

"By stimulating creative solutions on the part of local communities, The McKnight Foundation is encouraging Minnesotans to take a leadership role in the transition to a new welfare system," said Governor Arne Carlson. "Cooperation among government, businesses, social service providers, and others is essential if lasting reform is to be achieved."

WIC schedule listed for May in T.R. Falls

Women, Infants and Children's (WIC) supplemental nutrition education program clinics have been scheduled at Redeemer Lutheran Church in Thief River Falls on Mondays, May 5 and 12, Thursday, May 15 and Friday, May 16.

Infants and children up to age five and women who are pregnant or breastfeeding may be eligible for the program. Quin County WIC is very interested in enrolling pregnant women in the program, feeling that prenatal nutrition is a vital part of producing a healthy baby.

"It is important to apply for WIC early in your pregnancy," a WIC spokesperson said. "We need no proof of pregnancy." All potential clients must write or call the WIC program and complete an application.

Immunizations are given by county nurses. Contact Inter-County Nursing Service in Thief River Falls at 681-5950 for appointment times.

Lincoln high school student senate has again been named one of the top three high school student councils in the state of Minnesota, based on points awarded for activities, projects and program. Other schools honored were Columbia Heights and Mounds View.

Recognition is given by the Minnesota Association of Student Councils. According to Mrs. Elaine Grovum, advisor, the Lincoln student senate received 390 points out of a possible 465 points on the nomination form.

Lincoln also won top state placing in the 1989-90 and 1994-95 school years. Points were based on activities during the year inclusive from February 21, 1996 through February 21, 1997.

The Lincoln student senate received the maximum number of points in each of the categories for which it qualified.

Among activities and projects for which the council received points were the following:

- Educational Projects—Lincoln student senate awards five $200 scholarships each year with funds raised through various projects;
- Leadership—Student senate members Jami Philipp and Kelly Almquist serve on the School District 564 Planning, Evaluation and Review (PER) committee;
- Revenue-Producing Projects—Major fund-raising is accomplished through the sale of buttons promoting homecoming and Sno-fest and operation of soft drink machines in the school;
- Public Relations—A council project is the collection of pop tabs in support of the Ronald McDonald House;
- Community Service—In early February this year the student senate conducted a food drive which collected 588 pounds of food for the Thief River Falls area food shelf.

Lincoln student senate members have taken an active role in student council activities outside their own school district. Lincoln hosted the division convention in 1996 and Laura Williams and Anne Padilla served as division officers.

Alicia Bakken, Josh Clark, Jami Philipp, Kelly Almquist and Tina Halsa attended the state convention for 1995-96.

In addition, Kelly Almquist, Tina Halsa and Alicia Bakken attended the national convention in Orlando, FL, last summer and presented a workshop program on ways to improve school spirit.

In a letter of recommendation accompanying the nomination form, Lincoln principal Terry Soine wrote:

"It is a sincere pleasure to recognize Lincoln high school's student senate and to recommend them as a serious candidate group for outstanding status. The energy, organization and leadership of this group continues to be a genuine asset to the student body of Lincoln High School."

He noted the state and national participation listed above and cited the organization's work with raising funds for hospice and Little Brother /Little Sister programs as well as organizing Spirit Day, homecoming and Sno-fest.

"The Outstanding Student Council Award is a coveted recognition that this group and its advisor, Mrs. Grovum, in my opinion, qualifies as an excellent candidate for your consideration."

Members of the student senate for the 1996-97 school year include the following:

Grade 12—Josh Clark, Danielle Goulet, Heidi Johnson, Michelle Mathson and Kyla Skiple with Alicia Bakken and Kate Ihle as alternates;

Grade 11—Kelly Almquist, Dan Carpenter, Erica McGeary, Becky McKercher and Jami Philipp with Tina Halsa and Jessica Krankkala as alternates;

Grade 10—Darin Bjerknes, Allen Bolar, Wade Haviland, Taya Hunt and Bridgette Stock with Matt Dyer and Katie Harbott as alternates; and Grade 9—Casey Enge, Brea Hammer, Rachel Mathson, Andrea Olin and Zach Olson with Adam Haviland and Kelli Waterworth as alternates.

Danielle Goulet is president of the student senate with Heidi Johnson as vice president, Michelle Mathson as secretary and Kyla Skiple as treasurer. Michelle also serves as Northwest District secretary and Alicia Bakken is a Northwest District representative.

Customs offers workshops to help exporters in Minn.

From now through the end of May, the U.S. Customs Service and the Bureau of the Census are offering workshops around the country to help the exporting community comply with regulations on outbound vessel manifests. The enforced compliance phase has been postponed two months, and will now begin June 1.

Census and Customs discovered the need for this educational outreach when a vessel manifest compliance survey at five U.S. ports revealed a low level of compliance with regulations requiring that shippers export declarations (SEDs) be filed with the exporting carrier prior to exportation.

Together the agencies developed a three-phase outreach program called the Informed Compliance Program. It consists of Outbound Informed Compliance Workshops, an Informed Compliance Phase, and an Enforced Compliance Phase.

During the months of December and January, Customs and Census presented more than 100 workshops at 61 locations nationwide. In the second phase, from now through May 31, Customs and Census are working informally with carriers to assist exporters and their agents in complying with existing regulations.

The enforced compliance phase will begin June 1.

Responding to numerous requests from the exporting community for more workshops, Peter Baish, Outbound Process Owner for the U.S. Customs Service, has requested that each outbound Customs port present a minimum of one additional workshop during April and May.

The objective of the additional workshops is to reach as many exporters as possible. If you are interested in attending one of the outbound workshops, call the Outbound Process Owner, Mary Delaquis at U.S. Customs, Pembina, ND, 701-825-6201, extension 239.

Playing a vital role in many ways during the flood emergency in Red River Valley communities has been the National Guard. Guardsmen have built clay and sandbag dikes, filled sandbags, conducted search and rescue, directed traffic, patrolled neighborhoods and filled countless other needs with manpower, vehicles and equipment. On Friday evening, April 18, five C-130 transport planes operated by the Minnesota Air Guard out of Minneapolis arrived at the Thief River Falls regional airport with approximately 200 troops who had been activated at Duluth and more than 41,000 pounds of empty sandbags. Troops were taken by School District 564 buses to East Grand Forks for duty there. The planes came to Thief River Falls rather than Grand Forks, ND, because bridges between Grand Forks and East Grand Forks had been closed. Pictures above show the first troops to arrive deplaning, standing in ranks to receive orders and boarding one of the waiting buses.

Northland softball team splits weekend outings

Northland lost two games at Itasca Friday, but came up with two wins at Hibbing Saturday in Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division softball action.

Itasca beat Northland 20-10 and 10-2. The Pioneers swept Hibbing 25-6 and 11-3.

"Itasca has a good team," pointed out Northland coach Rick Nikunen. "We had a lot of errors, and our pitchers have to learn how to pitch against the good teams. They're young, and they have to realize you can't just throw the ball across the middle of the plate like they did in high school."

Offensively the Pioneers were okay with 40 hits in the four games.

"I knew we would be solid at the plate this year," said Nikunen. "Our success will depend on how well our pitchers develop."

The weekend split left the Pioneers with a 3-3 season record heading into their home opener Tuesday (April 22) vs. [illegible]

Prowlers fall to Lakers, Otters

Detroit Lakes and Fergus Falls handed Thief River Falls a pair of losses Saturday in a split doubleheader arrangement at Detroit Lakes that opened the Prowlers' 1997 high school baseball schedule.

The Prowlers lost to the Lakers 11-0 and fell to the Otters 6-3.

"Detroit Lakes is very good," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Charlie Cornell. "They are probably one of the better teams in the state."

The Lakers, noted Cornell, have a line-up that features most of the players from a team that placed fourth last summer in the Minnesota American Legion state tournament.

Detroit Lakes turned a 4-0 game into a 10-run rule five-inning victory with a seven-run fourth that featured two doubles and two home runs.

The Prowlers, who were weathered out of two earlier scheduled starts and were limited to preseason indoor practice drills, were charged with only two errors on the day, but struggled offensively.

"Defensively I was very satisfied," said Cornell in assessing the team's season debut. "We just didn't hit the ball at all."

A scheduled Thief River Falls Tuesday trip to Moorhead was postponed.

TRF softball opens with loss

Twice delayed 1997 high school softball season opener for the Thief River Falls girls took place Monday when the Prowlers faced Park Rapids Area and lost a 10-4 decision to the host Panthers.

Weather and field conditions forced postponement of the Prowlers' first two games against Bemidji and Lake of the Woods, and limited the team to indoor drills.

"I thought the girls played real well," said Thief River Falls coach Ken Fletcher. "It was the first time we've seen a ball diamond all year, and it was their (Panthers) fifth game. Our fielding was okay, and it looks like we're going to be able to hit the ball a lot better this year."

Stephanie Leach did the pitching for the Prowlers. Leach and Amanda Hruby were going to share the pitching load this spring, but Hruby is currently sidelined by an injury.

When not pitching, Hruby was scheduled to be the Prowlers' center fielder. Her absence prompted Fletcher to move Erica Owen from behind the plate to center field, and put Bell Lenius, a newcomer to the program, in center field.

Lisa Vettleson, pointed out Fletcher, has shown early-season promise both offensively and defensively at shortstop.

Scoring details from the Prowlers-Panthers game were not made available.

DNR Summer Jobs

Applications are now being taken for the Department of Natural Resources' Minnesota Conservation Corps (MCC) Summer Program. Seventy positions are open for youths ages 15 to 18. They will work in crews to complete conservation projects.

Youth have the opportunity to live and work together for eight weeks at the MCC residential conservation work program in St. Croix State Park. Peter Hark of the MCC said participants can expect to work hard on labor-intensive projects. These projects include trail construction, erosion control, bridge building and campsite construction. Corps members will work around the state in state parks, state and national forests, as well as other resource managed lands.

In addition to the work, the Corps members will learn about the environment and how it is managed. Corps members will take classes on career development, education planning and life skills development. On weekends, Corps members will go on canoe trips, hike, and participate in high adventure challenges like rock climbing and high ropes courses.

Corps members work 35 hours a week and earn $4.25 per hour. Applicants should enjoy working and living in an outdoor rustic environment. The camp will start June 22 and run through Aug. 16. The MCC, which hires an equal number of males and females, encourages minority youth to apply. Twenty deaf and hard-of-hearing youth, who will work with deaf staff and trained sign language interpreters, will also be hired to work.

Applications are due in the St. Paul office no later than April 30. To receive an application, contact Minnesota Conservation Corps, 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155-4004, call (612) 296-6157 in the Twin Cities metro area, or call toll free in greater Minnesota 1-800-766-6000. TTY calls can be placed to 296-5484, or toll free 1-800-657-3929.

Jim Smith Officer of the Year

A modern day lawman with old-school sensibilities has been named Minnesota's 1997 Department of Natural Resources Conservation Officer of the Year.

Jim Smith, 48, who patrols Stearns and Wright counties, received the award Feb. 6 from Col. Leo Haseman, director of the DNR Division of Enforcement. It was presented at the annual Conservation Awards Banquet in St. Paul.

"Jim is simply outstanding," said Col. Haseman. "He is a leader in the new era of environmental law enforcement. He works hard to limit the invasion of exotic species, to keep lakes and rivers as clean as they can be, and to protect the state's remaining wetlands. Yet he does this ~~by using~~ old-fashioned game warden philosophies. By straddling both worlds, he is both effective and well-respected."

Smith's DNR career began in 1970. That was the year he earned a biology degree from St. Cloud State University. While in college he was leaning toward a career in mortuary science. However, when the DNR knocked, he answered immediately. "It was a good choice," said the hunter and angler. "I've never wanted to trade my job for any other."

Smith served the Wadena area for the first five years of his career. Then, in 1975, he transferred to the Annandale area, where he had grown up.

NCTC wins four of six baseball starts

Northland played six games in three days and won four of them in a flurry of college baseball activity that took the Pioneers to Virginia, Ely and Fergus Falls.

Saturday, Northland swept Mesabi 13-12 (in eight innings) and 11-4. Sunday, the Pioneers rolled to an 11-1 doubleheader-opening win over Vermilion before giving up eight first-inning runs in the nightcap and losing 9-2.

Those games were followed by a Monday make-up twinbill at Fergus Falls, where Northland dropped an 11-1 decision in Game 1, but outscored the Spartans 18-11 in Game 2 when the close eye of the plate umpire wound up producing 26 walks.

Results put the Pioneers at 5-7 for the year. Their 1997 home debut was pushed back again when today's (Wednesday) doubleheader against Itasca was moved from Thief River Falls to Grand Rapids.

"We played pretty well," said Northland coach Terry Wiseth following the Pioneers' latest six-game stretch of games. "We had a chance to sweep the weekend games, and although we didn't get it done, it was nice to be in that position. We had one bad inning, but we played pretty good ball otherwise."

At Fergus Falls, Wiseth gave his line-up a different look in an effort to give the rest of his roster a chance to see game time. "We used some different people, and some of them came through and did a nice job for us," he said.

OUTDOOR NEWS

Boat/Water Officer of the Year

Jason Jensen might not be alive today were it not for a life jacket and a hero. Kept afloat by his life jacket, Jason was pulled from the water by another boater after an accident in which a 38-year-old family friend died.

"I'm living proof that life jackets work," said Jensen, who has pursued a career as a conservation officer during the two decades since the accident. His ordeal at the age of 7 inspired Jensen to emphasize water safety since joining the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources in 1991. That work has earned him the 1997 DNR Boat and Water Safety Conservation Officer of the Year award.

Jensen received the honor because of his enthusiasm for boat and water safety and education, according to Col. Leo Haseman, director of the DNR Enforcement Division. "Officer Jensen is a dedicated, hard-working officer who takes his responsibility of enforcing boat and water laws very seriously," Haseman said.

Jensen, who works the St. Cloud area, is also innovative, according to Kim Elverum, DNR Boat and Water Safety coordinator. "He is constantly willing to try new ideas to promote safe boating," Elverum said. "He's tried everything from helping make videos to participating in parades. Whatever it takes to get the job done, he's willing."

Indoors, outdoors, on the water, in the classroom – Jensen tackles the safety issue in many ways in every season. He combines his on-the-water enforcement work with an extensive education and information program designed to improve boating behavior and safety. In the enforcement area, he places a heavy emphasis on enforcement of personal watercraft regulations, often patrolling on the water by taking advantage of Yamaha's Personal Watercraft Loan Program. He also focuses on boating while intoxicated violations. Jensen has worked with Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) on a variety of projects that stress the appropriateness of using alcohol while operating recreational equipment, including a billboard campaign to discourage people from operating watercraft while drinking.

Educating watercraft users is another of Jensen's priorities. He has developed and instructed personal watercraft safety classes for the public, taught youth boat and water safety classes, and assisted Courage Center with a Paddle and Portage event for people with physical disabilities.

Education of other law enforcement officers is also an emphasis for Jensen, who has conducted boat and water training for new DNR conservation officer candidates. He has also developed and taught personal watercraft training sessions for county enforcement officers, and he provides annual boat and water law training sessions for county water patrols.

By working with media, Jensen has served as a safety spokesperson in daily newspapers, a cable television series, radio public service announcements, and in DNR educational videos.

Jensen, 26, trained to become a law enforcement officer at Vermilion Community College in Ely, and at the Coast Guard's Maritime Law Enforcement School in Newport News, Virginia. The six-year DNR veteran has refined those skills at the Wave Ranger School sponsored by the Personal Watercraft Industry Association, and at the DNR's Boat and Water Safety School.

Tree planting sites

At long last, patches of brown grass are beginning to emerge from crusty mountains of snow. Soon prime places to plant trees and shrubs will clear and ready.

The place may be around a house or buildings where a well-designed shelterbelt will protect from winter winds and summer heat. Or the location may be an open area where a mixed planting of trees and shrubs would provide valuable wildlife food and cover. Or it could be a place where erosion is tearing away at an exposed slope of land.

Those with such locations may contact the local Minnesota Department of Natural Resources forester for professional assistance. The foresters can help determine the "what, where and how" of tree planting. Good supplies of trees (including white pine and red oak) and shrubs are available for this spring.

For information about trees and tree planting, contact the DNR Information Center at (612) 296-6157, or call toll free in greater Minnesota 1-800-766-6000.

Fewer reports to LEC during emergency response efforts

Law enforcement officials were overburdened last week by the immense task of responding to requests for disaster assistance. However, there were other incidents that they had to respond to.

Accidents. On April 15 at 6:10 p.m. police received a report of an accident at First and Main. According to the accident report, Kenneth Miles Hanson, Gully, was driving a car south on Main, and Kelly Charles Josephson, Thief River Falls, was driving a car on First. Josephson entered the intersection on a green light and the vehicles collided. Hanson was cited for failure to stop.

On April 22 at 7:58 a.m. police received a report of an accident at Eighth and Horace. Dean Allen Forst, Thief River Falls, was driving a car east on Eighth Street and was passing vehicles facing east when a car driven west on Eighth Street by Lawrence Irvin Spong, Thief River Falls, was turning south on Horace and the vehicles collided. The Forst vehicle then collided with a van stopped in traffic and driven by Carol Marie Dahl of Newfolden. Damages were estimated at $1,500 to the Forst vehicle, $2,500 to the Dahl vehicle, and $500 to the Spong vehicle.

Assault. On April 20 at 10:02 a.m. police received a report of an assault at a local residence. David Wayne Davidson, Thief River Falls, and Mary Kay Colbert, Thief River Falls, were charged with fifth degree assault.

Thefts. On April 19 at 1 a.m. police received a report of a stolen vehicle. A handwritten note was discovered taped to the door. It said the car was being borrowed and not to worry. The car was located traveling on Third Street at 2:06 a.m. and stopped. The driver, Roy Lee Smith, 29, Thief River Falls, faces charges of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, aggravated driving while intoxicated, driving after revocation, and open bottle. Shawn Michael King, 20, Thief River Falls, faces charges of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

All people listed here are innocent until proven guilty.

Toll free number for flooding losses

A toll free application telephone number is now operational for those who suffered property damage or loss in the declared counties affected by the flooding which began March 21. The number can be used to apply for a wide range of state and federal disaster assistance.

John McKay, Federal coordinating officer, Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), and Jim Franklin, state coordinating officer, Minnesota Division of Emergency Management (DEM), said those affected by flooding may apply for assistance immediately by calling this toll-free application number 1-800-462-9029, between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. (CT) seven days a week, until further notice. Those with a speech or hearing impairment may call TTY 1-800-462-7585.

In response to a request from Governor Arne Carlson, President signed a major disaster declaration on April 8, which designated the counties of Benton, Big Stone, Brown, Chippewa, Clay, Kittson, Lac Qui Parle, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake, Roseau, Sherburne, Stearns, Swift, Traverse, Washington, Wilkin, Wright, and Yellow Medicine eligible for federal aid to help meet the recovery needs of stricken residents and business owners.

The declaration makes residents of these counties eligible for a wide range of programs such as funding for disaster housing assistance, U.S. Business Administration (SBA) low-interest loans for individuals and businesses to repair or replace damaged property, disaster unemployment assistance, and grants for serious needs and necessary expenses not met by other programs.

"Your phone call is your application for state and federal assistance available under the disaster declaration. Telephone application has proven to be the simplest, quickest and most efficient way to apply," said Franklin.

When calling to apply have the following information available: a current phone number, the address at the time of the disaster and the address where you are now staying, your Social Security number, a general list of damages and losses suffered, good directions to the property that was damaged, if insured, your insurance policy number, or the agent's and company name, general financial information.

According to McKay, individuals who have suffered damage and have unmet needs are encouraged to call the application number immediately. "Even if you don't have all the information necessary or it was lost in the flooding, don't prejudge your eligibility," he said. "It's important that all residents get the assistance they are entitled to."

Under the Presidential declaration, federal funds are being provided for the state and affected local governments in the 21 designated counties to pay 75 percent of the eligible cost for debris removal and emergency services related to the disaster, and for approved projects that reduce future disaster risks. McKay said that more counties and other assistance for state and local government agencies may be designated late based on the results of ongoing damage assessments.

Disaster Assistance Program Information

When disaster strikes, the Federal Emergency Management Agency administers a number of disaster assistance programs and coordinates the efforts of many other federal agencies that provide services to help people through the recovery process. The types of assistance that are available follow:

Disaster Housing Assistance: Housing assistance to individuals and families whose permanent homes were damaged or destroyed by the storm. Types of aid include grants for: 1) alternate rental housing; 2) emergency repairs needed to make a residence habitable; and 3) mortgage or rental assistance in cases where the disaster has caused extreme economic hardship.

Individual and Family Grant Program: Provides grants to individuals and families to meet serious disaster-related needs and necessary expenses not covered by insurance or other federal, state or voluntary agency disaster assistance programs.

Disaster Unemployment Assistance: Weekly benefits are available to those individuals out of work due to the disaster, including self-employed persons, farm owners, and others not usually covered under regular unemployment insurance.

U.S. Small Business Administration Programs

Home/Personal Property Disaster Loans: Disaster loans to homeowners and renters for restoring or replacing underinsured or uninsured disaster-damaged real and personal property. Available in declared counties.

Business Disaster Loans: Disaster loans to repair or replace destroyed or damaged business facilities, inventory, machinery, equipment, etc., not covered by insurance. These loans are available to large and small businesses in declared counties. Loans also may be available only to small businesses for working capital to assist them during the disaster recovery period. These loans are available in declared and contiguous counties.

Selection of tires is important for safety

Tires provide the only contact a vehicle has with the road surface. For that reason, AAA says that condition, quality, and proper selection of tires are vital to safe driving and vehicle control.

The pressure should be checked when tires are cold (less than three miles of driving). Remember to check the spare tire. Since heat build-up after several miles of driving will raise tire pressure, don't bleed air from a hot tire thinking you're bringing it down to a proper level. Recommended pressures refer to cold tires.

In addition to affecting vehicle control, underinflated tires wear faster. Low tires cause more flexing and allow too much heat build-up in the tire while wasting precious gasoline.

Extreme over inflation can be dangerous. Tires are more likely to be damaged by holes and objects in the roadway. Never inflate a tire beyond the stated maximum load level located on the tire sidewall.

Tires should be rotated on a regular basis according to the manufacturer's recommendations. For the longest life, tire wear should be relatively uniform, which means that proper wheel alignment and tire balancing are necessary. Uneven wear on front tires could indicate improper alignment.

When it becomes necessary to replace tires, remember that the new ones should be the same size as the original tires; both size and load capacity are important.

AAA asks you to remember that your life and your passengers' lives may depend on the tires, your vehicle's only link with the road surface. Keep them in good shape for safe driving.

Safe driver is courteous driver

Traffic violations take their toll on motorists by increasing the chance of injuries and fatalities.

According to AAA, safe driving is courteous driving. In addition to following posted speed limits, here are some other tips to enhance highway safety:

- Always buckle up. Children 12 and under should be properly secured in the back seat.
- Drive sober and be aware of the effects of medications.
- Know and obey the rules of the road.
- Maintain a safe distance from other vehicles (generally a three to four second following distance).
- Stay alert.
- Yield the right of way.
- Use turn signals.
- Anticipate traffic flow.
- Use headlights properly.
- Avoid blocking intersections.
- Control emotions.
- Respect other motorists' rights.

Common courtesy and cooperation are the key elements to safe driving. Cooperating with other motorists can enhance safety on the roadway.

Mopar CUSTOMER CARE
Thousands of individual components make up a vehicle's operating systems. With normal use, these components are subject to wear, deterioration and corrosion.
Lubricants and fluids, which are vital to keeping a vehicle running smoothly are also subject to deterioration and contamination over time.
Manufacturers recommend regular vehicle maintenance to inspect components that are particularly subject to wear and to replace the lubricants and fluids that have reached the end of their service life.
Whether it's called vehicle maintenance or preventative maintenance, a key purpose is to maintain a vehicle's performance. Contributing to longer life, a better driving economy and more reliable operation is also integral.
Maintenance also prevents small problems from becoming bigger ones and ensures the vehicle is as safe as possible and conforms with safety and emissions laws and regulations.

Preventive maintenance proves wise investment

To save time, money, and frustration, AAA recommends that motorists follow a preventive maintenance program for their motor vehicles.

A qualified technician should inspect the electrical and ignition systems, fuel management systems, timing, and emission control devices. A tune-up and diagnostic check will help pay for itself by boosting fuel economy.

If the vehicle's cooling system was not flushed last year, now is the time to have it done. After the system has been flushed it should be filled with the proper solution of engine coolant and water (usually about 50 - 50).

Replace belts at least every four years. Check hoses and clamps for leakage. Leaks are more likely to be detected when the engine is warm. Replace hoses when they become brittle, soft, or worn.

The vehicle's muffler and catalytic converter should be examined for holes, splits, and rusted seams. The exhaust pipe should be checked for dents that might impede the flow of gases, or holes that could allow carbon monoxide to enter the passenger compartment.

The battery should be tested for charge level and condition. Cables and terminals must be clean and free of corrosion. A mixture of baking soda and water makes a good cleaning solution. Replace cables if corrosion and wear are extreme.

Lubricating oil, oil filter, and air filter should match the manufacturer's recommendations.

The owner's manual will provide instructions on how to check the vehicle's automatic transmission, brake, and power steering fluid levels. Follow the recommendations for addition to or replacement of these fluids.

Run the heater, defroster, and air conditioner through all available settings. If the air flow and/or temperature is not adequate, have the thermostat, fan, and air conditioner unit checked.

Inspect all lights, switches, and lenses and replace if necessary. With warmer temperatures, protect the exterior of the vehicle with a quality product to shield it from wet and hot conditions.

Other major vehicle systems which should be inspected include brakes, suspension system, and wheel alignment.

Preventive maintenance makes summer driving more enjoyable and reduces the chances of a vehicle breakdown.

Wet weather adds hazards for drivers

Wet weather conditions can contribute to fatal accidents. However, many drivers fail to slow down or use extra caution in the rain.

Large puddles on the roadway often hide potholes and objects in the road. It is important for drivers to slow down before driving through puddles. Aside from the hidden dangers, the underside of a vehicle could be soaked. Water can damage wiring and other vital parts and may cause the vehicle to stall. Commonly, wet brake linings result in uneven braking or decreased stopping power.

Hydroplaning occurs when a thin film of water builds up between the tires and the road surface. This water film reduces the traction between tires and the road. This can cause uncontrollable and unpredictable skids. A hydroplaning skid causes a loss of traction which greatly reduces the steering and braking control under normal driving conditions.

AAA advises that the best way to prevent hydroplaning is to reduce driving speed. Tires which are in good condition and properly inflated will also help to prevent this dangerous condition. If tires are not properly inflated, the treads will squeeze together forming a pocket in the center of the tire area and force water to flow between the tire and the road surface.

As days get warmer, less thought is given to snow and ice. However, rain, snow or ice that has melted during the day may freeze again at night in early spring. Drivers must be alert for shaded areas especially in the early morning and late afternoon.

Fog can quickly appear and linger. Remember, reduce speeds in foggy areas and turn lights on low beams. If high beams are used, the light is reflected back into the driver's eyes causing a severe glare. Drivers must keep their eyes and ears open during fog conditions to sense approaching danger.

Proper care and replacement of windshield wipers, with an ample supply of washer fluid, will also assist drivers with a clean view of the road during wet driving conditions.

In all weather, a safe driver wears a safety belt and insists that all passengers are properly secured.

Vehicle security suggestions

Crimes affecting one's personal safety and security can occur during the day and night. To reduce the risk of personal harm, AAA offers these tips.

Preventive maintenance is the key to avoiding a roadside breakdown. Periodic mechanical checkups are necessary to maintain your vehicle's proper working condition. Keeping the gas tank at least half full at all times is another way to prevent an unnecessary breakdown.

Crimes affecting motorists' personal safety and security can occur when getting to and from your car. When approaching your vehicle, hold your keys in your hand while taking an inventory of your surroundings. If you notice someone near your vehicle, walk toward a public place and seek help. Remember, try to park in a central well-lighted place.

If your vehicle breaks down on the highway, position the vehicle as far from the traveled roadway as possible. To signal distress, post a "Send Help" sign, turn on your four-way flashers, open the vehicle's hood and tie a light-colored cloth to the antenna or door handle. Always try to stay with the vehicle until uniformed law enforcement arrives. Do not leave your vehicle at night or during bad weather.

Always remember your personal safety. If you see another motorist who is stranded, do not stop. Instead, signal your intent that you will call for help; then notify law enforcement. Motorists are often leery of those offering assistance.

Carjackings occur when an individual attempts to steal a car which is occupied. These instances often occur at gunpoint. To avoid being a victim of carjackings, lock all doors and keep windows rolled up. Use freeways rather than streets through high-crime areas. When stopping for gas or to use a pay phone, choose well-lighted, busy facilities. If someone tries to enter your vehicle at a red light, drive through the intersection. Above all, if there is no escape, do not resist.

For your safety consider joining a car pool. Plan your travel routes and let others know your route and estimated time of arrival. If you expect to be traveling at odd hours or "off the beaten path," you might consider a citizen's band radio or cellular phone for summoning help if needed.

Maintenance and driving affect car's fuel efficiency

Drivers know they have little control over fuel supplies and prices. However, according to AAA, motorists can make a big difference in how quickly their tanks run out of fuel — and their pocketbooks out of cash.

First, the vehicle. Master the art of fuel-efficient driving by properly maintaining the vehicle. To ensure the best fuel economy, AAA advises motorists to follow the maintenance schedule in the vehicle owner's manual.

Second, practice fuel-efficient driving techniques. Whether vacationing or making the daily trip to work, travel planning can save you time, reduce driver stress, and conserve fuel.

Choose driving routes that bypass heavily congested areas. Less-traveled routes may be a few miles out of the way. By avoiding traffic and traveling at more constant speeds, you will save fuel and probably reduce stress.

Avoid rush hour driving. While on vacation, be considerate of those driving to work. Plan sightseeing excursions during non-peak traffic times. If commuting, consider leaving a little earlier or delay your departure from work. Another alternative is to consider flexible or staggered work shifts.

Follow these simple tips to increase your car's fuel efficiency and make driving safer and more enjoyable.

Observe the speed limit and try to maintain steady speeds. Driving too fast wastes fuel and can create traffic hazards. Also, driving too slow can be hazardous and frustrating to other drivers.

Northland theatre to present comedy, "Fools"

Come join the "Fools" this spring at Northland Community and Technical College. Have the faculty gone mad? Are the students in revolt? No! It's NCTC's spring play, the uproarious "Fools" by Neil Simon. The production runs Thursday through Saturday, April 24-26 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, April 27, at 2 p.m. Due to the recent disaster, admission to the show will be free of charge.

Leon Tolchinsky is ecstatic. He's landed a terrific job as a school teacher in the idyllic Russian hamlet of Kulyenchikov. But when he arrives he finds people sweeping dust from the street back into their houses, and people who think if you milk a cow upside down you get more cream. Kulyenchikov, it seems, has been cursed with stupidity for 200 years, and the desperate townspeople have hired Leon hoping he can break the curse. But they don't tell him if he stays more than 24 hours and fails to break the curse he also becomes stupid. It seems, pardon the expression, a no-brainer: Leon should leave! Alas, he's fallen in love with the beautiful daughter of the town doctor. She's a little slow — she's only recently learned how to sit down. Will Leon be able to break the curse? Will he win the love of the beautiful Sophia? And will the townspeople ever learn to speak rabbit? For the answers to these and other profound questions, including "What is the meaning of life", join us for this high-spirited and mirthful production.

CBS-TV called the Broadway premier of "Fools" the "brightest, freshest, funniest, wittiest, warmest and happiest to do on Broadway in many a day."

Simon is the acclaimed playwright of such favorites as "The Odd Couple", "Barefoot in the Park", "Brighton Beach Memoirs", and "Plaza Suite". His off-hand comic tone and lightning-paced humor in this tale reveal "a new and slightly different comic facet: a bent for fairy-tale farce, provincial puerility, and rustic morality plays." (The Christian Science Monitor)

Cast members include Ben Schmitz, David Swanson and Tim McAnnany of Thief River Falls, Roxanne Zavoral of St. Hilaire, Rachel Larson of Newfolden, Tara C. Sugden of Hallock, Darla Jean Amberg of Mahnomen, Jon Riesinger of Bloomington, Adria Olson of Edmore, ND, and Melvin Whitney Jr. of Chicago, IL. Working hard on the scenery, lights, and gorgeous period costumes are Kristin Kukelis, Jon Riesinger, Kathy Olson, Lauren [illegible] and Ryan [illegible]. The play is directed and designed by Janet Haak Amness.

Tickets for this production can be reserved by calling NCTC at 681-0718. Join us for this happy, romantic, springtime comedy.

TRF waterways bill that calls for dredging passes in committee

Legislation introduced by State Representative Tim Finseth, to clean and dredge a pair of rivers in Thief River Falls was approved by a House Committee last week.

The Finseth bill would provide funding to clean and dredge the Thief Lake River and the Red Lake River in Thief River Falls. It passed through the House Environment and Natural Resources Committee and will be incorporated into the Omnibus Environment and Natural Resources Finance Bill.

"I am pleased the committee stamped its approval on this important legislation," said Finseth. "The cleaning and dredging of the rivers will improve water quality in Thief River Falls and aid the use of the rivers for recreation and enjoyment.

"It will also help protect the dam from problems related to sedimentation." The legislation would provide $500,000 in matching funds for the project. The city and watershed district will come up with the remainder of the funding.

The river is currently 20 percent plugged with sedimentation. The clogging is causing problems with the quality of the city drinking water and recreation uses on the rivers.

MPCA offers some flood cleanup recommendations

Once flood waters start to recede and cleanup begins in Red River Basin communities, the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) offers some recommendations to consider. If you are beginning cleanup in your home, please consider the following:

- Oil Cleanup — If you discover oil floating in your basement, please notify your local city officials for information on how to obtain sorbent pads to soak up the oil. These pads only soak up oil, and are designed to repel water. When conditions allow you to pump flood water out of your basement, pump down to a level that allows you to lay sorbent pads on the surface to soak up the oil, but does not allow the oil to come into contact with the basement floor. As the pads turn pink, flip them over. A broom handle, rake or pitch fork will work well for flipping pads. Please wear rubber gloves during cleanup. Change the pads as they get saturated. All soaked pads should be placed in garbage bags, tied or sealed closed, and brought to a city-designated area for future disposal.
- Contaminated (oil or sewage soaked) debris — Any personal belongings, carpeting and/or construction materials that have been soaked with oil, and are not salvageable, will have to be hauled to a transfer facility, incinerator or a sanitary landfill. Check with your local facility before hauling your debris.

These materials cannot be hauled to a demolition landfill. If you have questions, contact your local solid waste coordinator.

- Fuel oil tanks — Check with your supplier to determine if you have water present in your fuel oil tank, and for pumping fuel oil/water mixtures out of your tank.
- Household chemicals — Keep all damaged household chemicals separate for later disposal. Place them in plastic bags and keep the product label with each bag. Call your County Solid Waste officer for collection dates. Also, remember to store chemicals out of reach of children and pets.
- Basement cleaning — Ventilate your basement before and during cleaning with chemical solutions, and if oil is present. When basements flood, there is usually some sewer backup as well. Therefore, after the water and/or sewage has been removed, it is important to disinfect the surfaces to eliminate odors and bacteria. If your basement had oil spilled in it, use a detergent to clean oil off the surfaces. Sheetrock and paneling should be removed and property disposed of a transfer facility, incinerator or sanitary landfill. Concrete walls, wood supports, ceiling structures, and beams will soak up oil like a sponge. Therefore, those surfaces will need to be sealed with an epoxy paint sealer once they have dried out.

For questions on post-flood cleanup activities, please call the MPCA's Northwest Regional Office in Detroit Lakes, at 218-847-1519 or toll-free at 1-800-657-3864.

MPCA honors companies for excellence

Polaris Industries in Roseau was one of 19 businesses honored recently by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) for their hazardous waste management skills. The awards ceremony was part of the Seventh Annual Hazardous Waste Conference in Bloomington March 13 and 14.

Polaris Industries was recognized for their outstanding efforts and timeliness in achieving or returning to compliance.

The MPCA created this annual recognition program to encourage Minnesota's hazardous waste generators (companies, institutions and government offices that produce hazardous waste) and treatment facilities to comply with the hazardous waste rules.

Only those Minnesota generators and facilities that were inspected by the MPCA's Hazardous Waste Division in 1996 were eligible for this year's awards.

Dear Parent,

Once again, we are nearing the end of the school year. In the coming weeks your son or daughter may be joining others in Prom Night Celebrations. This is an exciting time for young people on this very special occasion.

It's also an exciting time for you as parents. You have watched your child grow over the years both physically and emotionally. There were times when you wondered if you could survive their growing up, and now that Prom Night is at hand, and celebration plans are underway, the question is, "Can we all survive it?"

If you are planning to host a party AT YOUR HOME OR OTHER LOCATION SUCH AS A HOTEL OR MOTEL, carefully consider your responsibilities in doing so. Please remember that SELLING, FURNISHING OR SERVING ALCOHOL to minors is a criminal offense in Minnesota. It is a gross misdemeanor which can result in up to one year in jail and up to a $1,000 fine. In addition, any adult who knowingly provides alcoholic beverages to a minor can be exposed to personal liability for injuries that result from that minor's intoxication.

The combination of drinking and driving is one of the leading killers of young people between the ages of 15 and 24. Last year, several young people under the age of 21 in our state alone, died or were seriously injured in alcohol-related traffic crashes.

This is one of the most memorable occasions for your son or daughter. Teach them to celebrate SMART!!! Please read the information below to further answer any questions you may have about minors and alcohol. Make sure your Prom Celebrations for minors are chemical free.

Sincerely,

Gerald E. Moe &

Preventive maintenance proves wise investment

To save time, money, and frustration, AAA recommends that motorists follow a preventive maintenance program for their motor vehicles.

A qualified technician should inspect the electrical and ignition systems, fuel management systems, timing, and emission control devices. A tune-up and diagnostic check will help pay for itself by boosting fuel economy.

If the vehicle's cooling system was not flushed last year, now is the time to have it done. After the system has been flushed it should be filled with the proper solution of engine coolant and water (usually about 50 - 50).

Replace belts at least every four years. Check hoses and clamps for leakage. Leaks are more likely to be detected when the engine is warm. Replace hoses when they become brittle, soft, or worn.

The vehicle's muffler and catalytic converter should be examined for holes, splits, and rusted seams. The exhaust pipe should be checked for dents that might impede the flow of gases, or holes that could allow carbon monoxide to enter the passenger compartment.

The battery should be tested for charge level and condition. Cables and terminals must be clean and free of corrosion. A mixture of baking soda and water makes a good cleaning solution. Replace cables if corrosion and wear are extreme.

Lubricating oil, oil filter, and air filter should match the manufacturer's recommendations.

The owner's manual will provide instructions on how to check the vehicle's automatic transmission, brake, and power steering fluid levels. Follow the recommendations for addition to or replacement of these fluids.

Run the heater, defroster, and air conditioner through all available settings. If the air flow and/or temperature is not adequate, have the thermostat, fan, and air conditioner unit checked.

Inspect all lights, switches, and lenses and replace if necessary. With warmer temperatures, protect the exterior of the vehicle with a quality product to shield it from wet and hot conditions.

Other major vehicle systems which should be inspected include brakes, suspension system, and wheel alignment.

Preventive maintenance makes summer driving more enjoyable and reduces the chances of a vehicle breakdown.

Wet weather adds hazards for drivers

Wet weather conditions can contribute to fatal accidents. However, many drivers fail to slow down or use extra caution in the rain.

Large puddles on the roadway often hide potholes and objects in the road. It is important for drivers to slow down before driving through puddles. Aside from the hidden dangers, the underside of a vehicle could be soaked. Water can damage wiring and other vital parts and may cause the vehicle to stall. Commonly, wet brake linings result in uneven braking or decreased stopping power.

Hydroplaning occurs when a thin film of water builds up between the tires and the road surface. This water film reduces the traction between tires and the road. This can cause uncontrollable and unpredictable skids. A hydroplaning skid causes a loss of traction which greatly reduces the steering and braking control under normal driving conditions.

AAA advises that the best way to prevent hydroplaning is to reduce driving speed. Tires which are in good condition and properly inflated will also help to prevent this dangerous condition. If tires are not properly inflated, the treads will squeeze together forming a pocket in the center of the tire area and force water to flow between the tire and the road surface.

As days get warmer, less thought is given to snow and ice. However, rain, snow or ice that has melted during the day may freeze again at night in early spring. Drivers must be alert for shaded areas especially in the early morning and late afternoon.

Fog can quickly appear and linger. Remember, reduce speeds in foggy areas and turn lights on low beams. If high beams are used, the light is reflected back into the driver's eyes causing a severe glare. Drivers must keep their eyes and ears open during fog conditions to sense approaching danger.

Proper care and replacement of windshield wipers, with an ample supply of washer fluid, will also assist drivers with a clean view of the road during wet driving conditions.

In all weather, a safe driver wears a safety belt and insists that all passengers are properly secured.

Vehicle security suggestions

Crimes affecting one's personal safety and security can occur during the day and night. To reduce the risk of personal harm, AAA offers these tips.

Preventive maintenance is the key to avoiding a roadside breakdown. Periodic mechanical checkups are necessary to maintain your vehicle's proper working condition. Keeping the gas tank at least half full at all times is another way to prevent an unnecessary breakdown.

Crimes affecting motorists' personal safety and security can occur when getting to and from your car. When approaching your vehicle, hold your keys in your hand while taking an inventory of your surroundings. If you notice someone near your vehicle, walk toward a public place and seek help. Remember, try to park in a central well-lighted place.

If your vehicle breaks down on the highway, position the vehicle as far from the traveled roadway as possible. To signal distress, post a "Send Help" sign, turn on your four-way flashers, open the vehicle's hood and tie a light-colored cloth to the antenna or door handle. Always try to stay with the vehicle until uniformed law enforcement arrives. Do not leave your vehicle at night or during bad weather.

Always remember your personal safety. If you see another motorist who is stranded, do not stop. Instead, signal your intent that you will call for help, then notify law enforcement. Motorists are often leery of those offering assistance.

Carjackings occur when an individual attempts to steal a car which is occupied. These instances often occur at gunpoint. To avoid being a victim of carjackings, lock all doors and keep windows rolled up. Use freeways rather than streets through high crime areas. When stopping for gas or to use a pay phone, choose well-lighted, busy facilities. If someone tries to enter your vehicle at a red light, drive through the intersection. Above all, if there is no escape, do not resist.

For your safety consider joining a car pool. Plan your travel routes and let others know your route and estimated time of arrival. If you expect to be traveling at odd hours or "off the beaten path," you might consider a citizen's band radio or cellular phone for summoning help if needed.

Maintenance and driving affect car's fuel efficiency

Drivers know they have little control over fuel supplies and prices. However, according to AAA, motorists can make a big difference in how quickly their tanks run out of fuel — and their pocketbooks out of cash.

First, the vehicle. Master the art of fuel-efficient driving by properly maintaining the vehicle. To ensure the best fuel economy, AAA advises motorists to follow the maintenance schedule in the vehicle owner's manual.

Second, practice fuel-efficient driving techniques. Whether vacationing or making the daily trip to work, travel planning can save you time, reduce driver stress, and conserve fuel.

Choose driving routes that bypass heavily congested areas. Less-traveled routes may be a few miles out of the way. By avoiding traffic and traveling at more constant speeds, you will save fuel and probably reduce stress.

Avoid rush hour driving. While on vacation, be considerate of those driving to work. Plan sightseeing excursions during non-peak traffic times. If commuting, consider leaving a little earlier or delay your departure from work. Another alternative is to consider flexible or staggered work shifts.

Follow these simple tips to increase your car's fuel efficiency and make driving safer and more enjoyable.

Observe the speed limit and try to maintain steady speeds. Driving too fast wastes fuel and can create traffic hazards. Also, driving too slow can be hazardous and frustrating to other drivers.

Northland theatre to present comedy, "Fools"

Come join the "Fools" this spring at Northland Community and Technical College. Have the faculty gone mad? Are the students in revolt? No! It's NCTC's spring play, the uproarious "Fools" by Neil Simon. The production runs Thursday through Saturday April 24-26 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, April 27, at 2 p.m. Due to the recent disaster, admission to the show will be free of charge.

Leon Tolchinsky is ecstatic. He's landed a terrific job as a school teacher in the idyllic Russian hamlet of Kulyenchikov. But when he arrives he finds people sweeping dust from the street back into their houses and people who think if you milk a cow upside down you get more cream. Kulyenchikov, it seems, has been cursed with stupidity for 200 years, and the desperate townspeople have hired Leon hoping he can break the curse. But they don't tell him if he stays more than 24 hours and fails to break the curse he also becomes stupid. It seems, pardon the expression, a no-brainer. Leon should leave! Alas, he's fallen in love with the beautiful daughter of the town doctor. She's a little slow — she's only recently learned how to sit down. Will Leon be able to break the curse? Will he win the love of the beautiful Sophia? And will the townspeople ever learn to speak [illegible]? For the answers to these and other profound questions, including "What is the meaning of life", join us for this high spirited and mirthful production.

CBS-TV called the Broadway premiere of "Fools" the "brightest, freshest, funniest, wittiest, warmest and happiest to do on Broadway in many a day."

Simon is the acclaimed playwright of such favorites as "The Odd Couple", "Barefoot in the Park", "Brighton Beach Memoirs", and "Plaza Suite." His deft-hand comic tone and lightning paced humor in this tale reveal "a new and slightly different comic facet: a bent for fairy tale farce, [illegible] poetics, and rustic moralists play." (The Christian Science Monitor)

Cast members include Ben Schmitz, David Swenson and Tim McAnnany of Thief River Falls; Roxanne Zavoral of St. Hilaire; Rachel Larson of Newfolden; Tara C. Sugden of Hallock; Darla Jean Ambarg of Mahnomen; Jon Riesinger of Bloomington; Adria Olson of Edmore, ND; and Melvin Whitney Jr. of Chicago, IL. Working hard on the scenery, lights, and [illegible] period costumes are Kristin Kirkeby, Jon Riesinger, Ruby Olson, Lauren [illegible] and Ryan Rantanen. The play is directed and designed by Janet [illegible] Varness.

Tickets for this production can be reserved by calling NCTC at 681-[illegible]. Join us for this happy, romantic, uproarious comedy.

TRF waterways bill that calls for dredging passes in committee

Legislation introduced by State Representative Tim Finseth, to clean and dredge a pair of rivers in Thief River Falls was approved by a House Committee last week.

The Finseth bill would provide funding to clean and dredge the Thief Lake River and the Red Lake River in Thief River Falls. It passed through the House Environment and Natural Resources Committee and will be incorporated into the Omnibus Environment and Natural Resources Finance Bill.

"I am pleased the committee stamped its approval on this important legislation," said Finseth. "The cleaning and dredging of the rivers will improve water quality in Thief River Falls and aid the use of the rivers for recreation and enjoyment.

"It will also help protect the dam from problems related to sedimentation." The legislation would provide $500,000 in matching funds for the project. The city and watershed district will come up with the remainder of the funding.

The river is currently 20 percent plugged with sedimentation. The clogging is causing problems with the quality of the city drinking water and recreation uses on the rivers.

MPCA offers some flood cleanup recommendations

Once flood waters start to recede and cleanup begins in Red River Basin communities, the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) offers some recommendations to consider. If you are beginning cleanup in your home, please consider the following:

• Oil Cleanup — If you discover oil floating in your basement, please notify your local city officials for information on how to obtain sorbent pads to soak up the oil. These pads only soak up oil, and are designed to repel water. When conditions allow you to pump flood water out of your basement, pump down to a level that allows you to lay sorbent pads on the surface to soak up the oil, but does not allow the oil to come into contact with the basement floor. As the pads turn pink, flip them over. A broom handle, rake or pitch fork will work well for flipping pads. Please wear rubber gloves during cleanup. Change the pads as they get saturated. All soaked pads should be placed in garbage bags, tied or sealed closed, and brought to a city-designated area for future disposal.

• Contaminated (oil or sewage soaked) debris — Any personal belongings, carpeting and/or construction materials that have been soaked with oil, and are not salvageable, will have to be hauled to a transfer facility, incinerator or a sanitary landfill. Check with your local facility before hauling your debris. These materials cannot be hauled to a demolition landfill. If you have questions, contact your local solid waste coordinator.

• Fuel oil tanks — Check with your supplier to determine if you have water present in your fuel oil tank, and for pumping fuel oil/water mixtures out of your tank.

• Household chemicals — Keep all damaged household chemicals separate for later disposal. Place them in plastic bags and keep the product label with each bag. Call your County Solid Waste officer for collection dates. Also, remember to store chemicals out of reach of children and pets.

• Basement cleaning — Ventilate your basement before and during cleaning with chemical solutions, and if oil is present. When basements flood, there is usually some sewer backup as well. Therefore, after the water and/or sewage has been removed, it is important to disinfect the surfaces to eliminate odors and bacteria. If your basement had oil spilled in it, use a detergent to clean oil off the surfaces. Sheetrock and paneling should be removed and property disposed at a transfer facility, incinerator or sanitary landfill. Concrete walls, wood supports, ceiling structures, and beams will soak up oil like a sponge. Therefore, those surfaces will need to be sealed with an epoxy paint sealer once they have dried out.

For questions on post flood cleanup activities, please call the MPCA's Northwest Regional Office in Detroit Lakes, at 218-847-1519 or toll-free at 1-800-657-3864.

MPCA honors companies for excellence

Polaris Industries in Roseau was one of 19 businesses honored recently by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) for their hazardous waste management skills. The awards ceremony was part of the Seventh Annual Hazardous Waste Conference in Bloomington March 13 and 14.

Polaris Industries was recognized for their outstanding efforts and timeliness in achieving or returning to compliance.

The MPCA created this annual recognition program to encourage Minnesota's hazardous waste generators (companies, institutions and government offices that produce hazardous waste) and treatment facilities to comply with the hazardous waste rules.

Only those Minnesota generators and facilities that were inspected by the MPCA's Hazardous Waste Division in 1996 were eligible for this year's awards.

Have A Safe & Happy Prom!

1 WHAT IS CONTRIBUTING TO THE DELINQUENCY OF A MINOR? It is a misdemeanor for any person to in any way encourage, cause or contribute to the delinquency or deprivation of any minor (Minnesota Statute 260.315). Providing alcohol or drugs would be construed as contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

2 WHAT ARE THE LEGAL CONSEQUENCES FOR CONTRIBUTING TO THE DELINQUENCY OF A MINOR? There are both criminal and civil legal consequences that can result from contributing to the delinquency of a minor by providing the minor with alcohol or other drugs.

3. WHAT ARE THE CRIMINAL LEGAL CONSEQUENCES? Contributing is considered a misdemeanor which carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail, $700 fine, or both.

4 WHAT ARE THE CIVIL LEGAL CONSEQUENCES? A lawsuit could be filed against the adult who provided the alcohol or drugs if any injury should occur. An example would be a minor who acquires the alcohol in your house and then injures or kills someone else in a car accident. The resulting civil lawsuit could be for damages limited only by the mood of the jury.

5 WHAT IS THE DRAM SHOP LAW? The law was enacted to make liable any person who knowingly supplies alcoholic beverages to anyone under 21 or to an intoxicated person. The law applies to individuals and businesses.

6. WHAT IS SOCIAL HOST LIABILITY? Social host liability is an extension of the Dram Shop Law which stipulates that a person serving or supplying alcohol to a minor is liable for damages in a civil lawsuit. In one lawsuit, a neighbor who served as bartender for a graduation party was held liable in addition to the parent.

7. CAN PARENTS OR SOCIAL HOSTS FACE CRIMINAL CHARGES? Yes, any adult who supplies a minor with alcohol could face charges of contributing which carries a maximum fine of $700, 90 days in jail, or both.

8 WHAT ARE THE PENALTIES FOR BEVERAGE DEALERS FOR PROVIDING ALCOHOL TO MINORS? Beverage dealers could have their license suspended or revoked. The person making the sale would face criminal charges for contributing to the delinquency of a minor. If damages or injuries result from the sale, the dealer could be named in any lawsuit.

9 ARE THERE LIMITS TO THE AMOUNT OF PERSONAL LIABILITY IN A CIVIL LAWSUIT? The jury could award any amount of damages in a lawsuit. A persuasive lawyer and a case which creates a sympathetic jury could produce awards in the million dollar plus range. Personal assets may not be protected from this judgement.

10 DOES YOUR HOMEOWNERS INSURANCE COVER LIABILITY WHEN ALCOHOL IS INVOLVED? Homeowners' insurance is intended to cover those incidents for which the results were not foreseen or intended. A violation of the law, such as providing alcohol to minors, could eliminate any responsibility on the part of the insurance company.

11 COULD PARENTS BE HELD LIABLE IF THEIR MINOR CHILD CONSUMED ALCOHOL OBTAINED FROM THEIR HOME? The parents could be liable in a civil lawsuit. If the parents knowingly and willingly provide the alcohol to the minor, the outcome of the lawsuit would be very predictable. If the parents did not have a locked liquor cabinet and the alcohol was accessible to the minor, the parents probably would be held liable even if it was consumed without their knowledge. The parents could also be liable if their minor child provides alcohol to another minor even if they have no knowledge that this was done. Alcohol is a controlled substance and parents need to ensure that this is not readily accessible to minors.

12 COULD PARENTS BE HELD LIABLE IF THEY RENT A MOTEL ROOM FOR THEIR MINOR CHILD AND ALCOHOL IS CONSUMED THERE? The parents could be held liable even though they did not know alcohol was being consumed. There is no limit to the amount of damages that could be recovered in a civil lawsuit if some injury should occur in which the minor was at fault.

13. WHAT RESOURCES ARE AVAILABLE FOR MINORS IN NEED OF HELP WITH ALCOHOL/DRUG PROBLEMS? There are several local agencies that can provide services or direct you to the appropriate agency. Contact any of the following: School personnel, [illegible] addiction counselors, [illegible] program office, Treatment Centers, [illegible] personnel, and Law Enforcement.

AAA advises that the best way to prevent hydroplaning is to reduce driving speed. Tires which are in good condition and properly inflated will also help to prevent this dangerous condition. If tires are not properly inflated, the treads will squeeze together forming a pocket in the center of the tire area and force water to flow between the tire and the road surface.

As days get warmer, less thought is given to snow and ice. However, rain, snow or ice that has melted during the day may freeze again at night in early spring. Drivers must be alert for shaded areas especially in the early morning and late afternoon.

Fog can quickly appear and linger. Remember, reduce speeds in foggy areas and turn lights on low beams. If high beams are used, the light is reflected back into the driver's eyes causing a severe glare. Drivers must keep their eyes and ears open during fog conditions to sense approaching danger.

Proper care and replacement of windshield wipers, with an ample supply of washer fluid, will also assist drivers with a clear view of the road during wet driving conditions.

In all weather, a safe driver wears a safety belt and insists that all passengers are properly secured.

Vehicle security suggestions

Crimes affecting one's personal safety and security can occur during the day and night. To reduce the risk of personal harm, AAA offers these tips.

Preventive maintenance is the key to avoiding a roadside breakdown. Periodic mechanical checkups are necessary to maintain your vehicle's proper working condition. Keeping the gas tank at least half full at all times is another way to prevent an unnecessary breakdown.

Crimes affecting motorists' personal safety and security can occur when getting to and from your car. When approaching your vehicle, hold your keys in your hand while taking an inventory of your surroundings. If you notice someone near your vehicle, walk toward a public place and seek help. Remember, try to park in a central well-lighted place.

If your vehicle breaks down on the highway, position the vehicle as far from the traveled roadway as possible. To signal distress, post a "Send Help" sign, turn on your four-way flashers, open the vehicle's hood and tie a light-colored cloth to the antenna or door handle. Always try to stay with the vehicle until uniformed law enforcement arrives. Do not leave your vehicle at night or during bad weather.

Always remember your personal safety. If you see another motorist who is stranded, do not stop. Instead, signal your intent that you will call for help, then notify law enforcement. Motorists are often leery of those offering assistance.

Carjackings occur when an individual attempts to steal a car which is occupied. These instances often occur at gunpoint. To avoid being a victim of carjackings, lock all doors and keep windows rolled up. Use freeways rather than streets through high crime areas. When stopping for gas or to use a pay phone, choose well-lighted, busy facilities. If someone tries to enter your vehicle at a red light, drive through the intersection. Above all, if there is no escape, do not resist.

For your safety consider joining a car pool. Plan your travel routes and let others know your route and estimated time of arrival. If you expect to be traveling at odd hours or "off the beaten path," you might consider a citizen's band radio or cellular phone for summoning help if needed.

Maintenance and driving affect car's fuel efficiency

Drivers know they have little control over fuel supplies and prices. However, according to AAA, motorists can make a big difference in how quickly their tanks run out of fuel — and their pocketbooks out of cash.

First, the vehicle. Master the art of fuel-efficient driving by properly maintaining the vehicle. To ensure the best fuel economy, AAA advises motorists to follow the maintenance schedule in the vehicle owner's manual.

Second, practice fuel-efficient driving techniques. Whether vacationing or making the daily trip to work, travel planning can save you time, reduce driver stress, and conserve fuel.

Choose driving routes that bypass heavily congested areas. Less-traveled routes may be a few miles out of the way. By avoiding traffic and traveling at more constant speeds, you will save fuel and probably reduce stress.

Avoid rush hour driving. While on vacation, be considerate of those driving to work. Plan sightseeing excursions during non-peak traffic times. If commuting, consider leaving a little earlier or delay your departure from work. Another alternative is to consider flexible or staggered work shifts.

Follow these simple tips to increase your car's fuel efficiency and make driving safer and more enjoyable.

Observe the speed limit and try to maintain steady speeds. Driving too fast wastes fuel and can create traffic hazards. Also, driving too slow can be hazardous and frustrating to other drivers.

Northland theatre to present comedy, "Fools"

TRF waterways bill that calls for dredging passes in committee

Legislation introduced by State Representative Tim Finseth, to clean and dredge a pair of rivers in Thief River Falls was approved by a House Committee last week.

The Finseth bill would provide funding to clean and dredge the Thief Lake River and the Red Lake River in Thief River Falls. It passed through the House Environment and Natural Resources Committee and will be incorporated into the Omnibus Environment and Natural Resources Finance Bill.

"I am pleased the committee stamped its approval on this important legislation," said Finseth. "The cleaning and dredging of the rivers will improve water quality in Thief River Falls and aid the use of the rivers for recreation and enjoyment.

"It will also help protect the dam from problems related to sedimentation." The legislation would provide $800,000 in matching funds for the project. The city and watershed district will come up with the remainder of the funding.

The river is currently 20 percent plugged with sediment [illegible] The clogging is causing problems with the quality of the city drinking water and recreation uses on the rivers.

MPCA offers some flood cleanup recommendations

Once flood waters start to recede and cleanup begins in Red River Basin communities, the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) offers some recommendations to consider. If you are beginning cleanup in your home, please consider the following:

- Oil Cleanup. If you discover oil floating in your basement, please notify your local city officials for information on how to obtain sorbent pads to soak up the oil. These pads only soak up oil, and are designed to repel water. When conditions allow you to pump flood water out of your basement, pump down to a level that allows you to lay sorbent pads on the surface to soak up the oil but does not allow the oil to come into contact with the basement floor. As the pads turn pink, flip them over. A broom handle, rake or pitch fork will work well for flipping pads. Please wear rubber gloves during cleanup. Change the pads as they get saturated. All soaked pads should be placed in garbage bags, tied or sealed closed, and brought to a site designated area for future disposal.
- Contaminated (oil or sewage soaked) debris. Any personal belongings, carpeting and/or construction materials that have been soaked with oil, and are not salvageable will have to be hauled to a transfer facility, incinerator or sanitary landfill. Check with your local facility before hauling your debris. These materials cannot be landfilled to a demolition landfill. If you have questions contact your local solid waste coordinator.
